City Flights Reduced As Air Strike Nears

Hands-Off Policy

(Times News Services)

MONTREAL — Labor Minister Bryce Mackasey cut short his visit to Spain and returned here but denied his quick return had anything to do with possible government action to halt the strike against Air Canada.

In a brief statement here, Mr. Mackasey said the dispute between the airline and the International Association of Machinists does not warrant "any intervention on my part immediately."

The 6,300 Air Canada members of the union are voting on the latest offer by Air Canada of a 23-per-cent increase in wages over three years.

The union has asked for a 20-per-cent increase in one year.

The result of the vote is expected at about 7 o'clock tonight.

The post office has said it will use regional air carriers if necessary to move the mail.

Walkout Set Sunday Night

By PETE LOUDON

The last flight by Air Canada to Vancouver for the duration of an impending strike is due to leave Victoria at 6:55 p.m. Sunday.

Failing a last-minute settlement of a dispute between the government-owned airline and 6,300 members of the International Association of Machinists and Air Space Workers, the airline will be grounded Sunday at 9 p.m. PST (midnight, Montreal time).

The last scheduled flight to Victoria from Vancouver prior to the strike deadline leaves the mainland airport at 4:10 p.m. Saunday. Last in-flight to Vancouver from the east arrives there at 9:10 p.m. Sunday.

The strike would idle about 33 Air Canada employees in this area, 18 of them members of the machinists' union.

Other than that, the effects on this community, were not expected to be crippling. Mail will be routed by ferry and except for mail from the east which will travel by alternate air lines, train or ground transport, it will be little delayed.

Persons travelling to the east are being booked by local travel bureaus on Canadian Pacific Air.

CPA announced at noon it is supplementing its three-a-day trans-continental flights in both directions. It still has space on most flights booked next week.

GREATER COST

Should the traffic become more than CPA can handle on transcontinental routes, passengers can be routed via bus to Seattle and east-west U.S. air services — at a greater cost in time and money.

Air Canada placed an embargo on air freight Friday at noon but will deliver items arriving since that time.

Air Canada announced Friday that passengers booked on charter flights are being protected.

Victoria District Sales Manager Stan Mooney said "We have a plan to get other operators to look after our charter flights."

One such group is the Union Club of B.C. with 100 members

Two Resignations Rock Arts School

By BOB MITCHELL

Two resignations rocked the University of Victoria's School of Fine Arts Friday.

But students and faculty held out hope a settlement could be reached to persuade one professor to remain at the university.

Peter Kahn, a highly esteemed professor of graphic arts, submitted his resignation to acting president Dea R. L. Wallace on Thursday.

He said the actions of two administrators in the School of Fine Arts left him no choice but to resign.

Dr. Gerald Hendrie, chairman of the music division, said he would resign two months earlier than scheduled due to "intolerable" pressure from the School's administration.

DRAFT PROTEST

Fine arts students met Friday to draft a letter to Dean Wallace expressing a vote of non-confidence in Dr. Alan Gowans, chairman of the division of art and art history.

The students were to meet again at 4 p.m. today to consider further action. A spokesman said their main concern is to make it possible

Calories of course.

The Times Monday begins a 12-part series by Winnifred C. Jardine on how to lose weight sensibly through a no-gimmick diet.

Mrs. Jardine, a home economics and journalism graduate, says there are no short-cuts to losing weight, but her 1,200 calorie a day menus should ensure a weight loss of one or two pounds a week.

WARSHIPS BACK SPY MISSIONS

WASHINGTON (AP) — Potent U.S. naval forces, including the battleship New Jersey and possibly a pair of aircraft carriers, were reported steaming to new positions today to provide protection for American intelligence missions off North Korea.

The defence department announced redeployment of extensive forces Friday shortly after President Nixon ordered resumption of reconnaissance flights with the promise they will cease to be "fair game" for North Korean jets.

Flights off the North Korean coast were halted Tuesday after an EC-121 reconnaissance plane with 31 men aboard apparently was shot down. Only two bodies have been found in the Sea of Japan where the craft fell.

Redeployment of U.S. naval forces was viewed here as a protective step rather than a threat of retaliation against North Korea.

The semi-official Seoul newspaper Shinmoon reported that United Nations forces in South Korea were placed on a special alert today. It said the alert, known as Defcon II, is instituted only when a danger of hostilities exists. A spokesman for the UN command would not comment on the report.

STRATEGY NOT KNOWN

The New Jersey, which had been scheduled to arrive at Long Beach, Calif., today after duty off Vietnam, was ordered to return to the Western Pacific. The 16-inch guns on the world's only active battleship had been used to shell targets up to 20 miles inland in Vietnam.

While no announcement was made of the strategy to be used in providing protection for the reconnaissance planes, indications were that fighters would be stationed where they could come to the swift rescue of any threatened U.S. aircraft. Fighters would be kept in the air during intelligence missions, but not flying wing-to-wing with the reconnaissance aircraft.

Military men indicated Friday that carrier-based fighters probably would be used to help protect the slow-moving reconnaissance planes.

One carrier believed on the way to the Sea of Japan is the Kittyhawk which carries 90 warplanes. The Kittyhawk left Hong Kong with two destroyers earlier this week without any announcement of its destination.

There was no identification of a possible second carrier.

Hard-Line Kremlin Policy Adopted by Czech Leader

PRAGUE (AP) — Gustav Husak, Czechoslovakia's new Communist party chief, has declared political war on those who do not toe the Kremlin line but informants said today that Husak has made some concessions to get the support of liberals in government.

One source said Husak got all but five votes of the 190-member Central Committee, which ousted reformist party chief Alexander Dubcek in a secret ballot Thursday.

Informants cited two reasons for his strong showing:

—Husak assured Dubcek supporters he would not, for now, accept the Soviet invasion as justified.

—He assured reformers that political arrests will not be made for any "violations" committed prior to his assumption of power.

Despite these concessions, few doubted that Czechoslovakia is in for a more authoritarian brand of communism under the 56-year-old Slovak. The news agency CTK today circulated Husak's first major foreign policy address, made at the Thursday-Friday Central Committee session, in which he promised to "take up the glove" against rightists and anti-Soviet elements.

"We shall not back down," said Husak. " . . . We shall not call it child's play, but a struggle, and I am absolutely sure of political victory. Anti-Sovietism is incompatible with the ideology of this party. It is in sharp contradiction to the state policy of this state."

He repeated criticism that the Dubcek regime had allowed "anti-Communist" elements to plunge Czechoslovakia into a crisis.

"Where can it lead if our Central Committee and central organs do not intervene?" he asked. "To what aim? To civil war?

"Should we wait until somebody provokes the Soviet troops on our territory into taking some action in their defence?"

Husak said the March 28-29 anti-Soviet demonstrations in Prague included "acts that were precisely counter-revolutionary."

INCREASED PRESSURE

These demonstrations broke out after Czechoslovakia had beaten the Soviet Union in the world hockey championships in Stockholm and they precipitated the crisis that increased the pressure from Moscow and led to Dubcek's ouster.

Dubcek was demoted to president of the parliament, a largely ceremonial job since parliament merely rubber-stamps Communist party decisions.

Husak said his "organized political struggle" against anti-Communist forces within and outside the party would go "so far as allowed by law."

OFF-TRACK BETTING TEST CASE LAUNCHED

VANCOUVER (CP) — Herbert van Holtum plans to open British Columbia's first off-track betting shop today despite threats of prosecution by Attorney-General Leslie Peterson.

Mr. van Holtum will charge a minimum of 50 cents or 10 per cent of the bet placed and says he will be taking bets from his offices in both Vancouver and Burnaby as of today.

Shortly after noon, he plans to board a plane for Victoria to deliver bets to Sandown Park race track.

"If the attorney-general wants to prosecute, then I'll leave it up to my lawyer—but he'll be wasting the taxpayers' money after three judges have ruled the business legal."

Mr. van Holtum referred to a recent Ontario ruling that legalized a similar operation in Welland.

PRISONER TAKES LONG WALK

OTTAWA (CP) — A prisoner from a federal penitentiary walked in the "Miles for Millions" march today to raise some $400 as the representative of fellow prisoners.

Employees of the RCMP, the national penitentiary service and the national parole board pledged more than $10 a mile to the prisoner from the Joyceville medium security institution at Kingston, Ont. The money goes to a variety of charities.

After walking the 40-mile route unguarded, the prisoner was to meet prison Warden John Norfield who will treat him to dinner at a restaurant before they return to Kingston.

for Professor Kahn to continue to teach at Uvic.

"He is to the graphic art field what Carlo Ponti is to the film," was how one student summed it up.

Kahn came to Uvic last fall after teaching 11 years at Cornell University. He is considered one of the foremost graphic art experts in North America.

Dr. Hendrie said Friday he had been pressured by the Fine Arts administration to run a "show-window" division, with concerts and recitals taking precedent over the teaching of music.

Prior to taking the post of head of the music division in the fall of 1967 he taught for 12 years at Cambridge and Manchester.

"I was enticed out here by fine stories about building up a strong academic department.

A BY-PRODUCT

"It has always been my view that concerts are a by-product of a strong department — but when concerts take precedent over teaching it is to the detriment of the students.

Dr. Hendrie submitted his resignation earlier in the session and intended to leave Uvic at the end of June. He is now awaiting confirmation of a new post with a university in England.

Donald Harvey, associate professor of painting and design, said Professor Kahn's decision to resign came as a result of a "demoralizing" situation in the School of Fine Arts, but expressed hope some compromise could be reached in the conflict.

"I think that the situation where you have two very fine men leaving the university is an indication something is wrong."

Harvey said cause of the conflict in the art and art history division centred around crucial delays, including: acquisition of more space for students to work in; hiring of new faculty members, and selection of a chairman for the new studio and visual arts division.

Studio courses in which students paint, draw, and sculpt were co-ordinated by Professor Harvey, with the understanding a new chairman for studio arts would be selected this year.

DECISION NEXT WEEK

John Dobereiner, professor of painting and drawing, said the faculty had accordingly interviewed three candidates on a list of four, and would make a decision on them next week.

However, Dobereiner said Dr. Gowans had taken an active role in the search for a chairman by submitting two names of his own to the faculty.

He said Dr. Gowans and School of Fine Arts chairman Garvie had displayed a lack of trust in decisions of the faculty members.

Garvie made a special trip to England to interview one candidate the faculty felt was not worth bringing to Victoria for an interview.

"The dean of a faculty or school is supposed to rely on the knowledge of faculty members who have gained their experience in the field.

"But Garvie's been taking advice from the people who don't know."

Students are concerned about the direction the studio and visual arts division will take under Gowans' guidance.

Glen Howarth, a fourth-year student, said one of the candidates brought in by Gowans at department expense was a man "who made plastic bottles."

Professor Kahn said the present administration of the school and the art and art history division is "not interested in the visual arts of this century."

He said the students he had worked with are "very talented" and cited the show of their work now on display at the Greater Victoria Art Gallery.

He said the actions of Gowans and Garvie in the selection of a chairman were contrary to procedures outlined in the university's tenure document.

LACK OF ACTION

He described his salary as "more than adequate," but said he was disappointed with inaction over a lack of space and equipment.

"I was promised a very large new space—but what I got was part of a corridor.

"If you look at the calendar, then at the actual program, it looks like a lot of false promises."

Professor Garvie, contacted late Friday, said he knew nothing about Dr. Hendrie's decision to resign immediately, and could think of no reason why the music chairman would want to leave now.

He also said he did not know why Kahn was resigning because he had not had a chance to read his letter of resignation, and described students who had seen him Friday about the conflict as "misled."

Dr. Gowans did not think the situation was serious, but said he knew nothing of developments among students and faculty.

Dean Robert Wallace, acting president of the university, was not in Victoria, and could not be reached for comment.

Middle East Breakthrough Still Sought

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (WP) — Four rounds of big power discussions on the Middle East have brought no breakthroughs or surprises but the atmosphere is still promising, authoritative sources said Friday.

But a working group composed of deputies failed again to agree on the language of a declaration which Israel, Egypt and Jordan would be asked to sign stating their intention to carry out the Security Council resolution of Nov. 22, 1967.

France, which proposed the declaration, is to be concentrating with Soviet support on Israeli withdrawal "from" occupied territories. The U.S. and Britain, however, favor emphasis on withdrawal "to" recognized boundaries.

In view of the fact that UN Middle East representative Gunnar Jarring spend 18 months trying to obtain agreement of the parties on a declaration of intent, the U.S. and Britain are understood to question whether this is a productive exercise.

Viet Demonstrators Irk U.S. Envoy on Visit Here

The United States ambassador to Canada left Victoria this morning in a gentle rain after a day of harassment.

In full flight from a band of anti-Vietnam war demonstrators, Francis Linder ducked into the labyrinth of legislative offices in the Douglas Building Friday afternoon.

The demonstrators had dogged his tracks from the moment he stepped out of Premier Bennett's office.

He lost them during the Douglas Building detour.

But he seems to have gotten lost himself.

Starting in Agriculture Minister Cyril Shelford's empty office, Linder snuck through an inter-connecting door into another office.

Then into another. And another.

CLERKS FRANTIC

A fluster of frantic clerks hustled stuffed filing cabinets out of passages and away from unused doors to clear the route for their prestigious, if unexpected visitor.

From office to office, through seven in all, Linder leaped until finally he found an exit, dashed from the building into a waiting car and sped away.

The demonstrators, unable to match the pace, were standing quietly in the street as Linder emerged from the building.

LINDER
. . . hectic tour

As the car pulled away, the demonstrators waved a quiet goodbye.

There were some 30 protesters, many of them middle-aged and older.

MISSED ARRIVAL

They missed Linder's arrival to meet the premier—he went in a side door while they waited on the legislative building's front steps.

Some of them went inside with their "Hands Off Vietnam and Canada" and "The Only Defence Is Peace—Trudeau" posters to wait in silence during Linder's visit with the premier.

When he emerged, the chase was on.

ENVOY IRKED

The ambassador was apparently irritated at the sight of some of his followers carrying a United States flag.

Crossing Government Street, he entered the Douglas Building and pulled the entrance door shut behind him, holding it to keep the group from getting in.

Linder, accompanied by U.S. Consul-General Milton Rewinkel of Vancouver, fled down a long hallway to take refuge in the empty minister's office.

The group waited in the corridor amid speculation their quarry might try to leave by a window. One woman began to sing "O Canada."

As she was singing, Deputy Works Minister Arnold Webb and Deputy Provincial Secretary L. J. Wallace arrived and went into the office where Linder was waiting.

Some of the demonstrators took the flag outside and set fire to it after dousing it with lighter fluid.

Wallace, who had come out and was waiting with a car, the doors open and engine running, closed the doors and drove off.

The ambassador, the consul-general and Webb finally emerged after their inter-office episode and walked around to the rear of the building where Wallace and the car were now parked.

The demonstrators, following closely, stopped as Linder got in the car and waved as he departed.

slated to fly via Air Canada May 1 to England.

"I don't think it will be hard to find another charter plane for the Union Club this early in the year," he said.

The strike would ground 108 planes across Canada. Ten will be deactivated at the Richmond maintenance base and "there will be some mothballing procedures," an Air Canada spokesman said at Vancouver.

It was also announced that in anticipation of a strike no further reservations are being accepted for flights between April 20 and 28 and only standby tickets are being sold for the period April 28 to May 4.

BEFORE DEADLINE

No tickets will be sold for flights Sunday except where the passenger can complete his journey before the strike deadline. This has resulted in cancellation of 13 flights even without the strike being effective.

The expected daily loss in gross revenue to the air line is $1.2 million if the strike goes ahead. Air Canada handles 18,000 passengers each day across the nation and abroad.

In the Vancouver area the strike involves 325 members of the machinists' union but would also mean immediate layoff of 120 pursers and stewardesses, 114 pilots, 14 air dispatchers and nine navigators.

PASSENGER AGENTS

Some 200 passenger agents are expected to get 48 hours notice of layoff Sunday and 218 management and non-union clerical staff will be kept on salary for two weeks before going on a day-to-day basis.

Talks between both sides in the contract dispute broke down Tuesday and on Thursday the union stated a strike was inevitable.

Mother Has Fifth Baby At Home

PORT ANGELES (UPI) — Mrs. Harry Reynolds, 31, was up and about feeling "just fine" today just two days after she delivered her fifth child at home all alone.

"I just got tired of seeing hospital rates go up every time you turn around," she said.

Mrs. Reynolds, whose fourth child came at a hospital-doctor cost of $352, said she had read books on baby care.

"There were instructions on what to do in case you had your baby at home," she said. "It's really not that hard. I had no trouble at all."

Her husband, a logger, was at work when the event occurred. Her four other children were watching television.

The "result" was a boy weighing more than nine pounds.

The Weather and You

By CARL RIBLET JR.

The microbe hunters discovered that you are less likely to pick up an infectious bug if you spend more time in a city park than in a city's heavily frequented streets. The reason, of course, is believed to be related to the weather.

Germs are thought to attach themselves outdoors to dust particles. When they are exposed to a wind, such as might be usual in a city street, germs ride the winds up and down the more congested areas. In a park, there may probably be less wind and fewer people on the average.

A rainy day washes about half of the bugs right out of the air. Weather that kills insects is bad for germs because many disease-causing micro-organisms are carried by insects.

N. Viets Invade U.S. Camp

SAIGON (CP) — North Vietnamese troops stormed a U.S. Army position south of the demilitarized zone, killing 11 American infantrymen and wounding 23, a U.S. military spokesman said today.

In a 3½-hour battle that ended at midnight, North Vietnamese troops penetrated the U.S. defensive position and set off explosives. Reports said that a number of big armored personnel carriers in the camp were blown up by the attackers.

American troops fought back at dawn and reported they found the bodies of 13 North Vietnamese in the perimeter, several entangled in barbed wire.

The battle took place just more than a mile from the southern edge of the buffer strip, which divides North and South Vietnam.

Elsewhere, American troops reported killing 82 North Vietnamese army regulars Friday in the jungles of Tay Ninh province, 12 miles from the Cambodian border.

Ottawa in Red Tape Jungle But Housing Plan Emerges

By JIM HUME

City Hall Reporter

On Nov. 6, 1968, the city of Victoria presented a brief to the Paul Hellyer task force on housing.

Among other things the brief stated that delays caused by red tape within Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation in Ottawa were "acutely embarrassing" and "inexcusable for a renewal scheme involving public agencies."

The city listed the details.

Seven months elapsed from the time the project was first presented to CMHC to the time the federal financing agency gave its approval.

Hume

That, by the way, was in December, 1966.

Two long years went by, the city moved families, cleared the land and prepared what services it could prior to actual construction of houses.

Shortly after Hellyer's visit last year the word came down that contractors could be asked to submit proposals for the construction of approximately 180 housing units.

Experts Agree

Little more than three weeks ago, after detailed vetting by federal, provincial and municipal experts, one of the five proposals submitted was recommended as the one all parties liked. That recommendation was immediately forwarded to Ottawa.

On Thursday of this week the recommendation finally caught up with Hellyer in Vancouver, Some 71 days had passed since the five contractors had placed their proposals in the hands of B.C. officials, more than three weeks since the proposals had arrived in Ottawa and the deadline for the 60-day period when contractors' prices were compelled to remain firm was 11 days in the past.

When Victoria presented its brief to Hellyer last November Municipal Affairs Minister Dan Campbell also faced the task force.

Campbell said his primary recommendation to the commission was that procedures be simplified.

Await Final Step

If Hellyer had any doubts as to the validity of those complaints five months ago, he shouldn't have now. The red tape delays on the Rose-Blanshard have indeed been "inexcusable" and there is hope here that Hellyer will so inform his Ottawa chair-bound CMHC experts when he returns to the capital.

And, being a man of action, he could also make sure that the absolute final move—yes, there is one more step—is made without delay.

What is the final move before George Wheaton can roll his equipment onto the site? Just the formal contract, the legal document which tells Wheaton what he can do and how much he'll get paid for doing it.

In private business it would be ready by Monday. But coming from Ottawa, who knows how long?

Could anything go wrong between Hellyer's announced agreement of the Wheaton proposal and the signing of the contract? It isn't likely—but it could.

Red Tape Jungle

The people drawing up the contract back in Ottawa will not be the same technical experts who have watched the Rose-Blanshard come close to painful birth. But let us hope the legal fellows doing the actual drafting of that final document consult wisely, efficiently and, above all else, speedily, with their companion toilers in the red tape jungle.

And let us also hope that they don't feel tempted to make any last-minute changes to make it impossible for Wheaton to sign.

For those who may still doubt that Ottawa is remote from the people and often shakily vague about what is really going on, let us add what, in other circumstances, might have been a funny clincher.

Thursday, when the whole Blanshard delay mess was sending shudders through the contracting, sub-contracting and city hall circles, city officials received a reassuring message from CMHC headquarters in Ottawa.

The first line of the telegram asked plaintively if the city was prepared to live up to the terms of all agreements if CMHC and Hellyer gave the word.

Pledge Unread

Six months ago the city signed a legal document solidly binding itself to just such a possibility—but, apparently, the Ottawa whiz-bangs hadn't yet had time to read that far.

The only regret we have in this little dissertation on the ancient mysteries of Ottawa is that, this being a family newspaper, it is impossible to record city planner Geoff Greenhalgh's thoughts on delays, red tape and the wonderful world of bureaucracy.

Planners may sometimes be turgid in written reports, but verbally, never.

The Squeeze

THE ANNUAL BUDGETTING processes of the city and adjacent municipalities appear to be more difficult this year than last, and this is a trend that has become increasingly evident over the last decade or more. The requirements of municipal expenditure become more pressing while the most immediate source of revenue, the property tax, is pushed to the point of causing serious effects on property ownership. Where it was once the practice to cut frills and civic luxuries from the first draft of budgets, councils are now faced with the hard necessity of also paring needed public works and other municipal projects.

While every council does its best to keep the mill rate to a minimum, there is often a false economy in cutting down on well merited expenditures. For these needs will return in the next year's budget with even more pressing urgency, along with new demands, and the result is that the moderate deletion of last year becomes the larger addition of today.

It is increasingly clear that the whole matter of municipal financing needs revision and modernization. The patchwork system which has grown up under Premier Bennett's Santa-Claus program of personal doles — along with per capita grants, allotments for ambulances and tourist promotion, aid to this construction project or that — is obviously inadequate to handle the large-scale business operations which are the concern of municipalities today.

When councils are driven, for instance, to suggest that the public library should close one extra day a week — would the same proposal be made to keep school costs down?— because of pressure on the mill rate, or to cut the appropriation to the point where only a fraction of the new books required can be bought during the year, can we say that we have really recognized the twentieth century with its new and urgent education requirements? With traffic burgeoning throughout the area and creating new problems at scores of points, can patching pot-holes be called an adequate answer to the transportation problems of our time?

There is a limit to the burden of expenditure that can be laid upon property owners, as there equally is for income earners, and it is clear that municipalities, like individual citizens, cannot have all the improvements they want as soon as they want them. But the inexorable growth of population and urban activity in this era demands large expenditures from the unprecedented production of our modern society.

A major problem locally is the distribution of responsibilities and resources between provincial and municipal governments. Governments today are not living in the same environment that existed when their structure was formed. We hear talk just now of largely sovereign regional governments, of city states, and other possible developments to meet the unprecedented type of urbanized society into which we are moving.

A first interim step at least should be a full-scale, fundamental study and discussion of financial problems between municipal and provincial governments, which the former have long requested and the latter has long denied.

Don't Stop Now

EDUCATION MINISTER DONald Brothers proclaims with satisfaction that experiments in learning are being carried out in almost all of the province's public schools. Closer examination of his statistics however indicates there are less grounds for pride than at first appear.

For example, fewer than half the elementary schools are employing an individual reading program based on the pupil's own level and rate of learning. What is holding the other 642 schools back? When improved techniques such as this have won the approval of educators over a considerable period there seems no reason why they can not be introduced into all the schools.

As matters stand now half the elementary pupils in the province are receiving an inferior reading program. It is up to the department of education and the local school boards to see that all students receive equal opportunities.

At a time when the importance of bilingualism is being emphasized, only 14 per cent of the elementary schools are offering a program in conversational French. Only 8 per cent provide open areas in place of rigid rows of desks so the students can have greater freedom of movement and easier access to individual or group assistance.

The largest statistic in Mr. Brothers' list, that 646 schools have developed their own report cards, represents limited progress. Most parents would agree that the new reports give them a minimum of information on how their child is progressing. It takes the parent-teacher conferences, a valuable innovation, to provide that.

There is no desire to belittle the progress that is being made in the school system. Numerous schools and individual teachers are doing a first-rate job, displaying enthusiasm and a willingness to attempt new and better techniques. Mr. Brothers' report simply emphasizes that much still remains to be done.

Added Weight on the Gun

THE GENERAL ASSEMBLY OF South Carolina has before it a bill which might give greater weight to the campaign against illegal possession of firearms than most gun laws on this continent.

The bill would provide an extra penalty — a sentence of up to 10 years — for anyone who carried a firearm at the time of a crime if the individual were found guilty. Then the extra penalty would be added, whether or not the gun was fired.

The proposal has merit. Application of the penalty would depend on the individual being involved in a crime. The bill would neither prevent criminal elements from obtaining guns, nor meet the problem of possession of firearms by irresponsible but not necessarily criminally inclined persons. It would, however, impose one more sanction against gun-carrying by criminals in whose hands such weapons take on added menace.

So What Else Is New?

TWO HUNDRED YEARS AGO Oliver Goldsmith described the amazement of a rustic audience at the vast knowledge of their school teacher . . . "and still their wonder grew that one small head could carry all he knew."

It was an era when almost all the facts known to mankind could be carried in one man's head. But today even a walking encyclopaedia could not keep up with the rapid agglomeration of modern knowledge.

Collier's, according to recent report, has already had to revise one-quarter of its 1968 edition to keep up; and history is changing, or expanding, so rapidly that the Britannica rushes in special supplements to keep pace with developments, new or newly disclosed, between regular editions.

Gone is the "one small head" so knowledgeable that it created wonder. Gone also, it seems, is the sense of wonder in a world which greets the new day with the query: "So what else is new?"

Why Blame the English?

In your issue of April 15, Mr. Jean Guy Cardinal, education minister, threatened English-speaking Quebecers that they would no longer be permitted to keep their distance from all the upheaval that pervades the Quebec of today and determines their tomorrow.

He talks as though all the French-Canadian problems were the doing of the English-speaking Canadians in Quebec and Canada, whereas we well know it is their own backward attitude to progress and their educational ideas. — T. H. Smith, 1527 Cedar Hill Crossroad.

Not Socialism

Saturday's Times sported a cartoon of two men carrying an old fashioned record player and a single record to the Paris peace talks. The cartoon would have just as aptly portrayed the ancient refrain that was being played in the editorial at the bottom of the page.

For the umpteenth time the CCF-NDP was referred to as being the socialist party. This in spite of perhaps over a hundred letters to the editor in the late 1950s and early '60s by the Socialist Party of Canada providing plenty of evidence to show that state ownership or control of industries with state charity under the name of welfare leaves the economic basis of society unchanged. That a minority still owns and controls the means of production and distribution under state "ownership" has been shown over and over again in Canada, Russia, Britain, Scandinavia, Cuba, China and anywhere else that the state intervenes partially or completely.—J. C. Jenkins.

FROM UNITED NATIONS, N.Y.

By WILLIAM R. FRYE

World Opinion and the Frustrations of Power

ONCE again the United States came face to face, this past week, with the frustrations of power in the mid-20th century. A fourth-rate adversary, North Korea, plucked the tail feathers of the American eagle, as it had done the year before, and there was little if anything effective the United States could do about it. It is an ironic fact that one of the world's two major superpowers is not in a position to deal militarily with a challenger the size of Pyongyang.

Frye

To some extent, the United States' involvement in Vietnam is an explanation. But even without that drain on American resources, it is doubtful that President Nixon would have wished to march across the 38th parallel, drop the bomb, or in some other all-out way bring the massive power of the United States to bear.

Sympathize With Weak

That is not the kind of world in which we live. Regardless of the rights and wrongs of the case, and almost regardless of the provocation, world opinion would have sympathized with the weaker party and condemned the stronger. The stronger was partially immobilized; the respective power of the two tended to equalize.

Except in very special circumstances, the major centers of power today are simply not free to use their great strength against the small. When they violate this rule, as the Soviet Union did in Czechoslovakia and in a different way, the United States did in the Dominican Republic, they bring upon themselves widespread condemnation.

Britain has found much of the world surprisingly sympathetic toward Anguilla. France felt obliged to quit Algeria in the 1950's.

In each case, superior military power was not the only significant force in action. It probably was not even the decisive force.

Nor is this rule that right makes might applicable solely to the big and mighty. Israel can and does engage in reprisal raids of a certain magnitude, especially when world opinion sympathizes with the provocation. But when the world community strongly disapproves, Israel's small size does not exempt her from its pressures.

Nigeria, scarcely a superpower, is another case in point. She has run into waves of world opprobrium for her effort to crush Biafra. This criticism has been a tangible disadvantage for Lagos. It may have been the principal factor keeping Biafra alive.

Even an exception like Czechoslovakia tends to prove the rule. Moscow has not felt free to make full and uninhibited use of its superior military power. If it had, no liberal Czechs would have retained authority in Prague last August for even 24 hours. Few if any liberal leaders would be alive today and out of jail. There would not be continuing spurts of resistance from the Czech people.

Skeptics to the contrary, there is an intangible but supremely important moral force at play in the 20th century which world leaders ignore at their peril: the power of world opinion. Scarcely a single major power equation in the world exists independently of it.

It does not always work in a healthy direction. It can sometimes be manipulated for selfish ends. It can give scope for irresponsibility masquerading as an underdog. It is more effective against some government leaders than others.

But it exists, and is almost universally at work.

It goes far to explain why the United States has not cracked down on Peru for nationalizing American property. It is the reason why the United States has found so much of the diplomacy of Vietnam so frustrating, including its relations with Saigon.

The wish to mobilize world opinion explains much of what is happening in and about the Middle East. Both the Arabs and Israel devote much of their time and effort to this objective.

Overwhelming sympathy for Israel in May, 1967, freed her armies to launch a pre-emptive war, and has backed her demands for a lasting peace before those armies are withdrawn from conquered territory.

Only recently have the Arabs begun to make real inroads into this Israeli position. King Hussein of Jordan, an unusually attractive human being, did much to further their cause in a state visit to the United States this month. Israel has shown she senses, and fears, the new development.

Tribute to Opinion

Possibly the single most notable tribute to the power of world opinion has been the frank acknowledgement by the Big Four that this leverage is to be their principal reliance in impelling the Arabs and Israelis toward the bargaining table.

If even the four great powers do not feel their combined military might is as significant and efficient a tool as their capacity to appeal to world opinion, a lesser array of powers would be bold indeed to proclaim indifference.

Much more needs to be understood about manipulation of this power. Its misuse needs to be made counter-productive through quicker and more effective exposure. The strong need more reliable protection against the weak and irresponsible.

That will not be easy. A start can be made by wider recognition of the role world opinion plays in the affairs of our time.

No Running From Responsibility

Calgary Albertan

Before too long, drunkenness as a crime virtually will be a thing of the past in Alberta. Attorney-General Edgar Gerhart said in the Legislature that the government intends to propose amendments to the Liquor Control Act whereby drunkenness in itself will cease to be a legal offence. In general, the change will mean that drunks simply will be picked up by police, held overnight without charge and released when sober.

Mr. Gerhart said that the use or abuse of alcohol is not a crime or even a semi-crime. He said it is partly an illness, a social problem, and partly a matter of personal responsibility. Of course, what one does when drunk is something else again. Let it not be thought that one will be able to run away from responsibility for illegal acts committed while under the influence of alcohol simply by pleading drunkenness.

U.S. Gaining in Vietnam, Losing at Home

United States policy in Vietnam has so far been too much and too late. From the start of the U.S. commitment, during the Eisenhower Administration, Americans have underestimated their enemy and overestimated themselves. Today they are increasingly successful militarily but politically irresolute and all mixed up. In a series of lurches the United States has over-reacted on the battlefield while failing as a nation to comprehend just why it is in Vietnam, how a series of related undertakings brought Americans in, or what they are fighting for.

In one sense what the U.S. is fighting for is time, not space. The United States never intended to de-Communize North Vietnam or to overthrow its government and is committed to an eventual withdrawal from South Vietnam once it can be shored up.

The greatest strategic victory obtained by the U.S. commitment has been the smashing of a Communist effort to take over Indonesia by coup in 1965. Had South Vietnam already been subject to Hanoi there is little doubt the Indonesian military would have knuckled under.

Determined to Triumph

Nevertheless, inside Vietnam itself, the outcome remains uncertain. As explained in a previous column, the enemy is determined to triumph regardless of the cost in blood.

He is prepared to stake innumerable lives in a protracted offensive on the assumption that wavering U.S. public opinion will drive Washington — and in turn push Saigon — to settle at a disadvantage. Hanoi has no public opinion problem of its own to reckon with.

Militarily the United States has learned much on the difficult South Vietnamese battlefield; but politically it has not begun to understand the implications of revolutionary warfare which aims with brilliant effectiveness at American public opinion.

Hanoi fights and negotiates simultaneously but the two approaches are in tandem. It is Clausewitz reworded — politics becomes a continuation of war by other means.

This novel approach is just as audacious as the Communist military strategy of pre-positioning arms, ammunition and food in battlefield areas chosen in advance — and then sending reinforcements to those caches by different routes. For the first time in history we see an army's supply lines marching ahead of its troops.

The U.S. command has finally caught on to this method and is upsetting its efficacy. The price paid by the enemy mounts steadily but one can almost detect a proportional decline in American public support for this unpopular conflict.

One might almost say this was in the fourth dimension, a dimension variously described when Einstein first announced its discovery. In some senses it was depicted as time, and in this respect U.S. strategy has reacted efficiently if not always comprehendingly.

In another respect it was depicted as the dimension through which a glove passed when turned inside out. The United States is now turning South Vietnam inside out by a paradoxical phenomenon. The essential American problem in opposing the Communist intrusion is to rely upon a status quo system while simultaneously revolutionizing it from within — against the will of its own power elite.

This self-contradictory approach was attempted by the United States in China during the 1940's when efforts were made to reform the Kuomintang government while helping it against the Communists. In that instance the reform was blatantly inadequate and therefore the vast amount of help was wasted.

Best Government in Years

The efforts concentrating on reform in South Vietnam are showing signs of positive effect and the present Thieu government in Saigon is undoubtedly the best South Vietnam has known since it became independent 15 years ago. But whether the momentum is sufficient to force through needed improvement, massive reconstruction and, above all, to eliminate erosive corruption at the higher echelons remains an open question.

On the military level there is now a cogent American pattern. The Viet Cong main force and North Vietnamese units are being so severely chewed up that the cost to Hanoi is increasingly cruel. And at last South Vietnam's own army is sufficiently trained and equipped to play a mounting role in defending its own country.

The war is being "Vietnamized" more and more, both militarily and politically. But the big question remains whether the process was begun soon enough to compensate for a parallel decline in U.S. national will power. Hanoi's bloody bet is that the answer is no.

Nature Rambles

By FREEMAN KING

Take a walk along the flats at Goldstream picnic site, across the bridge where the alders and old maples grow.

The horsetails are now putting forth their tall stems with their whorls of stiff wire-like branches. Note their hollow stems that fit together like a segmented line of pipe. Some you will find that are a pale brown. These bear a small cone which holds the spores.

There are masses of the yellow violets that seem as if they were planted in a formal garden.

Growing among them you will find the bleeding heart, with its delicate, fringed leaves. Soon the pinkish heart-shaped flower will come into bloom.

There are large banks of the lily-of-the-valley growing here. They seem to dominate the ground cover. Their somewhat waxy, twisting leaves with the sharp point will identify this plant. There are a few already in flower and soon more will show the long spike of tiny white flowers that are short lived. In the fall the berries will turn to a cluster of ruby-like beads.

In this locality there are very many skunk cabbage plants and their golden yellow sheaths and spikes make a very pleasing contrast to the somewhat dark swampy ground.

There are very many trilliums in this area. They like the shade and the acid soil. This plant is protected by law. Do not pick it.

The swamp gooseberry is in bloom with its whitish flower, slightly tinged with red. This shrub forms a small thicket and the stems always seem to droop.

Here you will find several beds of the coltsfoot with its purplish-white soft, loose clusters of blooms. They give off a sweet perfume. The leaves come after the flowers. These leaves will often be a foot across and are lobed and toothed.

Walk out into the open on the marshy flats. Here the sun-loving plants live, the sedges and reeds. You will find a lot of bones from salmon that ran up the stream to spawn last fall now they are bleached by the sun and rains.

Standing out in bold relief there is a plum tree "seeded" perhaps by a bird. Its pinkish-white blossoms make it conspicuous in this habitat that does not normally grow this type of tree.

Look up at the towering cliffs of Mt. Finlayson with its scattered conifer cover and you can see why this closed-in valley is so productive.

Look at the river; now it has slowed down and just meanders along to the sea. It is still building the delta there.

The Laser Beam: A Discovery In Search of an Application

VECTORS
(A publication of the Hughes Aircraft Corp.)

In 1880 the first device for transmitting voice sounds by means of light was developed. The method employed a beam of sunlight and vibrating mirrors.

Appropriately enough it was called a photophone, and it was conceived by Alexander Graham Bell, just four years after his telephone.

Eighty years later another, and perhaps a more spectacularly promising, means of harnessing light as a source of power and communication was demonstrated to the world by Theodore Maiman at the Hughes Research Laboratory.

This light beam was the laser — which is an acronym for its function: Light Amplification by Stimulated Emission of Radiation.

And, at that time, 1960, news media predictions for the new discovery ranged from disintegrating rays to light beams capable of performing transmigrations and metamorphoses.

Despite over-reaction, a new respect for light swept the scientific community, and the laser was considered one of the miracles of the young, burgeoning space age.

Boom Forecast

Scores forecast a commercial and scientific boom for the laser comparable to that of the transistor. In only a few months, hundreds of firms, plus numerous government agencies, began laser programs.

Now, some nine years after this remarkable light beamed upon the scene, every living room still does not have a laser.

Nonetheless, a creditable number of accomplishments in nearly every field have accrued in a relatively short time to the laser, most of which were not envisioned in its early notoriety.

These accomplishments arise from the extraordinary brightness, peak power, speed of modulation, and coherence now attainable with lasers.

To illustrate the laser's brightness, which is measured by how much power can be deposited on a small area, the familiar sun can be cited for comparison.

Through the best available lenses, sunlight can be focussed to heat tiny objects better than they can be heated with light from any other source that is not a laser.

Solar furnaces using the finest quality lenses and mirrors in arrays 10 feet across have achieved light power densities of some 5,000 watts per square centimeter.

Surface of Sun

This is nearly the same intensity one would experience sitting right at the surface of the sun. However, no significant amount of improvement over this intensity can be achieved with bigger and better mirrors.

By comparison, light from a commercially available, continually operating argon ion laser can be focused with a small, simple lens to produce light intensities one million times greater than can be made by focusing any amount of sunlight.

Further, if a giant pulse laser is used, intensities can be produced for a few billionths of a second that are one million million times greater than the sun's focused intensity — and a million times greater than that from the high power continually operating laser!

Perhaps one of the laser's properties which has contributed to its omnipotent reputation is its power.

For example, the peak power output of a commercially available pulsed laser can exceed one thousand billion watts.

This is one thousand times greater than the maximum power output of all the generators of Grand Coulee Dam — the world's largest hydroelectric plant. Moreover, all this laser power can be deposited on a microscopic spot less than one ten-thousandth of an inch on a side.

Just Few Degrees

However, the light pulses are so short in time that the total effect of one such pulse would only heat a glass of water a few degrees.

At present, continuous laser beams cannot produce a steady total visible output of more than 10 watts.

A good searchlight can emit a hundred times more. So the uniqueness of the laser light lies in its other properties.

Today it is easy to generate laser pulses which last but a millionth of a millionth of a second. This is one thousand times shorter than those which can be generated by the shortest electrical discharges, and more than a billion times shorter than the flash of a photo flash bulb.

To illustrate a time span of a millionth of a millionth of a second, a supersonic jet aircraft would travel a distance of only several adjoining atoms during this time.

And, if used in a manner similar to a strobe light, the laser beam can stop the interior action of a nuclear explosion at the instant of detonation.

These laser pulses can be pictured as microscopic bundles of light travelling through space — with each bundle only one-hundredth of an inch long.

But this incredible modulation speed, when employed in radar-like applications, would permit the laser beam to "See" a rivet-like dimple on the supersonic jet airplane mentioned above.

Significantly, the light generated from a laser differs in several ways from anything created previously by man. Ordinary light sources (fires, sun, light blulbs, etc.) produce a helter-skelter light which disperses in all directions. Consequently it is referred to as "incoherent."

Laser light, essentially monochromatic, is called "coherent" because all of its waves are of the same length and march in parallel steps in a single direction.

Laser light waves, like ordinary light, have crests and valleys, and coherence refers to the ability of light to preserve a precise relative positioning of its crests and valleys as it travels.

The most monochromatic of ordinary light is very weak, but it can preserve coherence for about a foot. Laser light, on the other hand, can be coherent over miles.

Rapid Modulation

This coherence of laser light, coupled with its ability to be modulated rapidly, in principle will permit an estimated 10 trillion separate conversations to be transmitted at the same time with only two beams: one out and one back. And since the laser beam is only about a millimetre in diameter (about the size of a lower case "o" on this page, and can be easily transmitted in any direction, a prodigious number of beams could be used simultaneously on the same frequency.

Hundreds of different materials such as gases, glasses, plastics, crystals, liquids and semiconductors have been made to "lase," although the ruby is still widely used.

Daily the impact of new applications of the laser beam is felt, and because of its apparent unlimited usefulness and its obvious power, the laser undoubtedly will continue to be put to the test in as many ways as mankind's imagination can devise.

But ever since its discovery the question has remained: How best can mankind utilize these incredible light beams?

Simon Fraser: Blame the Architects?

Alone on the Mountain Top

By ALLAN FOTHERINGHAM
The Sun

In all the searching to find someone to blame for the merry-go-round of turmoil at Simon Fraser University, no one has yet mentioned Arthur Erickson and Geoff Massey.

Yet the brilliant architects of the stunning Burnaby Mountain complex played a vital part in making SFU what it is today.

They'd be complimented if you told them so. It's proof their idea has worked.

The idea, of course, was to recreate some of the concepts of the Greek city state on the mountaintop setting.

They wanted some way to keep the university community intact, in touch—instead of sprawled into a million separate pigeonholes as at UBC.

That's why they linked all the units together. That's why they created the mall, through which all students must pass to move from one spot to another.

It's why they created the Greek amphitheatre effect at one end of the mall—a site that cries out for noon-hour meetings and debates.

It's worked perfectly from an architectural point of view. There's interaction up there, no doubt about that.

But while it is a triumph architecturally, the siting of the campus has been a disaster—as was predicted at the time by a few timorous souls.

It contributes in large part to SFU's neurotic nature. SFU—remember?—was going to be the "people's university."

It was the big chance for a yahoo Social Credit government to get its revenge for all those years of sneers from UBC, training ground of the Liberal and Tory Establishment figures.

Dr. Gordon Shrum, picked to erect the Instant University, had a few scores to settle himself. He was forced by the late Dal Grauer, then UBC chancellor, to leave his empire of UBC positions at age 65.

Nothing would do but that SFU would have to outspectacular the fairly spectacular UBC setting. The uninhabited top of a mountain was the solution. Erickson and Massey, of course, did more than justice to the site. On a clear day it is so beautiful up there, Indian Arm unfolding through a mist below, that it is almost unreal.

The trouble is, on the top of a B.C. mountain, there are not that many blissful days. Through the long winter, it is unrelenting gloom, a concrete fortress in the middle of a rain forest.

The rain, far heavier than in rainy Vancouver, is top-of-the-mountain rain. There's nothing else to do up there.

No movies, no pubs, not the slightest trace of outside civilization. There's no way to escape for a half-hour whiff of the real world.

There is only one undersized cafeteria on campus, where the food ranges from unappetizing to inedible.

Those without cars must catch the last lonely bus or face the night sleeping on a concrete bench. UBC, existing out there on the Point Grey bluff, has developed a certain insularity over the years.

SFU, with nothing to contemplate but its own navel, is rapidly developing paranoia.

The kids are stir-crazy up there. They're trapped in their glass bubble on a mountain peak, viewed by the media as inmates to visit only when serious trouble threatens.

It's a tremendous place to visit but would you want to live there? You'd go bonkers too.

Who's the Greatest? The Proof Is Gold

By ART STOTT

Stott

In recent days an excellent television program and a radio sportorial have given consideration to greatness in Canadian athletics. In the former, the coach of Harry Jerome offered the opinion that Harry's accomplishments, including world's records in the 100 and 200 metres, placed him ahead of Percy Williams. In the latter a knowledgeable young man saw George Knudson's second-place finish in the Masters' tournament the greatest golfing triumph ever achieved by a Canadian.

The respective opinions left me wondering about the criteria that should be applied in such judgments.

You use different yardsticks to measure different kinds of greatness in sport. Some athletes are great in defeat. Some are great in their ability to overcome handicaps even though they may never grasp the laurel. Some have a greatness of heart that exceeds their physical capacities. But when it comes to performance, the measure, it seems to me, is gold—the medal proving the ability to win against the strongest competition that can be marshalled. The gold, too, is relative. Its more refined form appears at the victor's stand at Olympics.

That's why Percy Williams stands out above all other Canadian track athletes in my opinion. He took golds for the 100 and 200 in 1928.

On the Knudson issue, I'm a little shakier. I know almost nothing about golf. Certainly when a Canadian finishes second among a selected field of the world's best pros in any sport, he has climbed the heights. But I keep thinking back to 1932, when a young man came out of London, Ontario, to win the American Amateur. This may be comparing junior hockey to the NHL. But Sandy Somerville won the gold in what was then one of the great golf competitions. At that particular time, in that particular place, he was better than anyone else assembled there—and the competition was strong.

In my highly subjective simile, the difference between winning and being second is the difference between a traveller who makes the 12-foot jump from the wharf to the deck of the departing ship that has drawn 10 feet away and the man who makes a nine-and-one-half foot leap, commendable as the latter effort may be.

By my criterion, you don't measure the performance of a competitor today in terms of times, distances or heights against the marks made by a competitor 20, 30 or more years ago. The current records, always improving, make such a comparison unrealistic. You form your conclusion on the basis of how much better a man was than his contemporaries in his given field. That, if memory serves, is why Paul Gallico considered Bobby Jones the "King of Kings" in the realm of all sports in his day. And that measurement is made by tests of one against the other.

The tests are critical. Up to an afternoon in Mexico City last summer, everyone knew that Jim Ryun of the United States was the greatest miler of his time—everyone, perhaps, except a dark-skinned young man called Kipchoge Keino who came from Kenya and ran Ryun into the ground. The payoff there was in gold at the victor's stand.

It is important to appreciate other degrees of greatness than winning, of course. Who'll deny the strength of the concept that holds the game above the prize? Who'll challenge the judgment that it counts not whether you won or lost, but how you played the game?

Among the acquaintances of my youth was a boy who ran regularly—against Percy Williams. My friend looked almost frail, though he played McKechnie Cup rugby and took his lumps in it. He couldn't beat Percy, but he always came up smiling. He had heart. He showed it as he fought and lost to an incurable illness. He had our affection and our admiration—and a kind of greatness of his own. But it wasn't the characteristic which made him the greatest in performance.

When I was young I also met the world's greatest cricketer, Don Bradman. He came to Victoria with a touring Australian team that included Stan McCabe and "Uncle" Bill Kippax. It was a pleasure to split a pint with McCabe and Kippax, an embarrassment for me to be in the company of Bradman—the last man with whom I'd want to go fishing. But Bradman was great, the greatest in his sport then and probably the all-time greatest.

No doubt the selection of "the greatest" is subjective and determined by criteria which can be arbitrary. It isn't always "the champ," as some of the shoddy chapters of prize-fight history have revealed. But in my book, the determining factor will be the distance between the winner and his competitors—not merely the records, which fade and are replaced by others who follow and profit from advanced techniques, better equipment and other aids unknown to earlier generations.

'Year Two' Under Way In Trudeau Timetable

By ANTHONY WESTELL

Westell

OTTAWA — Pierre Elliott Trudeau begins his second year as prime minister today with the legislative and political priorities clearly established:

- The major bills and policy initiatives which will headline the throne speech in the fall are already moving forward from the Task Forces to the committees of cabinet with their new powers of decision-making;
- The government is grasping for the initiative with the intention of forcing the pace of constitutional negotiations with the provinces;
- Trudeau has identified the parliamentary and party problems he intends to tackle in the second 12 months.

This ability to plan ahead, after years of government on a crisis-to-crisis basis, is one measure of Trudeau's achievement during his first year of power.

Another significant measure, after years of instability and uncertainty, is the national atmosphere of confidence that there is a government in command in Ottawa able not only to make plans but also to carry them through.

A year ago today, when Trudeau went to Rideau Hall to submit his first, makeshift cabinet to the Governor-General, there was no such assurance abroad in Canada.

There was deep-seated concern that the country's finances were out of control and widespread disillusion with parliamentary institutions.

High in Polls

The minority government had been defeated in the Commons only two months before, and Opposition Leader Robert Stanfield was high in popularity polls, raising the spectre of another deadlock. The nation's political fever chart was up and the outlook was uncertain.

When he won the Liberal leadership two weeks earlier, Trudeau had said he saw no need for an early election. But his view quickly changed when he examined the dangers of leading a minority government against an invigorated opposition — particularly at a time when financial stringency would allow the new administration no room for positive programming.

He decided that stability and restoration of confidence in the ability of Ottawa to govern must be the first goal, and he achieved this objective by winning a majority in the election on June 25.

The next task was to take control of a bureaucratic establishment which had, for years, been at least the equal in power of the elected government.

Changing the course of the federal administration is rather like turning around an ocean liner in a narrow river. It takes time and distance to slow the ship down to a stop, and a lot of pushing, pulling and manoeuvring to get it headed in the new direction.

In other items, there is a lead time of about 18 months in conceiving and implementing new policies. This sort of delay is intensely frustrating for political activists, but unavoidable if the desire is to approach the making of a policy in a calm and reasonable atmosphere in which all points of view can be invited to contribute.

Tax Reform Set

This has been Trudeau's technique, and it is producing a program for Year Two which will be well prepared if not particularly exciting.

Reform of the tax system—a sort of post Carter Report—and a massive overhaul of labor laws will be the major legislative business before Parliament in 1969-70.

Reorganization of federal information policy and services, by administrative and probably legislative action, will have surprisingly high priority. The report of the task force is now being written, and Trudeau has already decreed that there will be early action upon it.

He argues: (A) Greater public participation and in-put to decision-making demands, first, much better government out-put of information to the public; (B) The federal authority must better explain its activities and services to the public or run the risk of having its power base eroded by provincial governments.

The white paper on foreign policy, leading to a new defence orientation, will also be a major initiative this political year. It will seek to divert some Canadian attention from the Atlantic area to Latin America and the Pacific.

On the constitutional front, the federal government is ready to lay proposals on limitation of its spending power before the provinces. It will propose a formula by which federal spending outside its specific areas of jurisdiction will require the consent of the provinces.

This will add to the federal proposals already on the table — for example, reform of the Senate and the Supreme Court — and will be an additional pressure on the provinces to get beyond generalities to specifics of constitutional reform.

"They started this, and we're going to keep it up until they cry 'uncle'" said a federal expert with relish this week.

He foresaw the possibility, if political events fall out right in Quebec, of speedy action to rewrite the constitution during the next year, simply to get the problem out of the way and some long term stability established.

Trudeau's major failure during the year, and the problem he is determined to tackle in year two, is to work out a better relationship between the government and its parliamentary supporters.

He is reasonably well satisfied with his cabinet and plans no major changes this summer.

There have been questions about Mitchell Sharp's performance in external affairs, but no change is likely, unless he wishes to quit.

Secretary Shuffle

He will, however, reshuffle parliamentary secretaries to bring a new group of backbenchers into association with the administration, and there is a proposal to broaden involvement yet further by raising committee chairmen to the status of parliamentary secretaries.

But Trudeau's political problem in year two is that programmed government is no substitute for the careless rapture of a year ago. Reason is not as exciting as revolution, and the absence of crisis does not stimulate interest.

Trudeau had hoped that the Liberal Party would keep public opinion at the grass roots tuned in to the government and would serve as a vehicle for political activists.

But he now knows that a lot more effort and attention will be needed this year to prevent the party from going to sleep until the next election, as has been the custom in the past.

A Leningrad Woman Draws a Starved Man on a Child's Sled

The City Where a Million Died

THE 900 DAYS. THE SIEGE OF LENINGRAD, by Harrison E. Salisbury. Fitzhenry and Whiteside, $12.50.

Reviewed by T. Rickwood

The visitor to Leningrad is struck by the painted notices along the left-hand side of the Nevsky Prospect, warning that "In case of shelling this side is the most dangerous."

These blue and white signs are now the only indication of the German blockade of Leningrad, the terrible three-year siege when almost a million people perished from starvation, cold, disease and bombing.

The misfortunes of other European cities during the Second World War pale into insignificance beside the massive scale of misery and suffering endured by the inhabitants of the former Russian capital. Now, for the first time, the English-speaking reader has been provided with a full account of this tragedy.

A distinguished American journalist, Harrison Salisbury spent five years in Moscow as correspondent to The New York Times and travelled widely throughout the Soviet Union. His experiences, impressions and observations were conveyed in several popular books and in 1955 he was awarded the Pulitzer Prize for his series Russia Re-Viewed.

Many Years' Work

His book on the Leningrad blockade was first conceived in 1944 when he interviewed survivors and witnesses of the siege. Since then he has painstakingly sifted through the voluminous Russian-langauge sources — memoirs, diaries, military histories and Communist Party publications — methodically compiling material on an event almost unknown to the western world.

The result of his labors is an authoritative, magnificently documented and shattering description of life (and death) in Leningrad from 1941-44 when the Germans sought to starve and bomb the city into defeat.

Although written in five parts, the book falls naturally into two halves. The early chapters depict the accumulation by the Soviet intelligence service during the spring of 1941 of overwhelming evidence that Germany was planning an invasion of Russia.

Stunning Blitzkrieg

One Soviet agent, Richard Sorge, even submitted a report that the attack was scheduled for the early hours of June 22 of that year. And yet Stalin stubbornly rejected this growing body of proof, so confident was he that Hitler would respect the Nazi-Soviet Pact of 1939. Indeed, some Soviet citizens were severely disciplined for spreading alarmist and "provocative" rumors.

The blow fell at 3 a.m. on June 22, 1941, at precisely the moment indicated earlier by Sorge. At various points along the Soviet border the Germans mounted a stunning Blitzkrieg for which the Russian troops were completely unprepared, both militarily and psychologically.

Stalin's Vain Hope

Within hours German armor was rolling eastwards while the local Soviet commanders, desperately radioing for instructions, were ordered to avoid provoking the Germans by firing in self-defence. The order was Stalin's. Incredibly, he still refused to believe that war had actually begun and for several hours after the invasion clung to the vain hope that Hitler was merely staging an elaborate military bluff.

In a matter of weeks the Baltic areas were being over-run, with the most appalling losses in Soviet troops and equipment.

By late summer the Germans were at the very gates of Leningrad. Only the most frenzied measures prevented them from breaking through into the city, although with their superiority in armor and total control of the air it seemed only a matter of time before they did so. Digging in their mammoth siege guns, the Germans started a savage bombardment of Leningrad.

Everyone was a skeleton.

Relentlessly the enemy closed its cirle of steel around the city and with the fall of the vital rail link of Mga, Leningrad was effectively cut off from the rest of Russia. The blockade had begun. It is to this that the book's second half is devoted.

The winter of 1941 came early and was of exceptional severity. Without railway communications, food shipments ceased and strict rationing was introduced in an effort to conserve the city's almost exhausted supplies; only the defending troops received anything like normal rations.

As food stocks diminished, the ration was brutally cut again and again. Soon the loss of one's ration card was tantamount to a death sentence. The theft of food coupons and the raiding of supply depots became so frequent that stringent police control of the city had to be instituted.

Uncontrolled Fires

Even before winter had properly begun fuel ran out and most of the power stations ceased operation; electricity was reserved exclusively for essential establishments.

Public transport ground to a halt, the water pipes froze and drinking water was obtained by melting snow. (One result of the breakdown of the water-pumping system was the helplessness of the fire-fighting service to cope with the fires now starting to rage uncontrolled.) Deprived of central heating, the ordinary citizens took to demolishing fences and timber buildings for their stoves and when these were no longer available they smashed up their own furniture for firewood. In this struggle to resist the intense cold many priceless personal libraries were reduced to ashes.

By the end of 1941, deaths from starvation, cold, disease and shelling had soared to the thousands. Everywhere on the streets were seen childrens' sledges bearing corpses to the cemetery. Finally, chronic under-nourishment brought the populace to such a state of physical exhaustion that the digging of individual graves became impossible and army sappers dynamited mass graves for the dead.

Cannibalism

As the toll mounted, corpses were simply heaped in mounds on the streets, while in private dwellings people lived side by side with the frozen bodies of their relatives. The most tragic document of this period is the diary of an eleven-year-old schoolgirl, Tanya Savicheva, who thus recorded the death of her entire family:

"Z—Zhenya died 28 December, 12:30 in the morning, 1941. B—Babushka died 25 January, 3 o'clock, 1942. L—Leka died 17 March, 5 o'clock in the morning, 1942. D—Dyadya Vasya died 13 April, 2 o'clock at night, 1942. D—Dyadya Lesha, 10 May, 4 o'clock in the afternoon, 1942. M—Mama, 13 May, 7:30 a.m., 1942. S—Savichevs died. All died. Only Tanya remains."

At the peak of the food crisis, when rations consisted of a few grams of bread, the starving Leningraders were supplementing their diet with dogs, rats, leather, wood-bark, and even joiner's glue. The ultimate in horror was the practice of cannibalism. 'Fraternities' of cannibals came into existence who collectively murdered, dismembered, cooked and ate the flesh of their fellow humans.

On the streets were frequently found the discarded heads of those who had been killed for food.

Culture Goes On

Salisbury's book is an indict-

in this resistance to suffering must surely be the public performance of Shostakovich's Seventh Symphony, broadcast to the entire Soviet Union and relayed to Europe and North America. Though gravely weakened, the spirit of the Leningraders remained unbroken.

Realizing that nothing less than total extinction through hunger threatened the city, the President of the Soviet Union, Mikhail Kalinin, suggested to Stalin that food be transported to Leningrad across frozen Lake Ladoga, situated to the east. Thus there came into being the famous ice road or ('Road of Life') as the Leningraders named it.

Vast Campaign

Despite great loss of life, the ice road succeeded in supplying the beleaguered city with the most urgently needed commodities. At the same time large numbers of citizens were evacuated to safety over the ice, including many children whom the authorities had been unable to save before the city was sealed off.

When the long-awaited spring arrived in April, 1942, the Leningraders were now mere skeletons, recuperating in the sun from their hideous ordeal. A vast campaign was launched to restore the city to something approaching normal life: thousands of corpses were removed from the streets and private homes, bath-houses were re-opened (it had been impossible to wash for several months), convalescent centres were established and — the final symbol of rebirth — tramcars went back into service on April 15th, 1942.

Unknown Toll

The siege dragged on for a further two years but never were conditions allowed to deteriorate again to the barbaric level of the early months. Not until January 27, 1944, when rockets were discharged over scarred Leningrad, were the inhabitants able to celebrate the final lifting of the blockade.

The cost in human life can never be known. According to official Soviet sources it is reckoned at under 700,000, while unofficial estimates put it as high as a million dead.

Salsbury's book is an indictment of the Soviet system under Stalin, whose blindness almost brought about the destruction of one of Europe's great cities; but far more importantly is it a tribute to the magnificently tenacious, unyielding spirit of the Leningraders. The Nine Hundred Days, will do much towards fulfilling the hope expressed by the Leningrad poetess, Olga Berggoltz, who wrote of the blockage:

Let no one forget;
Let nothing be forgotten.

Who're More Devoted to Sport (And Drink) Than Canadians?

SPORTS AND GAMES IN CANADIAN LIFE, 1700 to the Present, by Nancy and Maxwell Howell. Macmillan, $8.95.

Reviewed by R. G. Lawrence

Not everyone will get excited about an account of the games that people play today and played away back in 1700. Yet as social history this book holds a considerable interest.

Only those fanatics with incredible memories are likely to find significant the information that Alex McPherson threw the light hammer 91½ feet in Montreal in 1857. (That hammer weighed 14 pounds, in case anyone wants to know. The heavy one weighed 21 pounds, and Alex could fling it only 66 feet.) Do you recall the walking-for-charity projects popular a year or two ago? Back in 1880 the winner of a walkathon completed 263 miles.

The book has thousands of conversation-filler statistics of this kind, but if the casual reader chooses to skim over them rapidly he will find other rewards.

Among the pleasures are the amusing, if not enlightening, illustrations, including stern men in 'convict' jerseys, earnest girls in the voluminous ensembles appropriate for basketball in 1922, smiling Barbara Ann Scott, smiling Marilyn Bell and smiling Nancy Greene.

A reader will learn quite a bit about Canadian history too: the difficulties of communication and travel two centuries ago, the isolation and the limited social life, the impact of climate on all activities, the gradual development of leisure, the emancipation created by the motor car, and the fact that Canada has imported more games than it has exported.

There is, however, just cause for patriotic pride in the knowledge that we either invented or contributed significantly to the development of lacrosse, hockey, canoeing, snowshoeing and curling.

TEARING OUT EYES

It would appear that sports were once not as genteel as they are today. Many games ended in a brawl, and as for boxing, "their whole aim is bent on tearing out each other's eyes, in doing which they make the forefinger of the right hand fast in their antagonist's hair, and with the thumb — as they term it — 'gouge out the day-lights.' If they fail in this attempt, they depend entirely on their teeth for conquest, and a fraction of a nose, half an ear, or a piece of lip, is generally the trophy of the victor." (1870)

Someone in Winnipeg reported in 1875 that "many people are under the impression that whiskey and curling go hand in hand." The fact that Toronto's annual checkers championship took place in Varcoe's tavern may have contributed to the sometime popularity of that game.

TV INFLUENCE

Did you know that once quoiting was one of Canada's most popular sports? Have you ever paused to think about the impact of the bicycle on Canadian life? Can you remember when the Saturday half-holiday was introduced, with its significant effect on sports?

Sports and Games has many entertaining anecdotes, with interesting comments on how certain sports rise and fall in popularity and on the influence of television in recent years.

It is often a pleasure to be reminded of "big names" in the world of sport who have retired or are deceased (Louis Cyr, for instance, is reported to have lifted 4,556 lbs).

Some readers may complain that they are offered more sporting statistics than they really want or need (for them the index may be useful), while others may seek to draw some profound conclusion from the statement that "no country in the world is more devoted to sports than Canada."

Canada Racing Role Described

NORTHERN DANCER AND HIS FRIENDS, by Trent Frayne, $4.95, Longmans.

Reviewed by Pete Sallaway

Chronicling the important contribution made by Canadian thoroughbreds, owners, breeders, trainers and jockeys to international racing, Frayne's latest book provides interesting reading for the followers of the sport of kings.

The short but sensational career of E. P. Taylor's Northern Dancer occupies the honored spot of the first chapter. Here is told the full history of the stocky, full-chested colt which won the Kentucky Derby in two minutes flat, the fastest time ever.

TRIALS OF JOCKEY

Following chapters cover the trials and tribulations of being a jockey; Canadian trainer Frank Merill's winning way with horses; racing's most successful jockey Johnny Longden (who now in his role of trainer boasts a top-ranking Kentucky Derby candidate with Frank McMahon's Majestic Prince).

Also described are the peaks and hollows of trainer Lou Cavalaris whose Dancer's Image won and lost last year's Kentucky Derby when a urine test revealed a drug, a day at E. P. Taylor's annual yearling sales, and a closing chapter on the performance of Canadian-breds in international competition which includes a mention of British Columbia's own George Royal.

History Told With Style and Wit

ASPECTS OF ANTIQUITY: DISCOVERIES, by M. I. Finley, Macmillan, 1969. 228 pp. $2.15.

Reviewed by Peter L. Smith

What is required of the scholar who wishes to address a wide general audience? His academic achievement must be vast and compelling if his opinions are to carry authority. He must have strength and clarity of style; the ability to simplify without distortion; total freedom from pomposity or condescension; above all, the gifts of wit, vitality and humanity.

Although hundreds of popular books on the ancient world have appeared in the last decade, only a handful of their authors have met these tough requirements. One of the happy few is M. I. Finley, the distinguished reader in ancient social and economic history at Cambridge University.

Aspects of Antiquity is a reissue in paperback of a collection of essays first published in 1968. It can be recommended without reservations. Readers who know Finley's famous study The World of Odysseus will recall his skill in creating a memorable vision of ancient society: the vision is imaginative and personal, but it is derived from a profound understanding of the evidence.

This collection provides similarly masterful statements of social history; for example, brilliant essays on ancient slavery (one of Finley's specialities) and "the silent women of Rome."

SENSE OF UNITY

As well, Finley offers penetrating studies of major figures in the Greco-Roman tradition — Pindar, Thucydides, Socrates, Plato, Diogenes, and Diocletian. Interpersed in the collection are provocative articles on Minoan Crete, the Trojan War, the Etruscans, and Christian historiography.

Almost all of the essays were originally written as independent articles for journals such as The Listener, The New Statesman, and Horizon. One might therefore expect a series of random and miscellaneous papers.

On the contrary, there is an increasing sense of unity as the individual essays gradually illuminate the contours of the ancient world. And as the ancient world comes into focus, so does our own modern society.

Finley's greatest strength may be this conviction of the contemporary relevance of historical enquiry: "It seems ... to be inherent in human existence to turn and return to the past (much as powerful voices may urge us to give it up). The more precisely we listen and the more we become aware of its pastness, even of its near-inaccessibility, the more meaningful the dialogue becomes. In the end, it can be only a dialogue in the present, about the present."

A Whiff From Bowels of Diabolic Creativity

THE WHOLE BLOODY BIRD, by Irving Layton, McClelland and Stewart. $5.95.

Reviewed by Donna E. Smyth

Phallus-struck, red-faced and bombastic, Irving Layton, Canada's angry middle-aged poet, comes off again in his latest volume called The Whole Bloody Bird.

Written in 1968 while the poet, financed by the Canada Council, was travelling in Greece, Israel, India and Nepal, the book is a collection of observations, aphorisms and poems fathered by Layton during his trip.

The title derives from a comparison between Baudelaire, who once wrote that "the bird of madness brushed me with its wings," and Layton, who says, in effect, "That's nothing; I've been clawed by the whole bloody bird." Layton's fans will recognize the poet's innate distaste for admitting defeat in any area of experience. Layton, according to Layton, is first in poetry, first in bed, and even first, by God, in suffering.

Throughout the three sections of this book, Layton's admiration for Nietzche is evident, not only in the aphorisms, but in his attempt to walk the fine line of madness between passion and satire. When Layton succeeds, one does indeed detect a whiff of burning sulphur escaping from the bowels of diabolic creativity; when he fails, one feels that it is, despite the poet's protestations to the contrary, from an excess of sanity, not madness. Most often, the failures occur when Layton becomes preoccupied with his pose as the rebel-poet:

"A poet generates
the electricity
he needs by swimming against the current."

LAYTON
. . . he's first

The awareness is obviously self-conscious rather than perceptively conscious and one is tempted to reverse the tangled metaphors and wish that the poet would either sink or be turned off.

An even more catastrophic end could be wished when Layton plays with his over-worked anaolgy between sex and poetry:

"Poetry is a delayed sexual climax in which ecstasy and execution
are one."

As Layton should know by now, the reader's loins fail to quiver when the art of seduction is ignored. In both sex and art, the blatant grab most often results in a slap on the back of the wrist and a yawn.

On the other hand, when Layton regains his tightrope balance, he scores with his own mixture of vulgarity and vitriol.

Canadian patriotism receives a particularly rough ride:

"Canadians are a good people
I can find nothing else to say against them."

The poet's contempt for quiet mediocrity is as refreshing as his admiration of American propaganda is depressing. Some of the longer poems, such as Elephant and Hills and Hills, are notable for their craftsmanship and control.

The effect is described by Layton in The Skull:

"I want to write poems
as clean and dry and as impertinent
as this skull."

On the evidence of this book, it seems that Layton is really more successful as a poet than as a writer of prose and aphorisms. He is only boring when his performance fails to live up to his boasting.

Ada Follows Lolita

Coming in May: a new novel by the author of Lolita. Vladimir Nabokov's Ada concerns a life-long love affair between an aristocratic Russian living in America and his half-sister. It takes the form of a memoir and is filled with intellectual, erotic and creative adventures.

Getting Rich Half the Fun

By AL FORREST

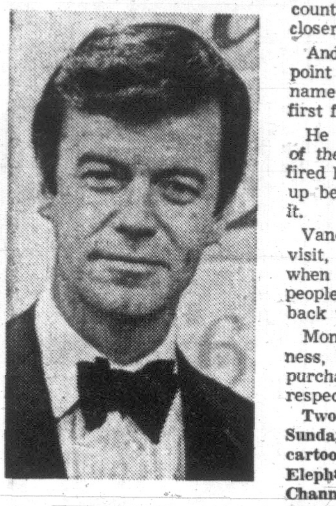
This week CTV did a study of Canada's fourth largest city . . . the 500,000 Canadians living in Los Angeles.

Holding the spotlight were the show business celebrities who have left the CBC for the big time.

There was the usual chatter about how there were no opportunities for the creative artist in Canada . . . or, "the CBC just didn't understand me."

But the theme of the study was money.

Director Norman Jewison who did "In the Heat of the Night" and William Shatner of "Star Trek',, couldn't find much coin in Montreal. But it was there in Hollywood.



PINSENT
. . . road to affluence

And it was attracting hundreds more.

The most recent arrival is Gordon Pinsent, who left Canada as soon as his Quentin Durgens series was discontinued. It was at a welcome-to-Hollywood party thrown for Pinsent that the expatriates gathered to let down their hair and talk about the poor old days.

Making money is nice, one ex-Canadian said. You're no richer because it goes out as quickly as it comes in . . . but people feel differently and act differently towards you and that makes it all worthwhile.

And that, it seems, is what Twentieth Century North America — up to now — has been all about. Winning respect through wealth.

One former Vancouver writer who was interviewed at some length was my old buddy Richie Eustis who worked for me when I was sports editor way back in 1956 in New Westminster.

We paid Richie $52 a week in those days and we told him if he kept at it he could move up quickly and be making . . . oh, $90 or maybe even $100 per week within a few short years.

One day he put down his pencil said: "Nuts! I'm going to be rich and famous!"

He quit, went to CBC Toronto and later to Hollywood.

Today he's making his $100 per week . . . plus. At last count he reckoned it was closer to $35,000 per year.

And just to underline the point he shortened his first name from Richie to just the first four letters.

He loves to recall that one of the big Vancouver papers fired him and told him to give up because he'd never make it.

Vancouver? A great town to visit, he says. Particularly when he bumps into the people he used to know away back when.

Money doesn't buy happiness, but $35,000 a year does purchase a fair measure of respect.

Two don't-miss telecasts on Sunday are the excellent cartoon feature Barbar the Elephant at 8:30 p.m. on Channel 8 and the long-delayed study of former Prime Minister Pearson at 10 p.m. on Channel 6.

Some of the funniest lines of the week came out of the TV coverage of the NDP convention in Vancouver.

The CBC rushed an announcer over to John Conway after he trailed on the first ballot and asked whether he was going to fight it out to the end or withdraw.

"I can't withdraw," Conway explained. "I've been knocked off the ballot."

"Well, at what point do you plan to withdraw?"

Meanwhile Channel 8 was being even funnier. While awaiting the results of the final ballot between Tom Berger and Dave Barrett, CTV sent a man over to Barrett to ask if he thought this ballot would be decisive.

Barrett choked and then deadpanned: "Yes, I should think so."

"It won't go beyond this ballot then?"

"It can't. This is the last ballot."

"So you're convinced this ballot will be decisive?"

"It has to be. It is the last ballot. It's all in the can now."

If the bosses of the two stations were watching, it would have been in the can for some announcers, too.

PUPPETS PERFORMING musical parodies is one of the unique highlights of the Russian Festival coming to Memorial Arena next Saturday. The puppet theatre of Igor Divov and Natalia Stepanova thrills children and adults wherever it has appeared. The great Piatnitsky Ensemble of 90 singers, instrumentalists and dancers, ballet and acrobatic stars are also with the company.

Elsdons Run the Show

Stage direction for Victoria Operatic Society of Lerner and Loewe's famous musical, My Fair Lady, is a family affair with Harry and June Elsdon handling all responsibility including the choreography.

Musical director is Howard Denike.

My Fair Lady is to be staged at McPherson Playhouse from May 26 through May 31 with a Saturday matinee.

With a chorus of 34, the principal parts are being taken by Anthony Jenkins (Professor Higgins), Janet Senior (Eliza), Barry Grimshaw (Alfred Doolittle), Thomas Sherwood (Colonel Pickering), and Bill Dyson (Freddy).

Victoria Operatic Society is confident of repeating the success of its last two productions, Brigadoon and Desert Song.

Soap Opera Cleaned Up

LONDON (Reuters) — Mrs. Dale closes her diary Friday after faithfully recording the trivia of 21 years as a doctor's wife — and millions will be left without their favorite radio soap opera.

The BBC is dropping Mrs. Dale's Diary, its longest-running daily serial, after 21 years and three months and more than 5,000 episodes.

'Head Bad Guy' Aching to Go Straight

HOLLYWOOD (CP) — Steve Ihnat, a Canadian actor from Lynden, Ont., near Hamilton, can't complain about the money in Hollywood, but he would like to change his super-villain image.

Ihnat, 34, earned about $70,000 for villain roles in television's Mission: Impossible, Mannix and Gunsmoke; and in Marlon Brando's film, The Chase, and Madigan, with Richard Widmark and Henry Fonda.

"I was the head bad guy in all of them," Ihnat said in an interview. "It's really a heluva sport I'm in, a killer type waiting for his shot at the top roles.

"Producers really don't want to take a chance on off-beat casting, but James Coburn made the big jump after years of great villian performances.

"I'm hoping it'll work out the same way for me."

Ihnat's hopes were boosted when he appeared in a Mannix episode which has been nominated for an Emmy award. He played a "wiggy professional killer who has Mike Connors locked in a room and is toying with him before knocking him off."

HOOKED AS CHILD

"I just want to be offered the kind of parts that go to Rod Steiger or Anthony Quinn."

Ihnat became hooked on acting when he played a child role in an amateur theatre near Lynden.

"I knew this was the only thing I wanted to do with my life."

After attending acting classes in Canada and playing in amateur theatre, Inhat attended the Pasadena Playhouse.

He took out United States citizenship and served in Korea. On his return, he won roles in Highway Patrol, starring Broderick Crawford, and advanced to what he feels is an awkward stage of his career.

"My career is at the phase where everybody sees me in a part and says, 'Oh yeah, there's 'watsiface' playing another whacked-out killer.' "

And that's the part Ihnat wants to change.

Russian Festival Group In One-Night Stand Here

The first Russian Festival to tour North America was brought to this continent in 1959 by United States impresario Sol Hurok. It appeared with spectacular success in a few Canadian cities.

Several Russian Festival programs were presented as part of the World Festival of the Performing Arts at Expo '67.

The current Russian Festival tour includes 13 cities across Canada.

Victorians will have a single opportunity to see and hear this remarkable company of 110 artists next Saturday evening at Memorial Arena.

One of the highlights will be the Piatnitsky Ensemble, a giant choir which includes dancers as well as musicians. The Piatnitsky Choir is the oldest and most popular in the USSR.

It will perform approximately 20 numbers during the program, mostly folk material utilizing the company dancers.

Acrobatic dancers, principals of the Leningrad Kirov Opera and Ballet, an intriguing Soviet puppet troupe and a celebrated balalaika virtuoso will also perform.

Natalia Makarova and Sergi Vikulov, both of whom became stars of the Kirov in the early 1960's, will perform extracts from Swan Lake and The Sleeping Beauty.

From the opera wing of the same company will come Boris Shtokolov, a basso noted for his performances of Boris Godonov and Mephistopheles.

The puppet mastery of Igor Divov and Natalia Stephanova who will stage a series of musical puppet parodies, is quite different to anything of the kind and completely captivating.

Tickets for the Russian Festival are on sale at Famous Artists box office, Kents Ltd., Fort Street.

NOW . . . Pretension Resented

By RUSSELL FREETHY

Freethy

Songwriter-singer of some note, Randy Newman was recently quoted by a national magazine as saying: "I resent Paul Simon's belief in himself as a poet. I resent his pretention. I don't like people who never come out of the meadow, or never make a sound louder than 'ah'.

"And Donovan's another of the same.

"He gets a little too precious for me sometimes. Everything isn't alway as nice as people like to make it out to be.

"People say that today it's the lyrics that matter. I don't think so. I don't honestly believe that any 17-year-old is interested in hearing about 'the shadows of his mind'."

Think on this statement for awhile, and then consider both Simon's and Donovan's latest it records, To Susan on the West Coast Waiting and The Boxer.

These songs are both poems set to music and perhaps a 17-year-old doesn't really care about the lyrics, but, he or she is probably quite capable of recognizing or reading into them the message or a meaning.

Undoubtedly much more capable than someone only a few years older whose recorded literature was restricted to the wonderful words of Berry, Penniman, Otis, and Blackwell.

SIMPLE MESSAGES

Donovan's messages in "Susan" are extremely simple and are particularly obvious in the line "And Andy in Vietnam Supposedly Hating." I don't think that Donovan is being too precious in this passage; I think he is being most profound.

The Boxer is an extremely complicated, almost excessive discourse on some weighty matter in Simon's mind. Some of us consider the boxer to be representative of the United States, and as the subject of this poem the sound it makes is much louder than "ah".

As for Paul Simon being a little pretentious in considering himself a poet, it seems all that is necessary to justify such a belief is a quick glimpse of the lyrics of Sounds of Silence.

Newman is also known to think himself a poet, and he also has written some nice verse on occasion.

Apple Records, the international corporate arm of the Beatles, has formed a low-priced longplay line.

Two of the albums scheduled for immediate release are a new Mr. and Mrs. Lennon effort titled Unfinished Music No. 2 — Life With the Lions and a George Harrison-composed electronic offering recorded with a Moog Synthesizer.

Other albums to follow in the future include a spoken-word thing by poet-essayist Allen Ginsburg, and a recording of one of the last concerts given by the immortal Lenny Bruce.

Composer-singer poet Rod McKuen's birthday concert on April 29th at Carnegie Hall will be taped in its entirety by Warner Brothers for a two album set.

70 PER CENT NEW

The program will be about 70 per cent new material and the song stylings of McKuen will be complemented by a thirty-six piece orchestra.

The Guess Who have just added the finishing touches to their next lp. Haven't heard it yet, but it is called Canned Wheat.

Bassist for the Jefferson Airplane, Jack Cassidy, is finally getting some of the recognition he deserves. He was named "best pop bass player" in the Jazz and Pop Magazine poll.

Jeff Beck, whose recent North American tour had to be cancelled on account of his collapse in Minneapolis last month, is reportedly doing well under his personal physician's care in London.

$250,000 LOSS

The ten cancelled engagements represented an estimated loss of a quarter of a million dollars. An impressive figure considering the group has not had a hit record.

Vancouver's Tom Northcott has just returned from an extended visit to England. He worked clubs all over England and recorded some material with well-known producer Tony Hatch.

It's good to have Tom back with us. He is a very talented young man who has gone through many changes and trying times during his career, his recent trip to England being no exception. Here's hoping he will soon perform locally for us.

Tonight, Gulliver's Travels will be appearing in the Ore Room of The Forge. Cal Batchelor has quit the group, leaving only a trio, but they will still put out enough music to satisfy most people.

His Perfection Goal Constantly Raised

By BERYL PROUDMAN

The Unforgettable William Kapell, LM2588.

"I shall never return" announced the critic-wounded pianist. William Kapell, at the end of his Australiam tour in 1953 — and he never did for he was killed in the flames of a transpacific airliner on his way back to San Francisco.

Just 31 when he died, Kapell has already won universal recognization as a musical genius and was just on the threshold of enjoying the additional authority of a mature artist when his life was so tragically cut off.

Kapell, Willie to his friends, was born richly endowed with musical talents and irresistable charm but he spent most of his life striving toward a constantly-raised goal of perfection.

IN A FLASH

Born in Manhattan, he entered the arena of public recitals with an electric flash when he was 19 and quickly accumulated awards and honors and became a familiar figure on the concert platform.

His technique was fabulous but for the first ten years of his career he limited himself almost wholly to the easily-communicated works of Khachaturian, Rachmaninoff and Prokofiev.

Though he played older classics he seemed unaware of the differences in style between works of Scarlatti, Mozart and Beethoven.

Always eager to identiy himself with the works of his own time, Kapell particularly enjoyed the music of Aaron Copland and worked courageously and constantly to force audiences to accept difficult modern works which he played with magnificent authority.

'HE WOKE UP'

In 1943 one writer said of him "When he played the music of his own time he woke up and made sense, though he had wandered through the classical musicians like a very efficient somnambulist."

Gradually, between then and the year of his death he was teaching himself to differentiate and appreciate classical composers and had reached considerable mastery in the last two years of his life.

Though he was a loyal and loving son, husband, father and friend, music was his whole conversation. He could not bear to be far away from a piano and if one stood within reach it was only a matter of time before he gravitated to it.

Intelligent, intense and a restless, passionate perfectionist, he was his own sharpest critic. He hotly resented unjust criticism tending to forget all the accolades and brood on adverse comments.

It soon became apparent that he was a born performer with fire and power to rouse audiences to frenzied excitement. Aware of this power he sometimes feared the responsibility it brought.

Diamond In the Groove

Sometimes, because his awareness of the effect he was having on his audience came between him and his music, he literally turned his head away in an effort to concentrate more completely on his playing.

SOME HAVE PATHETIC

Anyone who is lucky enough to own one of the many records he made, should treasure it as an irreplaceable memorial of this unique, fortunate and yet somehow pathetic young man.

We were lucky enough to be given one called In Memoriam and there is one Chopin recital in the public library that, despite its venerable hiss shows his unusual greatness as a performer.

One record, a collection of performances taped between 1945 and 1951 and so not representative of his highest achievement, is still available.

This disc, The Unforgettable William Kapell contains a powerful, driving version of Khachaturian's Piano Concerto made when he was 23.

His obvious enjoyment of its modern discordance shows him a man of his age and his enormous power makes the most of the stunning crushed dissonances; while the lyrical running passages display his amazing dexterity and are laden with a young man's romantic rhapsodic emotion.

Liszt's Mephisto Waltz, a show-piece of diabolical demands was always one of his favorites and this interpretation realizes all its flashing brilliance.

SPANISH FLAVOR

In Alberniz' Evocacion he brings out the Spanish flavor of the evocative guitar-bassed work and he makes the broad melody of Rachmaninoff's 18th variation of a theme by Pagaininising with great appeal.

Had he lived to be a hundred, this would have ensured him the perpetual freshness of youth tragically bestowed on him by untimely death.

Did Oliver Really Deserve The Big Prize?

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — There were grumbles from Motion Picture Academy oldtimers who said of last Monday's Oscar show: "It wasn't like it used to be." To which most observers would comment: "Thank heaven."

Gower Champion's masterminding of the 41st awards show brought Oscar into the jet age at long last. Gone was the musty, fussy tradition that had made the Academy broadcast one of the great yawns of the year.

At the Oscar Ball after the telecast, Academy President Gregory Peck was complimented on the streamlined presentation.

"Wait till next year," he said with a twinkle.

Peck has hopes of making the show even more appealing. He also is going ahead with plans to re-examine Academy membership, with the aim of making the awards more reflective of real achievement in the film world.

This week's winners again underscored the need for change. Many observers questioned whether Oliver deserved to be the top winner.

This movie-goer found Oliver to be the most entertaining film of 1968. But as cinematic achievements, The Lion in Winter and Romeo and Juliet seemed far more deserving of the best-picture award.

LIKE ENTERTAINMENT

The Academy voters, the majority in the over-50 age class, seem to favor movies that entertain.

Oscar never fails to provide at least one surprise each year. This time it was the Katharine Hepburn-Barbra Streisand tie.

There was no question about the legitimacy of this year's tie. But a cloud remains over the previous one.

In 1932, balloting was much more informal, and the word got around town that Fredric March had won as best actor for Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde. Wallace Beery thought he should win for The Champ and he expressed his feelings to his boss, Louis B. Mayer.

As a founder of the Academy and perhaps the most powerful man in Hollywood, Mayer could move mountains —or the Academy. A tie between March and Beery was announced at the Academy banquet that year.

CBC Contract Calls for TV Opera Shows

TORONTO (CP)—The CBC announced Friday it has signed a two-year contract with the British Broadcasting Corporation and National Educational Television in the United States to produce operas for television.

Douglas Nixon, director of entertainment programming for the CBC's English television network, said in a statement each network will contribute not less than one opera production for telecast in all three countries.

The three networks will share costs of producing the operas.

CAPTIVATING MICE in the Swiss cheese are four lasses who were winners in several speech arts festival classes and were selected by the adjudicator to compete Thursday for a special award. The cheese is actually a decorative wall treatment at Blanshard School and the mice—er, girls—are, counter clockwise, Cathie Masters, Susan Donald, Roberta Stillin and Marie Stillin who came out the winner. Duncan Singer Wins Bowl

An almost impossible task faced piano adjudicator Ronald Smith, Friday night, when he had to decide between three exceptional City of Victoria Medallion contenders.

Each had gifts that could take them a long way, he said, and each had played music perfectly suited to her individual style and ability.

Susan de Burgh, Allison Marshall and Frances Crampton were the artists and no one could have envied the adjudicator his task.

But a decision had to be made and the award went to Miss Marshall who played a long, difficult and brilliantly colorful suite by Villa Lobos.

The Medallion competition was preceded by a junior championship play-off for five young pianists, the "grandmother of the group" to quote the adjudicator, being 15 and the youngest, 12.

In this too the standard of performance was exceptional and caused some soul-searching before a winner was picked. The J. F. K. English Award, a substantial bursary, finally was made to Wendy Stofer.

Her runners-up were Stephen Calder, Heline Barker, Heather Pidcock and Janet Pennington.

Three singers, Laura Groos, Barbara Ebell and Sylvia Furneaux, had been selected by John Churchill as Rose Bowl contenders. The winner was Miss Furneaux of Duncan who sang Elizabeth's Prayer from Tannhauser.

Among other awards that have been decided so far, are the Hilda King Bursary for sight reading, 13 to 21 years, Frances Crampton; for piano ensemble, 12 to 21 years, duettists David Jewkes and Rhonda Kwiram.

Victoria Registered Music Teachers Association awards in the piano, under 15 class, Wendy Stofer.

Conservatory of Music bursary for highest mark in piano under 17, Carrie Humphreys.

Xi Nu Chapter Beta Sigma Phi Sorority Award for highest mark in Bach piano classes, Benjamin Wood.

There are a number of other awards yet to be announced. All will be presented at the highlights concert at the McPherson Playhouse next Saturday.

THREE TOP pianists from open classes competed for the coveted City of Victoria Medallion, Friday. Good friends who share many of their musical experiences, they are, left to right, Frances Crampton, Allison Marshall, the winner, and Susan de Burgh. All won high praise from the adjudicator. FESTIVAL TAKES DAY-LONG BREAK

Everybody takes a breather Sunday, and then the Victoria Music Festival is on again for another week.

Monday it's brass and woodwind solo classes at Blanshard School and string solos at Sir James Douglas School auditorium.

Dance sessions begin at Central Junior Secondary School, carry on through Tuesday and conclude with an honor performance Wednesday night.

Many more entries than last year have swelled the school choral section and these classes will begin Wednesday and continue through Friday morning at Oak Bay Junior.

There will be a schools honor performance concert Friday night at Victoria Senior and the whole festival will conclude on a high note Saturday when the highlights concert featuring outstanding performers and award-winners will take place at McPherson Playhouse.

... But Where Were All The City's Music-Lovers?

By AUDREY JOHNSON

There are a great many people in Victoria now who profess to be, and probably are, music-lovers.

Johnson

The increased attendance at symphony concerts is one indication of this.

Thousands of children have become adults in the last 20 years having grown up within an enriching atmosphere of school bands, orchestras and choirs. Not all can have left the area.

But a week of music-making that could lift the heart and freshen the spirit has just passed and a lot of these people never visited a single session.

Don't get me wrong. The Greater Victoria Music Festival has flourished for two decades despite this community's ever-present blight of apathy. And it's not in trouble now.

But I feel sorry for the people who, if they genuinely enjoy music well performed, deprived themselves of some rare experiences.

Many of the younger pianists were a delight and it was a genuine thrill to hear so many splendid performances in the senior section.

Vocal classes were lightly populated but there were many utterly enchanting performances and adjudicator John Churchill was often put to it to do more than nit-pick in his comments on both juvenile and adult choral and ensemble singing.

Ronald Smith, himself a concert pianist well known in England and Europe, who has adjudicated across Canada, has said that Victoria's school of piano performance is second to none in major centres the length and breadth of the country.

That is a profoundly satisfactory statement that, however, hardly comes as a surprise to me.

On the other hand, I feel concern that there should be so few competent adult singers coming up in the major vocal classes.

In a city this size that there should be not one single entry in the male operatic or oratorio classes or in the open bass, baritone, tenor or contralto classes is almost inconceivable.

One can only hope the growth in musical activity and learning opportunities will mend this gap in due course. It will take time, however, for vocal expertise is come by slowly. It cannot, must not, be forced.

Dr. Theodore Karl surprised some of us by coming out with a clear and constructive statement in his final comments to the speech arts people Thursday night.

After visiting several sessions and hearing nothing of value from the adjudicator and having heard comments from many competitors that they were learning nothing, Dr. Karl made a real contribution when he put forward a strong plea that the art of oral communication should be incorporated in school curricula.

He very rightly pointed out that communication through speech is more important than ever in this age and that it is, for the majority, an entirely neglected skill.

It should be, he said, one of the disciplines taught as regularly as writing and reading.

He couldn't be more right. If it were so taught we wouldn't hear the numbers of people attempting to communicate with audiences of all sizes, slurring consonants, swallowing vowels and totally devoid of resonance or the power of projection.

While the 1969 festival still has a week to go, a committee is already at work preparing syllabus material for the 1970 festival.

In fact the festival committees work the year round for nothing but the sheer satisfaction of knowing they are providing the city and the young people with a substantial asset.

Under the chairmanship of president Mrs. Donald Berringer, many people do the preparatory work of the syllabus, program arrangement, hiring of halls and staffing them and a multiplicity of other tasks.

Then during festival weeks, a non-stop marathon is sustained between the office-headquarters and the various centres. Many of the unsung heroines have been at their posts for several years—Mrs. J. F. K. English being the chief. But there are at least a dozen others.

The splendid thing is that they always work smoothly and efficiently together and manage the complexity of the festival with a bare minimum of foul-ups.

A familiar figure at the festival every year is Jack Ingram Smith, named "Clerk of the Festival" in the program. His job, as he sees it is to "help wherever I can."

He was at his post and doing his thing when I first met him. That was when I was an avid music student haunting the pre-war festival halls of learning.

The Doctor Likes Waving His Arms

LONDON (AP) — A middle-aged doctor has hired the Royal Albert Hall, the New Philharmonia Orchestra and pianist Fou Ts'ong to realize his life's dream.

Dr. Michael Bialoguski is spending about $7,200 to make his debut as a symphonic conductor at the age of 52. The program April 29 will include Beethoven's Fourth Symphony and Chopin's Second Piano Concerto.

"I suppose it's inevitable that people will regard me as rather eccentric," said the physician. "But I have always had the dream of becoming a conductor and waving my arms about in front of a great orchestra."

Bialoguski fled from his native Poland during the Second World War and reached Australia with forged papers. He says he was a member of Australia's intelligence service and played a part in the 1954 defection of Soviet spy Vladimir Petrov.

Bialoguski qualifed as a physician in Australia, also took a diploma as a violinist and played occasionally with the Sydney Symphony. Migrating to England, he settled down to medical practice in Epsom, the horse racing centre near London, but his musical ambitions still were strong.

Sir Adrian Boult, one of Britain's leading conductors, gave him some encouragement, and that was enough for Bialoguski. He hired the hall, the orchestra and the soloist.

Scholarship Concert To Feature Singers

Two musical events will be combined on Tuesday, April 29 when Victoria Musical Art Society's final concert of the season will feature the Amity Singers in their fourth annual scholarship concert.

Proceeds of the event will be shared by the two organizations and used for scholarship purposes.

Amity Singers will be conducted by Rodney Webster and accompanied by Winifred Scott. Guest soloists are to be Elinor Bertram, contralto, and Derek MacDermot, baritone.

A wide variety of music will be presented, including 16th century English madrigals, compositions by Brahms and Verdi, Partita Piccola by the contemporary American composer Lex Van Delden, and choruses from Mozart's Magic Flute.

Also featured will be a presentation of the Bach Cantata, God's Time is Best.

This will be accompanied by a small instrumental ensemble of flutes, harpsichord and violoncelli with the continuo bass part played by James Hunter.

Tickets may be obtained from McPherson Playhouse, Victoria Conservatory of Music, Toojays and members of the Amity Singers.

Concert starting time is 8:30 p.m.

MARKET REVIEW

Vitality Continues to Swell In Face of Gloomy Outlook

By NICK FERRIS
Canadian Press Staff Writer

While moving erratically, Canadian stock markets showed a great deal of vitality in the face of discouraging investor atmosphere this week and continued to outpace their United States counterparts.

Trading held at a moderate pace throughout the week.

Although climbing Canadian and U.S. interest rates, tighter money and the tense world political situation have taken the shine off Canadian stock markets, investor optimism still shows through.

Industrials managed to edge up toward their historical high as they posted their fifth consecutive weekly advance.

After starting the week with fractional gains, the group posted small losses Wednesday and Thursday.

However, a strong showing Friday moved the group up.

The industrial group has almost recuperated from a four-week slump that began Feb. 17, the very day it touched its all-time high.

Merchandizers were strong this week with gains Tuesday and Friday erasing losses on other days.

The group has been declining steadily since the beginning of this year despite the buoyant outlook for retail sales.

Retail sales in January were up nine per cent over the corresponding 1968 period and are expected to hold that edge throughout 1969.

But competitive pricing has sliced profit margins, which in turn have depressed earnings.

However, the group's index is selling at 22 times the latest 12-month earnings compared with about 19 per cent at March 31, 1968.

At its peak in July, it was selling as high as 23 times earnings.

Canadian conglomerates continued to slide this week as U.S. conglomerates came under further pressure.

The U.S. Justice Department filed an anti-trust suit against Ling-Temco-Vought, one of the larger U.S. conglomerates, seeking to force the company to divest itself of its stock holdings of Jones and Laughlin Steel Corp., the sixth largest U.S. steel producer.

If successful, the result could adversely affect other U.S. conglomerates and also Canadian conglomerates.

Leslie Rowntree, Ontario financial and commercial affairs minister, said this week that problems raised by conglomerates in the U.S. and in other Canadian provinces will be studied by the Ontario Securities Commission.

On the Canadian and Montreal exchanges, the composite index was up 1.45 to 188.55. Combined volume was 7,113,000 shares compared with 5,866,000 last week. Declines outnumbered advances 177 to 168.

Spy Plane Incident Drops Wall Street

By PHILIP GREER

NEW YORK (WP) — The loss of a U.S. spy plane off the coast of North Korea sent the stock market lower this week and sparked virtually the only burst of activity in otherwise lacklustre trading.

Prices dropped sharply in the first reaction Wednesday morning, but steadied after that — brokers said it was in reaction to the Nixon administration's low-key response — and edged higher through the next two days.

By the end of the week, that flurry just about accounted for the week's loss in the major market indicators.

The Dow Jones industrial average, for one, fell 8.45 points in that session and finished the week with a loss of 8.64 points at 924.82.

Standard and Poor's 500-stock composite was off to 101.24 and the New York Stock Exchange index gave up .26 point to 56.56.

Volume for the week slipped to 48.5 million shares from the 51.94 million turned over a week earlier.

The over-all box score showed 644 issues up and 918 down, compared with 802 winners and 788 losers in the previous week. There were 81 new 1969 highs, off from 94, and 284 new lows, down from 356.

INVESTMENT SCHEME FOR YOUTH SUGGESTED

VANCOUVER (CP) — Arthur Laing minister of public works, said Friday he is "asking questions" about a scheme under which parents could buy securities for their children and hold them for up to 30 years with the interest being tax-free.

"What the plan comes down to is to encourage bringing our securities back to Canada from abroad," he told the annual convention of the B.C. women's Liberal Association.

"And I don't mind admitting . . . I want to foreclose socialism in this country," he said. "This is the Liberal way of doing it."

Adding that it was "just an idea," he said the plan would encourage Canadians to become less hesitant to invest in Canada and allow young people to "own a chunk of their country."

CIL Places Stress On Specialization

MONTREAL (CP) —Leonard Hynes, president of Canadian Industries Ltd., said Friday his company is placing new emphasis on specialization rather than on all-round expansion.

Addressing the company's annual meeting, he said:

"The combination of scale technology—the larger the plant the lower the per-unit cost—and internationalism in the chemical industry makes it difficult to undertake some businesses in the relatively small and unprotected Canadian market.

"On the other hand, there is an increasing number of areas where we can apply our research and other innovative abilities to new products or services.

"New ventures for CIL are likely to be close to the ultimate consumer and form a growing point for the future, both in Canada and in other markets."

New explosives mix trucks provide the mining industry with small mobile explosive plants, and new on-site bleach plants are tailored to the needs of the pulp and paper industry.

Hynes said the company invested about $600,000 in pollution control since 1967 and expects to spend about $1,000,000 in the next few years.

Mine Warns Workers

SUMMERLAND (CP) — Production workers at the Brenda Mines site near this south Okanagan community were informed Friday they face disciplinary action if they refuse to cross plumbers' picket lines.

Gordon Montgomery, mine manager, said he told the 65 workers their refusal to cross the picket line set up by the plumbers, who are involved in a dispute with the Mechanical Industrial Relations Association, was in violation of their agreement with the company.

About 2,800 plumbers across B.C. are involved in the dispute, which centres around wage demands, although so far only about 200 plumbers' union members have gone on strike.

The plumbers earlier rejected a proposed $1.32-cent hourly increase on their base rate of $4.10 in a one-year contract.

Propane Prospects Said Glowing

CALGARY (CP) — Opportunities to develop new markets for propane will continue to appear for the next 10 years at a faster rate than the markets are lost to alternative energy sources, the president of the Propane Gas Association of Canada said Friday.

T. J. Thompson of Regina said the fuel is more portable than most other hydrocarbon fuels and can be taken almost anywhere.

He told the association's annual convention that mobile housing on remote construction sites offers a good market and in some instances workers occupying such housing are insisting on propane heat rather than fuel oil.

But, he said, the best potential market is among customers already served.

Nixon Expected to Cut Business Tax Credit

WASHINGTON (WP) — President Nixon is now seriously considering recommending to Congress early next week that it abandon or substantially alter the controversial 7 per cent investment tax credit, it was learned Friday night.

He told his press conference Friday that the administration position "will be announced in the tax reform measure" that will be submitted to Congress either Monday or Tuesday.

Heretofore, the administration has said that it would be unwise to tinker with the tax credit, which Democrats charge is defeating attempts to control inflation.

The credit, which costs the treasury about $3 billion annually, permits businessmen to lop from their tax bills 7 per cent of the cost of investments in new machinery and equipment.

Administration sources indicated that if Nixon goes through with the plan, he would tie it to the need for basic revision of the tax structure, rather than a spot answer to current inflationary problems.

Recent discussion of the pros and cons of the credit, administration experts say, is probably feeding extra juice into the investment boom. Some businessmen may frantically be making commitments to get in under the wire.

Any proposal to end or cut back the credit would be effective as of the day it is proposed. Although the treasury will make a detailed presentation on Tuesday, it was indicated Friday night that a Presidential message might be sent to Capitol Hill Monday.

An authoritative congressional course said he expected Nixon to propose repeal of the credit, excepting certain small business which would still be allowed to use it.

If the administration decides to recommend repeal of the credit, it will be responding to the advice of its political, rather than economic experts, who fear that Democrats on Capitol Hill will refuse to extend the 10 per cent surtax—badly needed to restrain inflation—unless "something is done about the investment credit."

"I think," mused a Democratic congressman, "that they've decided that they can't sock it to the middle-income taxpayer through an extension of the surtax, without doing something to eliminate obvious evils of this 7 per cent investment give-away."

The 7 per cent credit for businessmen comes "off the top" of the tax on their profits. It is really worth twice that: Given a 50 per cent corporate tax rate, a business would have to earn $1,400 before taxes to retain the same amount it gets from a $700 credit.

Productivity Up

Canada recorded a better-than-average rate of growth in productivity last year with output per man-hour of work in commercial industry increasing 4.3 per cent, the Dominion Bureau of Statistics reported.

Output per person employed was up 3.2 per cent.

These figures contrasted sharply with 1967, when lagging productivity growth meant an increase of only seven-tenths of one per cent in output per man-hour; and four-tenths of one per cent in output per person employed.

Time Reports Loss

Time Inc. Thursday reported a net operating loss of $300,000 for the quarter ended March 31, compared with a gain of $1,538,000 for the same period of 1968.

Time Inc., whose magazine publications include Time, Life, Fortune and Sports Illustrated, cited increased costs and expenses in announcing the decline at the annual stockholders meeting.

Westfair Foods

Westfair Foods Ltd. recorded a total sales volume of $221,110,411, président E. P. Rathgeber said today, an increase of $14,270,000 over the previous year.

Rathgeber, in his 1968 annual report, said net income climbed 14.9 per cent to total $2,391,149.

He said various wholesale divisions within the company contributed to the increased profits and sales for the company which introduced Econo-Mart stores in 1967. It operated 17 outlets in 1968.

Southam Press

Southam Press Ltd. had net income of $1,889,000 or 61 cents a share in the first three months of this year, compared with $1,556,000 or 52 cents in the similar 1968 period.

Revenues from operations rose to $24,310,000 from $17,919,000.

The company's interim report says that this year's figures include operating results of the Gazette Printing Co. Ltd. of Montreal and of the Owen Sound Sun-Times.

Scott Paper

Scott Paper Ltd.'s net income for the first quarter of 1969 was $455,447, up from $443,609 in the first three months of 1968, reports company president Arthur F. Armstrong.

He told Scott Paper's annual general meeting that sales were $9,526,361 for the quarter, up 5.5 per cent from the 1968 figure. Earnings a share were .57, up two cents.

Plant Expansion

Domtar Construction Materials Ltd. said Friday it plans a $1,000,000 expansion for its gypsum wallboard plant here. The expansion includes new manufacturing equipment and increased warehouse equipment.

Investors Group Earnings Climb

WINNIPEG (CP) — Net earnings of the Investors Group increased by about nine per cent in 1968 to total $6,388,000, board chairman T. O. Peterson reported Friday.

Peterson, at the company annual meeting, said the 1967 earnings amounted to $5,879,000.

Earnings per share in 1968 were 72 cents compared with 66 cents in 1967. Dividends were maintained at 40 cents per share.

Peterson reported sales of new shares for the five mutual funds managed by the company totalled $139,000,000 and "this momentum has carried forward into 1969."

Assets under administration were $1,666,000,000 in 1968, a 12 per cent increase over the previous year.

IMPORTANT EVENT

"Concerning forward planning, the most important event is the fact that your company has been successful in acquiring 50.1 per cent of the capital stock of Great-West Life," he reported to shareholders.

Peterson said of the 604,000 Great-West shares tendered in the Investors purchase bid, his company will take up 307,000 shares on a pro rata basis.

He said the association of both companies, Great-West a life insurance firm and both based in Winnipeg, can have "far reaching beneficial effects."

Peterson said both companies will continue to operate independently, "however, as the changing environment dictates, there will undoubtedly be areas where closer co-operation . . . will become desirable."

Five new members were elected to the Investors board, including:

G. Maxwell Bell, chairman of the board of F. P. Publications Ltd., Jean Parisien and W. I. M. Turner of Power Corp. of Canada, A. H. Ross and B. M. Mitchell of Investors' legal department.

U.S. Steel Follows Rising Price Trend

WASHINGTON (WP) — United States Steel Corp. followed two major producers in posting price increases on certain products and added some of its own Friday amid indications that the industry trend toward higher price tags may be accelerating.

The nation's largest steel firm said the increases cover items that make up about 15 per cent of industry output and will add less than half of 1 per cent to company revenues.

The increases come at a time when steel prices have been rising considerably faster than industrial commodities as a whole.

STRONG COMEBACK

The upsurge has been attributed to a strong comeback in demand, both in the U.S. and abroad, and to the protection afforded the domestic price structure by voluntary import quotas negotiated with Japan and Western European nations in January.

U.S. Steel announced a $7-a-ton increase on hot rolled carbon, high strength and alloy bars and hot rolled rods, including welding quality rods. It raised semi-finished steel by $5 a ton.

The company also reinstated published prices for converter fine rods—used for making welded fabric, fences, nails and wire forms—at $120 a ton, $2.50 under the posted price it discontinued three years ago to meet import competition through negotiated prices.

Earlier, Republic Steel Co. initiated the increases by raising hot and rolled carbon and alloy bars by $6.60 a ton. Inland Steel increased bars by $7 and rail spikes by $8.60 a ton.

Canadian Chemicals Left in Cold

MONTREAL (CP) — Robert G. Beck, president of Du Pont of Canada Ltd., said Friday the current pace of business in Canada will continue in the coming months and "indications are that business in other countries will remain buoyant."

He told the company's 58th annual meeting that Canadian and world demand for chemicals will probably continue to grow rapidly and world production capacity is being expanded to keep pace.

"Unfortunately, all too little of it is occuring in Canada. Du Pont of Canada's annual capital expenditures reached a peak of almost $40,000,000 in 1965, but declined to $12,000,000 last year and are not expected to exceed $15,000,000 in 1969."

"Since 1965 the industry has suffered a series of disappointments. Canadian costs, pushed up by skyrocketing wage demands and by constantly rising taxes for expanding social security programs, have moved up faster than those of competing countries.

"At the same time the tariff concessions on chemicals . . . plus greater exposure to the dumping of foreign products in Canada have combined to weaken the relative competitive position of Canadian Chemicals."

The deficit in Canada's international trade in chemicals, excluding fertilizers, is estimated at $350,000,000 for 1968.

WORLD TRADE MARKS JUMP

UNITED NATIONS (Reuters) — A 12 per cent rise in world trade last year was the highest increase in the last 15 years, according to U.N. statistics released Friday. The rise even exceeded that of 1964, a year note for its impressive growth in world industrial production and general economic prosperity, the U.N. said. World trade in 1968, excluding Communist countries, reached a total value of $236,000,000,000.

Heroin Case Hearing Finally Set by Court

A preliminary hearing has been set for May 9 in the case of a man held two months in jail before his trial date was set.

Rolf Brandt was arrested Feb. 17 in Port Alberni on a charge of possession of heroin. He has been in custody since then as he has been unable to raise $4,000 bail.

His appearance last week for a remand led Magistrate William Ostler to refer to "Alice in Wonderland type justice where you have the punishment first and the trial after."

On Friday Magistrate Ostler said no criticism was to be attached to the RCMP in the matter and said everyone had done their best for the young man.

"The matter is coming on now quickly," he added.

Prosecutor Peter Birkett told the court he had made inquiries of up-Island authorities following last week's appearance. He said the trial date had been agreed upon and the Nanaimo lawyer who originally appeared for Brandt was no longer doing so.

BAIL REDUCED

Birkett said the lawyer had acted on the bail application and had successfully applied in the Supreme Court for a reduction in the bail of $8,000 set by the Port Alberni magistrate.

He said Brandt had been told the lawyer was not acting for him any longer.

Brandt asked Magistrate Ostler if the preliminary hearing could be held in Victoria as he didn't like the way things were handled in Port Alberni.

He said one of two men arrested with him had assaulted his fiancee who had pressed charges but heard nothing since.

Magistrate Ostler said the hearing must be held up-Island as the matter arose there. He said an application for a change of place for the hearing would have to be made in Port Alberni court.

POLICE OBLIGE

The magistrate said he was obliged for the efforts made by the police, Birkett and city lawyer Joseph McKenna who last week offered to look into the matter.

It was through McKenna's inquiries the information about the Nanaimo lawyer was obtained, court was told.

Magistrate Ostler noted last week that some of the delay in fixing a trial date appeared to have been occasioned by the accused.

On Friday he said the police were not at fault as a date couldn't be set until someone acting for the accused agreed upon one.

Memorial Rites Sunday

Memorial services will be held Sunday at 5 p.m. at St. Mark's Anglican Church, Qualicum Beach, for Dr. Robert G. Arthurs.

Dr. Arthurs, 48, child psychiatrist with a large practice in Victoria and Nanaimo, died Wednesday at Nanaimo hospital, shortly after being taken ill at his Qualicum home.

A private funeral service was held from the Westwood funeral home in Nanaimo today. Cremation followed.

Dr. Arthurs was born in Winnipeg and practised 22 years in Toronto after graduating from the faculty of medicine at the University of Toronto.

He served in the Canadian Army Medical Corps during the Second World War and was a member of the staff at U of T.

Dr. Arthurs moved from Toronto to Qualicum in 1967, establishing a practice in Nanaimo and Victoria the following year.

He is survived by his wife Grace, three sons, Robert, Scott and Stephen, and his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Arthurs, all of Qualicum.

SPINNING FERRIES ON WAY

B.C. Ferries will really be able to take passengers for a spin next month.

The publicly-owned company will score a North American first when two revolutionary, revolving lake ferries designed by a Victoria firm go into operation in the Interior.

Beginning May 1, the 165-foot Galena and the 131-foot Needles, designed by Case Existological Laboratories Ltd., will shuttle traffic across the Arrow Lakes below Mica Dam.

Details of the design, construction and early trials of the vessels were disclosed in a paper given by designer John Case at a meeting of the Pacific Northwest Section of the Society of Naval Architects and Marine Engineers Friday.

Case said he believes the ferries are the first in North America designed especially for Voith Schneider propulsion units which give the vessels enough manoeuvrability to spin around on their axis like tops.

He said these German-made propulsion units were thought to best meet the peculiar demands of conditions on the Arrow Lakes and that early lake trials bore this out.

They have to be able to make narrow approaches to jetties and manoeuvre through tortuous rock cuts.

Previous projects done by Case include planning the lengthening of the Queen of Esquimalt and the design of both Victoria's Undersea Gardens and Sealand of the Pacific.

Ottawa Silent on Traffic in Arms

OTTAWA (CP) — The arms traffic between Canada and the United States under the 1959 defence production-sharing agreement has reached approximately $4,000,000,000, informed sources said Friday.

For the first time since the big arms trade began a decade ago, authorities refused to make public official figures.

One said the reason for keeping the figures secret at this time is that the subject is too sensitive because of the Commons debate next week on Canadian foreign and defence policy. Most Canadian armaments sold to the U.S. are used by the Americans in Vietnam.

In the first nine years of the production-sharing agreement from 1959 to 1967 inclusive, Canada sold the U.S. $1,798,900,000 worth of arms, mainly aircraft, electronic equipment and explosives. In the same period, Canada bought $1,608,000,000 worth of armaments from the U.S.

Officials declined to disclose the 1968 figures but informants said they were about $300,000,000 each way.

This would push Canadian arms sales to the U.S. in 1959-68 to more than $2,000,000,000 while Canadian purchases in the U.S. would total approximately $1,900,000,000.

Industry department officials said they did not wish to make public the specific figures at a time when the government is putting a clamp on its own weapons expenditures but not on arms sales to the U.S.

These sales were a record $307,000,000 in 1967.

The U.S. waives duty on Canadian weapons entering the U.S. but Canada does not reciprocate.

As a result, some U.S. congressmen have complained when Canadian arms sales to the U.S. have been bigger than U.S. sales to Canada.

By the end of 1967, the balance was $190,900,000 in Canada's favor.

Officials said congressional complaints may increase when it becomes apparent the balance in Canada's favor will grow with the current freeze on weapons spending by Ottawa.

The government has rejected demands from some quarters — mainly university teachers — for a ban on Canadian arms shipments to the U.S. for the duration of the Vietnam war.

BOB HUNT
. . . meets old foe

OLD RIVALS MEET AGAIN SUNDAY . . .

Hunt Holds Old-Time Hex on Boden

. . . IN TIMES OPEN QUARTER-FINALS

It seems inevitable. The paths that Norm Boden and Bob Hunt select invariably cross.

As the luck of the draw has it, the crossing will be Sunday's happening in the Times Vancouver Island Open tournament quarter-finals at Royal Colwood Gold and Country Club.

The Hunt-Boden meeting shapes up as the headline match of the quarter-final round.

Both were expecting to meet, sooner or later. That's because "we've had a thing going" since their junior days, says Hunt.

Hunt, also well known as one of British Columbia's outstanding badminton players, is the plus-one handicap amateur from Uplands.

Boden, the resident professional at Cowichan Golf Club, reigned as the Island Open champion in 1961.

Norm Boden also happens to be a golfer who just can't avoid tripping on Hunt's path.

The first time was 16 years ago.

Hunt, now 32 and a school teacher, captured the city junior championship in 1953 and again in 1954. On each occasion, Boden, then playing out of Gorge Vale, was the runner-up.

Shortly after, Hunt temporarily "retired" from competitive golf to concentrate on his university schooling.

"I got serious again about eight years ago,'" said Hunt.

Boden, left to a straight path, remained on the fairways to pick up a city amateur championship (in 1956) and then the Island Open title five years later.

"Because of the badminton season," Hunt added, "I don't get to play in the Open as often as I would like. This is only the third or fourth time in the past eight years."

The slender Uplands amateur was around last year, however, and that proved to be Boden's undoing in 1968. Hunt defeated Boden in the second round before meeting Oak Bay's Vaughan Trapp in a semi-final match. The Oak Bay professional eventually sidelined Hunt in an extra-hole battle and went on to claim his second straight championship.

Last year's confrontation between Boden and Hunt was their first since their junior days.

"After all those years," Boden said to Hunt after their match, "you still won't let me win . . ."

Their paths cross again Sunday and the Cowichan pro is hopeful this may be the year he can alter the script.

In Sunday's other quarter-final matches, medallist Don Billsborough faces Gorge Vale's Dick Austin; Dr. Dick Flanagan of Oak Bay plays Hal Jacobsen, the plus-two southpaw from Glen Meadows; and another lefty, Clem Pettit of Colwood, meets Gorge Vale's Dan Miles.

Preceding the open matches, and starting off the first tee at 10:45 a.m., will be quarter-final matches in the handicap section. Complete draw and starting times are printed below, at left.

SPORTS DIARY

By SHIRLEY POVICH

(The Washington Post)

NEW YORK—In New York, the baseball name is Bobby Murcer. The tradition that the Yankees must never be without a hero is being sustained by the unlikeliest home-run hitter of them all. It was reckoned that some day Murcer might work his way into Yankee pinstripes with his deft infielder's glove, but his flowering as a knocker of the long ball is a joyous, if total, surprise.

Murcer has been doing his new thing ever since the opening game in Washington and Thursday he rapped Camilo Pascual for his fourth homer and Barry Moore for his fifth of the youthful season. The nature of his adulation by Yankee fans and the media was defined by the Yankee broadcast team's reaction to Murcer's first homer of the day: "There it goes, another Murcer homer. And remember Mickey Mantle didn't get his fourth homer of his rookie year until May 13."

Thus, already, they're comparing him to Mantle, which may not be quite fair to the retired Mantle, inasmuch as Murcer still trails him by 530 home runs. But the Yankee press and Yankee fans insist upon heroes and Murcer does appear to have more potential than any Yankee who has come down the pike in recent years.

Murcer's emergence as a home-run hitter is the more surprising because, in his baseball element, the fellow's five-foot-11, 175-pound frame is a bit under average size. So are his button nose and his country-boy modesty with rejection of profanity in a profession shot through with use of the four-letter words.

His picture and stories of his first three home runs and .416 batting average were in all the papers when Murcer came to the ball park. Around the batting cage he got the treatment that used to be reserved for Joe Dimaggio and Mantle. Cameramen were asking him to "look this way" and baseball writers were ignoring the other Yankees.

Murcer was the polite hero. Everyone got his pictures, and also thanks from Murcer. He said he didn't know if he would keep on hitting home runs at his current pace, "but, dad gum, I hope so." He reminded people that the last time he was up with the Yankees, before he went in the army for two years, "I was 12 for 0, and they let me go and I don't blame them."

The fellow seemed to persist in knocking himself. "There was a stretch when I was in Toledo," he said, "when I was 62-for-3. I don't know why the Yankees didn't drop me from their system." But Yankee manager Ralph Houk has already explained that "in Toledo he was just a baby, only 18, and he showed us a lot before that slump."

Murcer is not another Mantle. He isn't as strong as Mantle, doesn't hit the ball as far, can't bunt as well or run as fast, but there is a similarity. They were both Oklahoma kids and both were scouted and signed by Yankee scout Tom Greenway, and neither one of them got much of a bonus. In fact, Murcer says he turned down more from the Dodgers than the Yankees gave him.

"I wanted to be with the Yankees," Murcer said. "Everybody asks me if Mantle was my hero. Everybody in Oklahoma was proud about Mantle, but the reason I liked the Yankees was on account of Mel Stottlemyre. I went to Kansas City as a kid to see the Yankees play and Stottlemyre was real nice to me and I knew when I grew up I wanted to play on the same team with him. That's the whole story of me and the Yankees."

For a special reason, although not discounting the nice things Murcer is doing for his ball club, he is Ralph Houk's hero. "I watch him handle his new prestige like a young champ in that department," Houk said. "All this publicity and stuff don't turn his head. He brought his wife and baby here and they are living in Jersey. At 22, he's not only a helluva ball player, he's a sweet family man. Not all the guys are, you know."

Such is the constant demand for Yankee heroes, that New York baseball writers with the encouragement of the establishment, have been quick to confer stardom on Yankee rookies in the past. They conferred instant super-rookie status on chaps like Marv Throneberry, Steve Whitaker, Roger Repoz, and Bill Renna in previous years, missing the mark widely.

They plumped hard for Murcer the first time he came up in 1966, and history tells that he didn't make out then. In the Yankees' training camp this year they again endowed Murcer with can't-miss status, but mostly as a chap who would pay his way with his glove. None dared to postulate that here was the chap who would inherit the mantle of Mantle.

It is possible that Murcer may yet cool off and stop hitting homers at the rate of five in 10 games and slump from his over .400 batting average. Meanwhile, even Ted Williams is impressed. Around the batting cage, Williams was asked for his evaluation of Murcer.

"What do I think of him?" Williams repeated. "Right now I think he's another Babe Ruth and Lou Gehrig rolled into one. After what he's done to us, what else can I think?" This was before Murcer hit his fourth and fifth homers of the year, all against Williams' Washington pitching.

TREVINO, ARCHER TIED

Lee Picks Lee, George Agrees

NICKLAUS FAR BACK

RANCHO LA COSTA, Calif. (AP) — U.S. Open champion Lee Trevino and Masters title-holder George Archer, tied for the second round lead in golf's $150,000 Tournament of Champions, pick the same man to win it—Lee Trevino.

"You have to pick Trevino," Archer says.

"He's the best driver on the tour. He says he only leaves the fairway to go to the phone. That's about right.

"And that's what you have to do to win on this course, stay in the fairway. The rough is really rough."

"If my driver stays like it was today," Trevino said Friday after shooting a second-round 68, four under par, "I'd say I like my chances very much."

Trevino, seven shots back going into the second round, and Archer, who has a pair of 71s, are tied at 142 going into today's third round on the 7,114-yard, par-72 La Costa Country Club course.

Just one shot back at 143 are Gene Littler, who had a second-round 68, South African Gary Player, Julius Boros, the PGA champion, and dynamic Arnold Palmer.

Player, Boros and Palmer all had second round 74s.

Dave Stockton is alone at 144 after a second round 75.

First-round leader Dick Lotz dropped back with a 78 for 145, while Jack Nicklaus shot himself out of contention with an 80, one of his poorest rounds in years. He has a 36-hole score of 153, 11 shots off the pace and next to the bottom in the select, 28-man field.

CURTIS COKES

Top Purse for Welter Consolation for Cokes

LOS ANGELES (AP)—Jose Napoles of Mexico City won the welterweight championship of the world Friday night when he blasted the defending title holder Curtis Cokes into submission as the bell sounded for the 14th round of their scheduled 15-round fight.

The 31-year-old champion from Dallas, both eyes battered almost shut, was far behind on points. His corner asked referee George Latka to stop the fight between the 13th and 14th rounds.

Cokes, 145½, collapsed in his corner as the ring was overrun by the jubilant supporters of the Cuban expatriate who calls Mexico his home.

Cokes was making the sixth defence of the 147-pound division title which he won in 1966. But he was outclassed from the opening bell until the final gong.

A crowd estimated at 14,000 watched the fight in the Forum. For what solace there was for the gallant old champion, he received $80,000 from promoter George Parnassus.

The purse was the highest ever given a welterweight champion and Cokes also had a pledge from Napoles' manager, Cuco Conle, for a rematch for the title—if he wants one.

'Baby' Turned on Speed To Help Veteran Jockey

A veteran and a "baby" grabbed the glory during a wet and windy Friday at Sandown Park.

Jockey Jimmy Broomfield was the veteran and he was a happy hardboot after the seven-race program had ended at the Sidney track. Aboard three winners in the first three days of the 10-day spring racing meet at Sandown, Broomfield piloted three more under the wire Friday to become the winningest rider at the meet.

Jimmy had a lot of help from Ship's Baby, which responded to his pleas in the sixth race. The "baby" came from far back to overhaul Jet Puff and Crescent Beach to snatch the victory and return the day's biggest pay-off—$31.70 on a $2 win ticket.

Broomfield picked up his other victories with Saucy Sister in the first race and with Major Magic in the fifth.

ARNOLD HITS TWICE

Giving Broomfield a battle for riding honors on a day when weather played a big part in trimming attendance to 1,122 fans, who pushed the small total of $49,704 through the mutuel machines, was 22-year-old Ron Arnold.

Ron picked up his third and fourth wins of the meeting aboard Kim's Tuffy and Silver Simon in the second and third gallops and barely missed in the seventh in his bid for a triple.

Riding Kenloch in that one, Ron was foiled by his 18-year-old apprentice brother, Jimmy, who hustled Evidently to narrow victory over Kenloch.

DISQUALIFICATIONS

Spicing the afternoon was a double disqualification, which moved Sirinki, a fifth-place finisher, up to the show position in the fifth race.

Major Magic, the winner, was not involved in the inquiry by stewards, Picalad was dropped from second to sixth and Ky Eternal was shoved back from fourth to fifth.

Stewards decided that Picalad, guided by jockey Buford Mills, had interfered with Mr. Ky Lea, and that Ky Eternal, piloted by Jimmy Arnold, had crowded Sirinki. Mr. Ky Lea was moved up to the place position.

Eight races were carded at the Sandown strip today, including the featured Times Handicap.

VANCOUVER'S GAMES BID CHALLENGED

LAUSANNE (Reuters) — The International Olympic Committee said four cities have officially put themselves forward as potential sites for the 1967 Winter Olympics.

The four are Vancouver; Denver; Oestersund, Sweden, and Lahti, Finland.

For the 1976 Summer Olympics, Florence, Italy, and Los Angeles, have officially put themselves forward. Montreal is expected to follow shortly as a third candidate, the committee said.

Expos Ship Rookie To Vancouver Club

MONTREAL (CP) — Montreal Expos have sent rookie outfielder Don Hahn, 20, to Vancouver of the Pacific Coast League to make room on the National League team's playing roster for Donn Clendenon.

JOCKETTE 'CRITICAL' AFTER FALL

BALTIMORE (AP) — Angela (Sis) Tammaro Price, who had announced plans to apply for a jockey's licence, suffered serious head injuries at Pimlico Friday when she was tossed from a horse following a morning workout.

Mrs. Price, an exercise girl for about 20 years, was listed in critical condition in hospital.

Her head hit a walkway after she fell from the filly Spanking. The force of the fall split her plastic helmet and knocked her unconscious.

Ace Dealt In as Reserve Is Hand Bruins May Play

BOSTON (CP) — Garnet Bailey, the 20-year-old they call Ace, was brought up to the Boston Bruins for one reason, but he may stick around for another.

Bailey was called in from Hershey Bears of the American Hockey League as a possible replacement for ailing Johnny McKenzie.

However, McKenzie played well in Thursday night's 5-0 victory over Montreal Canadiens—a victory that gave Montreal a 2-1 bulge in the best-of-seven Stanley Cup semi-final.

So it appeared that Bailey was en route back to Hershey.

Then it was discovered that winger Wayne Cashman had broken bones in his right hand when he crashed into the boards while checking Jean Beliveau.

"If it had happened to my left hand I could play," Cashman said. "But this way I can't get off a shot."

REPLACED EDDIE SHACK

Cashman, a right-hand shooter, took over on the Derek Sanderson-Ed Westfall line from Eddie Shack when coach Harry Sinden benched The Entertainer after the first two games of the semi-final.

Shack picked up a penalty in each game leading to a goal each time—and Boston lost each game by just that margin and in overtime.

The guessing in Boston is that Gump Worsley will be replaced in the Montreal nets by Rogatien Vachon when the series resumes here at 11 a.m. Sunday.

Worsley went back to Montreal with the team, the fingers of his left—or catching—hand taped.

WOMEN'S GOLF TROPHY RETURNING TO CALGARY

Mrs. George Leveque will return the women's championship trophy to Calgary while a Portland-Vancouver argument today was to determine the men's trophy-holder in the annual Empress Hotel golf tournament.

Mrs. Leveque succeeded Mrs. Jack Robertson of Calgary as women's champion by defeating Mrs. W. M. King of Burlington, Wash., 3 and 2, in a wind-swept final Friday at Victoria Golf Club.

At the same time, Herb Fritz of Vancouver and Allen Edwards of Portland advanced to the men's final. A former champion, Fritz rallied from a two-hole deficit at the turn to defeat Calgary southpaw Ray Tull, 3 and 2. Edwards sidelined Larry Hansman of Vancouver, 4 and 3.

Lack of Muscle Concern of Kings

LOS ANGELES (CP) — Los Angeles Kings are worried about a lack of muscle and Red Berenson.

Larry Regan, general-manager of the Kings down 2-0 to St. Louis Blues in the best-of-seven western finals for the Stanley Cup, said Friday:

"Over the last years, we've developed the reputation of being able to get pushed around by the other clubs.

"We may not deserve it, but it's sure true in this series.

"We knocked them out of the rink in Oakland, but against the Blues—nothing."

The Kings need victories tonight and Sunday in Los Angeles if they hope to stay around past the fifth game in St. Louis Tuesday. Regan believes they will.

The Blues finished first in the National Hockey League's West Division, the Kings were fourth.

THINKS KINGS BETTER

"The Blues are well coached and use a good system, but I think we've got a better team," Regan said.

"We'll beat them, but we'll need stronger efforts from left winger Real Lemieux, right winger Bill Flett and centre Eddie Joyal to do it."

Regan also hinted that coach Red Kelly may put someone on Red Berenson fulltime to keep him off the scoresheet. Berenson was a one-man wrecking crew in the opening game, scoring three consecutive goals in the second period to tie a playoff record as the Kings were shut out 4-0.

HEAVY RAIN INTERRUPTS AZALEA OPEN

WILMINGTON, N.C. (AP) — Heavy rain Friday washed out the second round of the $35,000 Azalea open golf tournament, setting up a 36-hole finish today.

Only about 30 of the 136 players in the field had finished their rounds when play was halted. All players are to start the round over today and play two rounds Sunday.

Bob Stone and Joe Campbell shared the lead with five-under-par 66s while nine others, including Canadian Wilf Homeniuk, were tied at 67. Victoria's Bill Wakeham was bracketed with the leaders after shooting a par 71 in Thursday's opening round.

Willie's Whiff Sad Ending To His 'Night'

By The Associated Press

It started out as another memorable night for Willie Mays, but Frank Reberger and Al Santorini will never forget how it ended.

Mays set a National League record of 2,422 appearances as an outfielder when he trotted to centre for the start of Friday night's game between San Francisco Giants and San Diego Padres.

Two hours and 40 minutes later, San Diego's Reberger choked off a ninth inning rally, preserved Santorini's first major league pitching triumph and nailed a 3-1 victory over the Giants—by striking out Mays with the bases loaded.

The victory snapped a six-game losing streak for the NL expansion club, beaten four times by the Giants during its tailspin.

The bases also were bulging with two out in the ninth at Los Angeles, but Dooley Womack failed where Reberger had succeeded. The Houston reliever walked Bill Russell and Wes Parker, forcing home the tying and winning runs in a 5-4 Dodger victory.

The other games on the NL schedule—Pittsburgh at Philadelphia, New York at St. Louis and Atlanta at Cincinnati—were rained out.

Reberger, a rookie right-hander who had been ineffective in four earlier relief appearances with the Padres, came out of the bullpen with two on and one out in the ninth. He got pinch hitter Dave Marshall on a fly to centre, walked pinch-hitter Don Mason to fill the bases and then fired a third strike past Mays, wrapping up his first save.

Mays broke Max Carey's league mark of 2,421 games as an outfielder, set with Pittsburgh and Brooklyn from 1910 to 1929.

SENATORS BLANKED

In the American League Baltimore's pitching staff has Washington's number — and it's a great big zero.

Tom Phoebus fired a four-hitter at the Senators Friday night, blanking them 6-0 for the fourth straight shutout by Baltimore's staff against Washington this season.

Phoebus got plenty of support from the potent Baltimore attack which provided four home runs, two of them by Paul Blair. The Orioles have won seven of their last eight games and slammed 16 homers over that span.

In other American League action, Boston Red Sox belted Cleveland Indians 10-7 and Minnesota Twins took California Angels 6-0 on a two-hitter by rookie Tom Hall.

SIXTH HOMER

In addition to Blair's two homers, Frank Robinson tagged his sixth of the season, extending his hitting streak to 11 games, and Elrod Hendricks added a two-run shot.

The Orioles, fresh from a three-game, 30-run, 48-hit romp in Boston, kept the pounding up against the Senators. Blair homered in the first inning and then hit another in the third in almost the identical spot. Hendricks had a two-run shot against reliever Casey Cox and leads the American League with a .435 batting average. Robinson's .419 average is third in the AL.

Lunde Leads Way

VANCOUVER (CP) — Vancouver Canucks, sparked by Len Lunde's three goals, defeated Portland Buckaroos 5-2 Friday to grab a 2-0 lead in the best-of-seven series for the Lester Patrick Cup, emblematic of the Western Hockey League championship.

Playing before a record WHL crowd of 14,470, Lunde gave Vancouver a 2-2 tie in the second period, the 3-2 go-ahead goal midway through the third period and added his third late in the game.

Jim McKenny and Bryan Hextall rounded out Canucks' scoring with a goal each. Cliff Schmautz and Norm Johnson replied for Portland.

Vancouver bombarded Portland netminder Dave Kelly with 40 shots while Portland replied with only 20 on Charlie Hodge in the Canuck net. Kelly was outstanding in the defeat, coming up with two breakaway saves and making at least four crucial saves from close in.

Dauphin Clips Regina; Hull in Eastern Final

(Times News Services)

Dauphin Kings scored two late third-period goals Friday to defeat Regina Pats 5-4 and even the best-of-seven western Memorial Cup final at one game each.

Third game in the series will be played tonight.

Meanwhile, in Hull, Que., Sorel Black Hawks advanced to the east final by dumping Hull Beavers 5-3 to claim their best-of-seven semi-final, 4-1. Hull now meets the winner of a Montreal Canadiens-St. Catharines Black Hawks series.

A power-play goal at 16:08 of the third period gave Dauphin its victory over Regina despite the fact the Pats out-played the Manitoba champions over most of the route. Regina out-shot Dauphin 41-29.

The Kings, who scored two power-play goals, picked up 11 of 20 penalties handed out be referee Bernie Haley of Red Deer.

Ron Garwasiuk, Regina's top scorer, was banished early in the game along with team-mate Barry Cummins and Dauphin's Merv Haney and John Roy, each with majors and game misconducts for their part in a first-period fight.

After tonight remaining games, all in Dauphin, are April 21, 23, 25 and 26.

Claremont, Victoria High In Contention

VANCOUVER (CP) — Revelstoke high school boys' volleyball team took a strong early lead Friday in the British Columbia volleyball tournament.

Revelstoke had 10 wins and was first in division one of the meet. Maple Ridge of Coquitlam and Vancouver Killarney were tied for second with seven victories apiece and Victoria placed third with five.

In division two, Claremont, Mission, Abbotsford and New Westminster were bunched in the lead, all with six wins, Crescent high school was runnerup with four.

About 130 boys are competing in the two-day meet. Divisional play continued today, with semi-finals scheduled this afternoon.

Other teams in the tourney and their wins included 100 Mile House, one; Semiahmoo of White Rock, 0; Penticton, 3. In division one they were Grand Forks, 2; Crawford Bay, 3; Max Cameron, 2; Lake Cowichan, 0.

Hutton Cracks Open Record

VANCOUVER (CP)—Six Canadian open records were set Friday night as the Canadian short course swimming championships opened with eight events.

The meet, sponsored by the British Columbia section of the Canadian Amateur Swimming Association, continues today and Sunday.

Canadian Olympian Ralph Hutton of Campbell River won the 400-metre freestyle in a record four minutes, 4.7 seconds. Previous Canadian open record of 4:18.0 was set in 1968 by Michael Burton of the U.S.

Seattle's Rick Colella, 17, set two Canadian open records and his sister Lynne, 18, one.

Rick was clocked at 2:13.9 in the men's 200-metre individual medley, breaking the record of 2:16.1 set in 1965 by Ken Webb of the U.S.

He later took the 200-metre breaststroke in 2:26.9, to undercut the pending open mark of 2:28.9 set earlier this year by Bill Mahony of New Westminster.

TOPPED OWN MARK

Lynn won the 200 breaststroke with a 2:46.6 clocking that broke her own record of 2:49.5 set last year.

Kaye Hall of Tacoma, Wash., won the women's 200-metre individual medley in 2:29.2, 1.7 seconds off the Canadian open record set last year by Sue Pederson of the U.S. Second-place Karen James of Vancouver, lowered the Canadian native mark of 2:32.2, set in 1966 by Elaine Tanner, to 2:30.5.

The Dolphin Swim Club of Vancouver won the women's 800-metre freestyle relay in 9:14.8, breaking the record of 9:35.4 set earlier this year by the University Settlement Aquatic Club of Toronto.

In the men's 800-metre freestyle relay, the Tacoma Swim Club lowered the Canadian open record by 28 seconds with a time of 8:04. Simon Fraser University of Burnaby, B.C., held the old mark of 8:32.

BOWLER OF WEEK

Blazing finish turned trouble into triumph for Roy Kirby in 26th week of 27-week Times Bowler-of-the-Week competition. Roy, a golf enthusiast, displayed hot touch at Mayfair Lanes as he collected men's tenpin award with 658 series. After starting with game of 167, Kirby finished with efforts of 245 and 246 in Wednesday Commercial League.

Tolos Tackles Dutch Savage

John Tolos battles Dutch Savage in the main bout of a professional wrestling card at Memorial Arena tonight.

In other bouts, starting at 8:15, Steve Bolus tussles Bulldog Brown, Jack Bence grapples John Kostas and Jerry London goes against Tiger Singh.

Buttons Retained

Don Ross and Harry Pike collected a home-course victory as they made a second successful defence of the city senior golf buttons by downing Gorge Vale challengers Ray Spouse and Hugh Roberts on the 13th green at Royal Colwood.

Swimmers Stroking For Funds

Young swimmers from the Juan de Fuca Cohos Swim Club are poised for the giant "Swim-a-Thon" scheduled for the week of April 26 to May 4.

Over 100 swimmers are expected to take part in a program in which sponsors are asked to pledge from one to 10-cents for each length of Centennial Pool one of the youngsters can cover. Two hours or 200 lengths is the maximum any one swimmer is allowed.

Seventy per cent of the proceeds go into a travel fund for the club, enabling them to take part in competitions in other cities. The remainder will be sent to the Canadian Amateur Swimming Association to help send Canadian swimmers to international events.

Further information is available by telephoning the Centennial Pool at 478-3522.

Doctor Advises Travellers On When to Get Needled

By KARIN MOSER

MONTREAL (CP) — It is important to know what inoculations are needed — or not needed — in preparation for travel abroad, says a leading Montreal specialist in preventive medicine.

"With more and more people travelling to remote areas of the globe," said Dr. Maurice Meng in an interview, "it is imperative that they first consult a competent physician or medical clinic to determine what sort of immunization is required.

"For example, if a person is going on a holiday and will only be passing through a certain region briefly, chances are he doesn't require an extensive series of inoculations. But if a company is transferring an employee to a remote area to live for six months or a year, then an entirely different approach must be taken to immunizing that person."

Dr. Meng, associated with Canadian National Railways' medical clinic for more than 19 years, says too many potential travellers think all they need is a smallpox "shot" because a travel agent said so.

"Most travel agencies don't have extensive knowledge about immunization requirements for various parts of the world, and it is much wiser for a person to consult an expert in that field.

"Unfortunately, not too many general practitioners keep up to date on inoculation requirements either."

SOME RISK SEEN

Doctors prefer not to give an injection if it is not absolutely required because there is always some element of risk involved.

"Why inject a person with a yellow fever vaccine, for instance, when he is not even going to be in an area where he can contact the disease?"

The United States department of health, education and welfare has published an information booklet entitled Immunization Information for International Travel "and this is the one we refer to when advising patients," said the expert.

There have been a few changes in the immunizations recommended for travellers. These include:

—Typhoid vaccine is no longer recommended for Europe, nor for other areas if the traveller stays at usual tourist accommodations.

—Plague vaccine is recommended only for Vietnam, Loas and Cambodia, unless the traveller will have occupational exposure to rodents in areas in which sylvatic plague occurs.

—Typhus vaccine is recommended only for persons whose work abroad places them in areas where the local population is infected.

—Immune serum globulin is recommended for prophylaxis of infectious hepatitis in Central and South America, Africa, and Asia.

"The booklet is available to anyone upon written request and could serve as a guideline to immunization," says Dr. Meng, adding that the World Health Organization is concerned mainly with the five great pestilences of history — small pox, cholera, yellow fever, plague and typhus.

START WELL AHEAD

Dr. Meng says inoculations should be arranged well before the start of a trip. For one thing, "you have a chance to get over any effects of the vaccine" and immunity is not always instantaneous after inoculation. "Often several weeks are required for antibody level to attain its maximum value."

Reactions to most vaccines are "generally mild and transient, and will usually respond to simple medications," he adds.

"However, if for any reason your travel plans change when you are abroad and you think you might want a doctor, contact the International Association for Medical Assistance to Travellers. It's amazing how few people know of this non-profit organization."

The organization offers 24-hour-a-day service in major cities throughout Europe, Asia, Africa and South America. Member travellers needing medical help simply call the local IAMAT centre and are provided with the names of at least two physicians from whom to choose. All participating physicians speak English, are specialists in internal medicine or cardiology and have had at least a portion of their training in the United States, Canada or Great Britain.

Charges for the services are on a strict standard fee system of $8 an office call, $10 for a hotel call and $15 for calls after 10 p.m.

FACTORS CONSIDERED

Dr. Meng says a number of factors should be considered when planning a course of inoculations and "companies particularly, who are thinking of sending employees into strange areas, should keep these in mind and then see that their travellers are properly advised and treated."

He lists these key factors as:

—Ultimate destination;
—Route selected;
—Mode of travel;
—Desires of patient;
—Purpose of trip;
—Previous inoculations;
—Contra-indications.

Elaborating on "route selected," Dr. Meng said that if a traveller, say, arrives in India from North Africa, inoculation against yellow fever is usually required.

"The regulations are somewhat complex but do not apply if India is approached from the east. This is because yellow fever is endemic to Africa but not to the Orient, you see."

They're Not Bigots, But Raw-ther British

By MORRIS DAVID ROSENBERG

FREEPORT, Grand Bahama Island (WP) — The ebony-faced Bahamian collected his fare as the other tourists stepped off the double-decker London bus at the end of the line. Then he looked at me unsmilingly. "You can get on now," he said.

I climbed aboard the vintage vehicle and thought about the poker-faced, uncommunicative conductor who sat across the aisle from me while other passengers boarded.

Bus operators, world-wide, are not usually associated with wasted words or love-ins, and dealing with city traffic and the public is not conducive to running a happy hour, I reasoned. But this was strictly a tourist route. In succeeding days, further experiences with correct but somber hotel employees, sales personnel, cab drivers and pedestrians (not all, but the majority I met) led me to one conclusion:

It might be easy for a U.S. visitor, mindful of our well-publicized race problems, to get the idea that the black Bahamas are not friendly toward the white tourist.

NARROW VICTORY

That unfortunate notion would be completely false.

Chalk it up to their British heritage (reserved, old man, raw-ther), if you will. Or ascribe it to natural dignity.

It is true that these "native Bahamians" gave the Progressive Labor Party (PLP) and Lyden O. Pindling, a negro who is now prime minister, a narrow victory over the United Bahamian Party (UBP) in 1967 to end 300 years of almost uninterrupted white rule over the British Crown Colony. Then, last April, the PLP soundly defeated the white-oriented opposition. Thus the negroes, who comprise 90 per cent of the islands' population of 150,000 people, firmly established their control over their government.

I was treated respectfully and considerately everywhere I went. The Bahamian who serves you will likely carry himself erect, speak politely and softly and display a demeanor that may vary anywhere from severity to cautious watchfulness.

That is, until you break through his shell and are rewarded by a smile, a laugh, and a slightly more familiar approach.

UNFAIR TO COMPARE

Certainly it would be unfair to compare the Bahamian manner with the spontaneous kind of Latin warmth found in two other nearby dark-skinned areas popular with North Americans — Puerto Rico and, especially, Mexico.

It may well be that the black Bahamian does harbor some resentment against his own rulers—both white and black. It is true that tourism is the main industry in these islands, and the natives know how important it is to encourage visitors to return and spend. But some feel that Pindling's government, is not seeing that enough of the rewards are trickling down to those on the bottom.

Though the more flagrant excesses of the "Bay Street Boys" have been dealt with, the fat cats are still a powerful force behind the scenes. Few taxes are imposed. A quiet-spoken, intelligent young Bahamian told of a different kind of discrimination.

"A native like myself takes a particular job for which he is fully qualified and handles it well. He gets one salary. A foreigner fills the same kind of job and gets more money," he explained. "I can't wait to leave Freeport and go back to Nassau. This is a strange place."

Indian Art Show Set

The priceless carvings of the Kwakiutl Indians and other Northwest Coast tribes will be shown for the first time comprehensively at Man and His World June 12-Sept. 7.

Mayor Jean Drapeau said negotiations have been concluded with the University of British Columbia's Museum of Anthropology to bring the bulk of the unique collection to the international exhibition. It will be shown in what was the United Nations pavilion at Expo 67.

A small selection of the Northwest Indian art is now on view at Paris' Musee de l'Homme in the exhibition Masterpieces of Indian and Eskimo Art of Canada.

Old Wage Contract Solves Stalemate

MONTREAL (CP) — A contract that expired in 1966 is to be used as a basis for working conditions through 1971 by Montreal's English-speaking Roman Catholic teachers, spokesmen said Friday.

Robert Dobie, director of member welfare for the Montreal group, representing the bulk of the 2,500-member provincial Association of Catholic Teachers, said:

"We cannot continue like this any longer. We will just have to wait until 1971."

Quebec's 70,000 teachers have been without a contract since June, 1968. But that one had been extended, following a teachers' strike, from 1966.

Negotiations that started 20 months ago broke off at the mediation level in March.

Kevin Quinn, president of the Montreal group, said the plan to accept the former contract virtually eliminates any possibility of a strike.

Members earlier had voted to participate in a one-day strike with the 6,000-member provincial Association of Protestant Teachers.

No date has been set for the brief strike, but Tuesday has been mentioned by teacher spokesmen.

In Quebec City, however, a government official said the province would take the steps necessary to halt any strike.

Marcel Masse, minister without portfolio responsible for the civil service, said it is not in the public interest to divulge the nature of government action.

The Protestant teachers' group said members will walk out for an indefinite period beginning May 5 if the one-day strike does not resolve the dispute.

But Raymond Laliberte, president of the 60,000-member Quebec Teachers Corporation, announced that his group will not strike. However, 40 per cent of the membership was prepared to resign at the end of the school year in June.

The teachers have agreed to a new wage scale, not made public, but are demanding a greater say in administration. Also at issue are working conditions and the teacher-pupil ratio.

Talks With Japan Stress Recognition of Red China

TOKYO (Reuters) — Canadian and Japanese ministers ended their fifth round of top-level discussions with agreement to keep in close touch on important issues.

Japanese Foreign Minister Kichi Aichi told a news conference that he now felt he could call up External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp to discuss important problems.

Sharp nodded vigorously in smiling approval of Aichi's remark.

The meeting was attended by five ministers from each country.

EXPLAINS STAND

Sharp said 60 to 75 per cent of the meeting was devoted to Canadian explanations of its efforts to establish diplomatic relations with mainland China.

A six-page joint communique issued by the two sides mentioned China only once. It said:

"The ministers reviewed the general international situation with emphasis on the situation in Asia, including China and Vietnam."

Later it added:

"The ministers expressed their concern over the continuation of the Vietnam conflict and strongly hoped that the talks now being held in Paris would promptly lead to a peaceful settlement of the problem.

"The ministers also recognized that, after peace is restored in Vietnam, the broadest possible international co-operation would be needed to secure peace and attain the prosperity of this region, and agreed that the two countries would continue to consult closely with each other on the possible role they might play for this purpose."

Sharp said Canada restated its intention to help build up Vietnam once the fighting ceased. He said he had not gone into detail.

JAPAN'S POSITION

Japan had explained that its constitution prevented it sending any troops there but after the war it would be prepared to send civilians as engineers and agricultural experts to make whatever contribution they could.

Independent Thinking Shows In Dazzling Student Art

By GORDON RICE

The Art Gallery of Greater Victoria is currently presenting a show of works by art students of the University of Victoria.

This is the first time the gallery and the university's visual arts division have collaborated to produce such an exhibit and it marks an important step in furthering art in the Victoria area.

It is quite usual for colleges and universities to have a program of cultural activities such as plays, concerts and dance performances, and naturally this enriches the art life of a community.

In Victoria we have seen university musical and dramatic performances, on campus and off, for some time now. This, however, is our first chance to see a display of painting, sculpture, prints, and drawings from the University.

Besides affording the community a large, unusual, and interesting show, this particular exhibit accomplishes some other functions of considerable importance. First of all, the exhibit has given the art gallery a show as striking as any it has had to present in a long time.

Secondly, the students have been given a chance to see their work in a professional setting, and, happily, this setting reveals that their work is certainly of a high professional quality.

Finally, the university, which lacks a good gallery, now has a place in which to see the work of its own students. And the work to be seen here now will undoubtedly be a point of pride for the university.

A viewer at this exhibit will be struck, at first, by a dazzling variety of stuff. There are some 150 students in the visual arts division, and while only a percentage of them are represented, there are still so many participating here that it would not be possible to list their names in this column. To single out a few of these names would be to omit a great many others, unjustly, because the show is not a competitive one but rather the presentation of a community of artists.

At The Gallery

In the sculptural work, the three-dimensional constructions, a really great range of materials have been employed, with a skill and engineering that is impressive. In one work, a large fibreglass shell, richly painted in a technuque that reminds one of ceramic ware, protrudes from a canvas saturated with a deep blue acrylic paint. Then one is drawn to a table covered with nothing but cubes and cones of white paper. On these objects are drawn lines and patterns in black ink, lines with a meticulous perspective which tugs at the eye hypnotically.

There are light boxes: constructions of glass and plastic inside wooden boxes, beautifully made, which are lit from behind and into which one peeps and peers as into the thoughts of a computer, or a dreamer, or an interplanetary traveler.

One sees plastic constructions, too, of no color at all, which seize and refract surrounding colors with redoubled force. And there are severe geometrical paper constructions on which are silk-screened lines of color, and these begin to take on life and motion as one ponders them.

The drawings of the first-year students reveal a sound understanding of the human figure. They seem free and effortless, which really means a great deal of study lies behind them. The drawings of the more advanced students show a new freedom of approach which I believe is characteristic only of very recent times.

(Gordon Rice, an artist and teacher who has recently settled in Victoria, will contribute frequent columns to the Times in the absence of regular art critic Ted Lindberg. Recipient of a Canada Council grant, Mr. Lindberg will be touring Canada this summer to look at the national art scene and will report on his findings from time to time.)

There is a kind of relaxation and joy and ease in the way figures, landscapes and commonplace objects are cut up, dispersed, and then respliced and fused again in a new vision of things. The technique is not absolutely new, but what impresses me is the naturalness with which the drawing students seem to handle such problems.

If one can make it to the backroom, the prints are among the most interesting work to be seen in the show. Some of these prints show a sure grasp of the "serial" technique, that is, the method of making a picture which is at the same time a series of pictures.

This technique gained prominence in the work of the new "pop" artists, but it has been familiar to us for a long time in the form of the ever-popular comic strips. The comic strip has been a prime source of inspiration for the pop artist, in fact. In the Victoria students' prints and drawings an engaging and charming, and sometimes biting kind of cartooning is much in evidence.

Cartooning, or caricature, is actually an old and honorable tradition which dates back to the cave drawings of the last ice age, perhaps further. To do it well, one must have a good understanding of the figures one draws, or at least develop a strong feeling for them.

The caricature, as an expression of humor and fantasy, has always fascinated artists. Not only is it the oldest sort of rendering of objects and figures, it is also the most widespread.

Today, in art, we call this technique the "abstract" treatment of a subject; a bird, a person, or a tree. To the American Indians, the Africans, the medieval Europeans, the Chinese, and countless other peoples, such abstractions have been a completely natural way of expressing themselves in art.

The humorous element introduced in these student prints reminds us, perhaps, how very natural abstraction can be for us.

Lastly, there are paintings to be seen, large and small, and many are of a very refined and intense color, and very surely painted.

The work of these students will strike one as being absolutely contemporary. They are strong and independent thinkers, critical, open and enthusiastic. In their art perhaps one can discern something of the future as well as the mysteries of the present. As the younger artists of this community they deserve our attention and support.

The exhibit remains on view at the Art Gallery, 1040 Moss street, until April 27. The students are those of professors John Dobereiner, Richard Grooms, Donald Harvey, Eric Hilton, Donald Johnson and Peter Kahn.

'College Vote Was Dishonest'

By ED GOULD

DUNCAN — Malaspina College council's decision Friday night to disallow Campbell River to opt out of the regional college scheme drew an angry reaction from Campbell River board chairman Bruce Saunders.

Saunders said in a telephone interview today the decision is "irrevelant" because the original referendum creating the college was "dishonest."

"We are right where we always have been," he said. "We will not participate no matter what happens."

The council met in committee after their general meeting Friday night at the school board offices here. Details of the voting were not released to the press.

'NEVER SIGNED'

Council chairman Jack Whitlam, a government appointee from Nanaimo, said Campbell River could not drop out because Cowichan school district would not agree and unanimous consent from the other five participants was required.

"We were never in as far as we were concerned," Saunders said. "We never signed the agreement and we never will sign the agreement.

"The referendum they keep harping about was dishonest because it only was intended to allow residents a chance to say yes or no about whether they wanted a regional college.

"It was not a referendum that asked ratepayers to put out money for the scheme. Now we will never join under any condition. It is too far away from what we were originally told a college would be."

TWO YEARS AWAY

Whitlam said it will be about two years before a referendum can be submitted to the ratepayers in participating areas. Basic requirement to hold a referendum, he said, is one full year of operation in the temporary quarters in the old Nanaimo hospital, plus the registration figures for the 1970-71 term.

"That's just a lot of soap bubbles and Whitlam knows it," Saunders said. "I challenge the council to put a referendum to the people now under the terms they are attempting to operate under.

"Everything has to be rented, leased or borrowed. I think it is a dishonest way to operate. But most important it is not what the people were told. We did not ask our people to pay for a college, only to agree to take part in the planning of a college.

'NO MONEY'

"We have no money set aside for a college and we are not going to go asking for it now."

He said the government should submit a referendum in all areas and bring up the money question. "Until the taxpayers say they are willing to pay for a college they should not get a college."

Third Candidate Seeking Seat On Council

DUNCAN — Angus Fraser, 47, became the third candidate to enter the May 3 aldermanic race to fill the vacancy on Duncan city council by the death of Robert Mason.

Angus, a resident of Centennial Heights, is father of two children and a millwright for Crofton Pulp and Paper Limited. He said he would work towards the amalgamation of Duncan and North Cowichan to eliminate overlapping services.

Other candidates are Ronald Hill and Harold Allman. Nominations close April 23.

Durante To Challenge Vote Validity

PORT ALBERNI (CP) — Liberal Richard Durante, beaten by 255 votes in the April 8 federal byelection in the Comox-Alberni riding on Vancouver Island, Friday night predicted another byelection.

"We weren't defeated, we were outmanoeuvred," he said.

"It looks like we will ask for a judicial recount and maybe ask for another byelection under the Controverted Elections Act."

He charged that there were 1,000 more voters on the list for the byelection than for the general election last June.

"There is enough evidence to indicate something is amiss," he said.

Durante was defeated in the byelection by veteran New Democrat MP Tom Barnett.

In the general election last June, incumbent Barnett was first declared the winner by three votes. A recount gave victory to Durante by nine votes. Then the NDP contested the result under the Controverted Elections Act and the B.C. Supreme Court ruled the election void because of irregularities in the armed forces vote.

Durante has until Monday to request a judicial recount.

Crane to Salvage Sunken Boxcars

CROFTON — A marine salvage crane was expected to raise two boxcars loaded with 150 tons of newsprint from the deep water near the loading wharf at Crofton Pulp and Paper Limited today.

The boxcars rolled off the 25-car barge Doris Yorke which drifted loose from its moorings Thursday.

A spokesman said today the crane was expected this morning and a diver would begin immediately to probe the water below the wharf to secure the boxcars to steel cables.

The newsprint is a complete loss, he said. He declined to set a figure.

N. Cowichan Permits Show Big Increase

NORTH COWICHAN — Building permits valued at $218,600 were issued by North Cowichan during March, clerk A. Vandecasteyen said Thursday.

This compares with $128,598 in permits issued for the same period last year. Permit values for the first three months this year are $914,365, a substantial increase over the $320,980 issued for the same period in 1968.

March permits included $151,100 for construction of new residential buildings and $59,900 for new commercial buildings Another $3,900 in permits was issued for repairs to residences and $3,800 for repairs to commercial premises.

In Duncan, building permits for the first quarter of the year amounted to $516,438 compared with $279,950 for the same three months last year.

Clerk Gordon Berry said $17,300 in permits were issued in March for new residential dwellings. Commercial buildings and signs accounted for $474,238 while government and institutional permits added another $85,900.

Community Hall At L. Cowichan To Be Wrecked

LAKE COWICHAN — The 39-year-old community hall, which has served as school, church, wrestling hall and theatre, will be demolished.

Sealed tenders for demolition and salvage of the wooden building will be accepted by R. J. Kimak, administrator of Lake Cowichan School District, up until 3 p.m. April 25.

A United Church missionary named H. E. Gridley is credited with conceiving the idea of the hall which became the focal point of social life in this community now numbering nearly 2,400 people.

All but the structural work was done by volunteer labor. The two Renfrew Avenue lots the building was constructed on were purchased for $100 each with money raised by subscription and dances held at the Lakeside Hotel.

A Ucluelet woman topped the February class of the School of Psychiatric Nursing run by the provincial mental health branch.

Miss Carolyn Wadden received a special award for the highest marks when 130 women and seven men graduated from the school in exercises held in New Westminster Secondary School on Thursday.

Because we don't have to spend a lot of time on this every year, we can spend a lot more time on this.

Underneath the familiar Volkswagen you think never changes is something quite surprising:

A Volkswagen that does.

Over the years, we've made more than 4,500 changes to it.

Every one an improvement.

For instance, this year it has a new double-joint rear axle so handling and comfort are even better.

The engine has a new dust seal.

The seats have been improved. (This was done in '65, '66 and again in '68. Sometimes we even improve on our improvements.)

But in spite of all those changes going on inside, outside, the VW goes on looking pretty much the same from one year to the next.

Which, of course, was the whole idea.

Because that means that this year's Volkswagen won't be next year's has-been. And it also means that when you don't have to work on the way it looks, you can work that much harder on the way it works.

So even though the Volkswagen gets harder to improve every year, every year we try harder to improve it.

A situation that puts us at a bit of a disadvantage compared to the other car makers:

They just have to worry about out-doing each other.

We have to worry about out-doing us.

There are over 280 VW dealers across Canada. The one nearest you is in the Yellow Pages.

Personal Expression and Inner Discovery In Museum Exhibit

By DON VIPOND

They take plaster or plastic, toothpicks or tiles, fabric, glass, tin, clay, wire or wood.

Oh yes, paper, too.

Maybe they draw. Or carve. Or paint, dye, press, clip, glue, heat and bend.

But in the end they build something — good or bad— which is theirs. Without them, it never would have been.

That is part of the good feeling that can come with visual art. If others like it, the good feeling is better still.

The creations of Greater Victoria art students from kindergarten to Grade 12 will be displayed on the second floor of the provincial museum May 1 to 18.

For the first time locally all schools, elementary, junior and senior secondary, Indian and private, will join in one art show. The first three days students will demonstrate art and crafts techniques.

What about school art programs? Where do art teachers try to lead their pupils?

"I'd like them just to look at the world around them with a little more appreciation and awareness."—Vito Cianci at Mount Douglas senior secondary.

"The thing I'm most concerned with is the kids discovering their own potential."—Bill West at Oak Bay senior secondary.

"It's personal expression and discovery, one area in the school where their own personal choice is more important . . . There's a freedom in it for them to succeed or fail."—Michael Hemming at Victoria senior secondary.

"It develops creativity and imagination, increases awareness of beauty . . ."—Irene Warren at Central junior secondary.

Just what consitututes art is a purely personal thing, says Miss Warren. It can't be defined.

Many people still believe it has to include paper or canvas. Where do all these other materials come in?

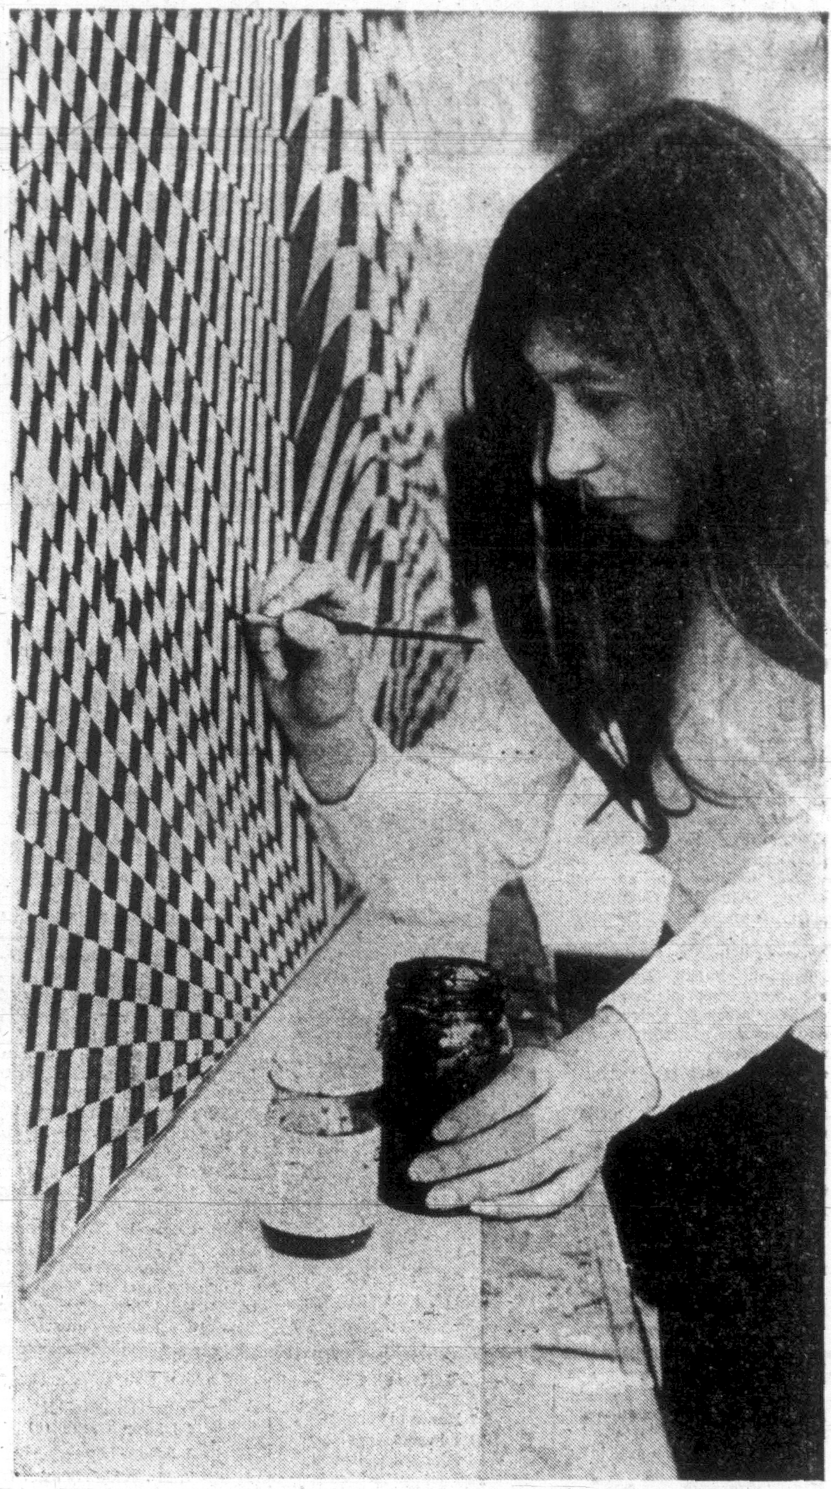
"We're trying to gear art departments these days so they fit in with the sort of life students see around them," says Hemming.

They are encouraged to experiment in the trends—"op" (for optical) art where sharply contrasting designs baffle the eye and brain — "pop" art, where commonplace manufactured objects are assembled to produce a special focus.

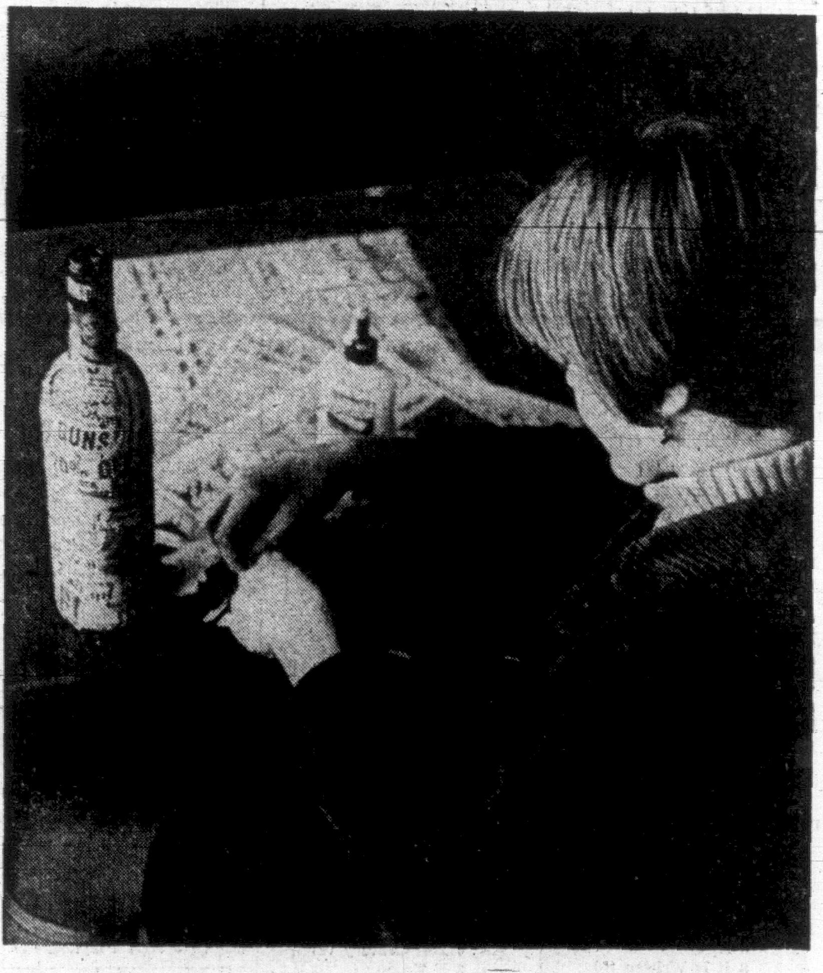
There is kinetic art — creations in motion. One of next month's exhibits is driven by a little electric motor.

"Every year we have a few who respond to what we and they are doing with a really exciting intensity," says West. "It's the only thing that is a significant reward in teaching, I think."

On this page teachers Cianci, Hemming and Warren turned photographers to catch the absorption of their students at work.



Twisting squares produced "op" art for Lorena Stetsko, Vic High.



Dawn Stofer, Central Junior, creates "collage" on a bottle.

Study Group May Advocate Centralized Information

By KEN CLARK

OTTAWA (CP) — A federal study group is hard at work writing a behind-schedule report that will likely recommend some form of centralized control over government information services.

The three-member commission appointed last Aug. 30 to study the government's dissemination of information was all but directed in its terms of reference to adopt a centralizing line.

Prime Minister Trudeau, who ordered the study, asked for recommendations for ways to better co-ordinate information activities at home and abroad. He also wanted recommendations on ways to promote greater efficiency.

There is no indication the advice has been ignored. As one well-placed official put it, he would be surprised if the group did not recommend some form of co-ordinating agency for information services.

The public will likely find out for sure next month when the book-length report is completed. The Trudeau deadline of March 1 for completion has been missed.

SUGGEST TWO AGENCIES?

One talked-about possibility is a recommendation for establishment of two co-ordinating agencies. One would oversee domestic information services and the other the foreign information network.

In some official eyes, there is a deplorable lack of communication between various government departments promoting Canada abroad. Information officers in trade, immigration, external affairs and other departments tend to work in their own narrow fields.

The suggestion is that they could do a better job by pooling their efforts and facilities, particularly in foreign capitals where several might be gathered.

Another argument advanced for centralized co-ordination is that no government department is promoting the Canadian system at home and abroad.

At home, it means that the federal role in running the country is not satisfactorily told to the taxpayer, who is more aware of what provincial governments do for him than the central government.

HELP PROMOTE UNITY

The theory is that a centralizing agency would help promote national unity in a subtle way by bringing the work of the federal government to the attention of the people. In theory, the agency would lean on departmental information services to keep the federal government as such in mind in their promotional activities.

Abroad, the co-ordinating agency might project the Canadian image in a variety of ways, perhaps working through existing departmental agencies.

If the report supports the idea of more centralized control of information services, it is bound to raise some vigorous opposition from two groups: Politicians who fear the agency could become a political weapon of the government and information branches who fear a loss of authority and control over their own programs.

The strength of the political opposition would probably rise according to the power accorded to any centralizing agencies and its closeness to the cabinet.

It is not known whether the Fortier report will deal with such recent matters as the dispute surrounding the pre-taping of the Trudeau administration's Montreal airport announcement.

FOUND IT UNETHICAL

Non-government members of Parliament claimed it was unethical for cabinet ministers to engage in such practices because of the possibility of leaking information about government decisions.

The ministers who videotaped the announcement five days in advance used a private television station for the purpose.

Government departments, however, have moved into film-making, although the practice is limited. The agriculture department, for example, has a three-man production unit which produces a couple of dozen short documentary films annually on farm subjects for use by television stations and others.

The National Research Council, a government arm, has a man who makes science documentaries. Both operate at the pleasure of the National Film Board, which has jurisdiction over government film-making.

Victoria Daily Times
VICTORIA, B.C., SATURDAY, APRIL 19, 1969 —PAGE 23

Arthur Mayse

As a child exposed to one of the grimmer church disciplines, I used to envy the Anglicans their God. He appeared to be a much more reasonable diety than the stern Jehovah our congregations preferred, and he placed fewer restrictions on his worshippers.

Even though I have met the occasional Anglican tiger who hated happiness equally with sin, this impression has lingered. It was bolstered this week by the installation of the Most Rev. John Ogle Anderson as Anglican Bishop of British Columbia.

As an occasional churchgoer, it gives me a comfortable feeling to know that this man is at the helm. "Christ didn't tell us to be miserable," Bishop Anderson informed a Times interviewer. "He told us to be happy and to love one another.

"Condemning your neighbor because he plays poker on Sunday is no part of Christ's gospel."

Although poker has brought me no joy on the Sabbath or any other day, those are wise and discerning words, and they do the speaker credit.

They will not win universal acceptance; in fact you can be sure that the newcomer has already been marked down in some quarters as a dangerous man.

It is equally certain that a pronouncement of this sort from a spiritual leader firmly rooted in his church's tradition will appeal to men of goodwill.

I don't mean his use of Sunday poker as an illustration of a theme, but his claim that religion and joy shouldn't be strangers.

Too often, they are. That, I suppose, is one reason why so many of us are casual about church, even though we may do our best to abide by Christ's tenets in our own lives.

What Bishop Anderson's qualities as a preacher may be, I've yet to learn.

It's plain, however, that he has courage, otherwise I doubt that he'd deal so bluntly with uncomfortable realities.

At a time when the voice of the youth-hater echoes loud in the land, Bishop Anderson has the temerity to come out with something like this:

"They (young people) are challenging our concepts and particularly our concept of an economy geared to war. If we don't answer them we shall lose them, and our Christianity will be condemned by history as a failure."

That's strong talk, and not precisely the sort I have come to expect from senior churchmen in these troubled years.

More often than not, the speaker-out is a layman—a Dr. Spock who backed one of youth's concepts with his freedom, or a mild Harvard professor of biology whose off-the-cuff speech blueprinted youth's disenchantment.

It's no secret either, that many adults share that malaise. Some of us—and I'm speaking here of those who do not regularly attend church services—might be impelled to do so if we felt that the church was meeting the challenge of our times.

We are governed today to a fare-ye-well.

At the same time, we suffer from a curious lack of moral leadership, and this we cannot expect from Ottawa or any provincial capital.

I'm not talking merely about sex morals here, which are forever being mauled around, but the larger morality by which a life or a society can be steered.

The Sermon on the Mount is still available to any who will read, but being human, we need human interpretation set in the context of our times.

There are pastors, some of them in this city, who strive in that direction. But most of the services I've observed were set-pieces that had survived war and social upheaval virtually unchanged. They offered scant challenge to the young or anybody else.

Bishop Anderson has stated this problem of lack of communication, and its inevitable consequences, very well. I hope that in his reasonable Anglican way he can come up with some of the essential answers.

INFLATION: Harsh Reality of Everyday Life

★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★

30 People Make Their Living From a Single Beef Carcass

By John Driscoll

Inflation is T-bone steak at $1.75 a pound and about to take another leap upward in price.

Inflation is when you wonder at the end of the month where all the money went.

And, while inflation to the politicians is an election issue, to the general public it is a harsh reality of everyday living.

A comparison of food prices advertised in the Times of April, 1966, with food prices advertised in March and April this year demonstrates how much of a problem exists.

The actual prices can be misleading since most items are on sale and much lower than they would ordinarily be.

Some items such as coffee, juices, fish, and certain cuts of meat have been stable over the past three years and while the price of bread has risen the sale price has gone down.

The more expensive cuts of meat are seldom on sale and a comparison is difficult to obtain.

But the price of steaks is definitely going up — again.

Victoria meat market and shopping centre managers say the Americans are to blame.

"American buyers are coming in strong to buy up Canadian beef," said Barry Fisher, manager of Glenwood Meats.

"The American buyer with 7½ per cent more value for his money can afford to pay more. With no tarrif on beef Canadian buyers are in an awkward situation.

"The price of meat will likely go up again soon," predicted Fisher.

"By the end of May we'll see the highest market ever for beef," he added.

The manager of a chain store agreed with Fisher's assessment. "The high influx of U.S. buyers is pushing the price of Canadian beef up," he said.

Karl Smith, manager of Karl's Meat Market does not feel Americans are responsible for the skyrocketting price of beef.

"It's a matter of supply and demand," he said.

"The beef producers are more organized and they are taking advantage of the situation by controlling the flow, never flooding the market."

Smith doesn't blame the producers however. "Everybody's taking advantage of the situation where they can."

"Everybody's looking for more money."

Food retailers agree that labor costs, handling costs, freight costs, and wrapping costs have all spiralled.

"Take a carcass of beef," said Smith, "from the time it leaves the farm to the time it gets to my shop there are 25 to 30 people making their living from it."

Fisher explained that the seasons even have something to do with the price of meat.

"During the winter people eat stews or roasts," he said. "Come spring everybody wants to barbecue and they want steaks."

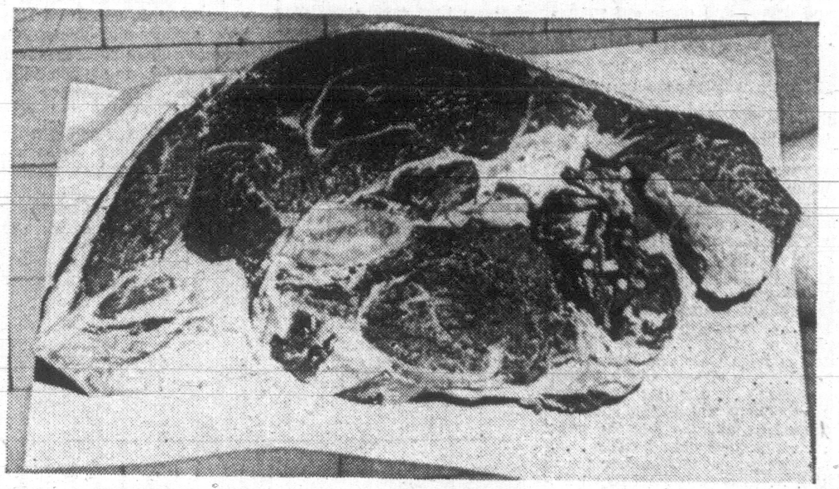
Meat market operators are quick to point out that the profit margin in the beef industry is not huge.

"The producers are making a good return now but they've seen lean years," said Fisher. "The wholesalers are working on a net profit of a half of one per cent."

Recent increases in the price of vegetables and fruit are also blamed on the United States market.

"We get a lot of produce from California and the weather there has been bad," explained the chain store manager who asked to remain unidentified.



FOR GOURMETS ONLY will soon be the tag on sirloin steaks as it, like the T-bones, have gone beyond the price range of Mr. and Mrs. Average Citizen. T-bones are now selling in the $1.75-a-pound range and meat market managers say another price boost looms.

"In addition since California outlawed the use of cheap Mexican labor, labor costs have risen."

Food retailers feel they have been unjustly criticized for price increases.

"People think nothing of a bottle of whiskey going up a dollar or a car going up $1,000 but they are very disturbed by rising food costs," said Fisher.

"They are more conscious of food prices since it is a commodity they deal in week after week. But the cost of living is rising.

Certainly it is not food alone that forces constant revisions to household budgets.

Rents have increased alarmingly in the face of a housing shortage.

With more leisure time the cost of entertainment is rising.

The big spenders in our economy, the governments, are spending more each year and thus taxes increase steadily.

When the average citizen finds himself borrowing to meet obligations he finds the cost of money has increased.

Economists state that ideally prices for goods and services should not rise more than 2 per cent per year.

Yet in 1967 and again in 1968 consumer prices rose an average of more than 4 per cent.

Louis Rosminsky, governor of the Bank of Canada, said recently that the consumer price index is continuing its 4 per cent annual rise "with no signs of a slowdown."

The average shopper may not understand the index but he knows of inflation by the deflation of his wallet.

When will prices level off?

Food retailers can see no levelling off in the near future in their business or in any other.

"It's like a snowball rolling down a hill," said Smith.

"Smith said the only way that prices could level off is if the government put a freeze on goods. "But I don't see a hope in hell of that happening," he added.

Fisher predicted that meat packers as a whole will level off their market by buying up feed lot businesses and introducing their own price controls.

"That will not mean prices will get lower," he said. "The market will be kept very firm."

The politicians toot out cliches about galloping inflation and the need to sanforize the shrinking dollar at election time.

But as the balloon of inflation continues to rise all the politicians appear to be able to do is to generate hot air.

The people who buy the goods and services that are skyrocketting in cost are asking "what time does the balloon come down?"

The answer according to people in the retail food business: "not in the foreseeable future."

'Mrs. Consumer Thinks B.C.'

It's enough to make an Okanagan apple producer turn green.

Apple juice made from Nova Scotia apples is being sold in Victoria grocery stores for less than apple juice made from British Columbia apples.

At one supermarket Friday a 48-ounce can of Nova Scotia-produced apple juice was selling for 47 cents.

Beside it, a 48-ounce can of B.C.-produced apple juice was marked at 55 cents.

"Eastern producers are trying to break into this market," explained a manager for a wholesale grocer firm.

The manager said apple juice from the east is priced at 40 per cent less than that from B.C. producers.

"It's not unusual with products from the east," he said. "They're subsidizing the cost."

When asking how the apple juice from the east is moving he replied "Mrs. Consumer thinks B.C. products are the best.

"We sell 2,000 cases of B.C. juice in the same time as we move 100 cases of this stuff from the east."

Saanich Looks At Junk Cars

Saanich council intends to take steps to control the problem of junk cars on open property in residential areas.

A zoning bylaw regulating the keeping of unlicensed vehicles, trailers and parts of vehicles will be presented to a public hearing in the council chamber of the municipal hall Monday, Apirl 28, at 7:30 p.m.

A copy of the bylaw may be seen at the municipal hall during business hours. Purpose of the public hearing is to give citizens the opportunity of being heard by council.

The bylaw, if approved by council, would restrict residents to not more than one unlicensed vehicle on one parcel of property in the open.

A Saanich official said if additional unlicensed vehicles are kept in carports or basements, "that's fine."

He said junked cars being kept on private property and in the open are becoming a serious problem, prompting "quite a few" complaints.

The reason Saanich started considering a bylaw was because of the complaints and because of the anticipated rejections of cars at the testing station. Because it costs $10 to dispose of a junk car, they tend to accumulate.

860-Foot Tanker Here For Paint-Up

The second-largest ship ever to squeeze into the Esquimalt Graving Dock will arrive here Sunday for painting and inspection by Yarrows Ltd.

The 860-foot Western Hunter, a 65,000-ton United States oil tanker, will arrive from San Francisco on a special trip to he hauled from the water for the first time since she was launched in Japan two years ago.

A Yarrows Ltd. spokesman said today the only larger ship ever to use the graving dock was the Cunard liner Queen Elizabeth while serving as a troop carrier during the Second World War.

Esquimalt Seeking Ways To Have Branch Library

Esquimalt Mayor Ray Bryant will meet Greater Victoria Library Board officials next week in hopes of finding a way to finance a proposed branch library for the municipality.

"If Esquimalt is to have a branch library some other was of shuffling library board budget cuts must be found," he said.

Former chairman of the Greater Victoria Library Board, Ald. Alan Newberry said Thursday it is mathematically impossible for the board to pay for the Esquimalt library after Saanich council's decision to cut its per capita library tax from $4.42 to $4.

(Newberry was the only member of council to vote against the cut).

SIMILAR REDUCTION

Victoria city finance committee also recommended a similar reduction.

Asked whether Esquimalt might pull out of the library board next year if it doesn't get a branch, Mayor Bryant said: "If it can't be done (construction of a branch in Esquimalt) we'd have to take a serious look at all programs we participate in."

Esquimalt's library costs have risen more drastically than any other municipality's in the last three years. This year Esquimalt's predicted share is $55,500.

The final decision on whether Esquimalt gets a branch is up to the library board, the mayor said.

Three to Attend Boys' Club Meet In San Francisco

Three members of the Boys' Club of Victoria will represent Canada at the National Keystone Conference in San Francisco, April 25 to 28.

Ed Dopierala, 18, president of the Adanac Keystone Club, will present the opening invocation at the conference.

Other Victoria delegates are Bruce Goldsmith, 17, and Tony Onyzkiewicz, 17.

More than 600 delegates representing 240 Boys' Clubs across the United States will attend the conference. Topics to be discussed include drugs and their abuse, lowering the voting age, education, and community service.

Six Months For Robbery

A 24-year-old man was sentenced Friday to six months in jail for the March 5 robbery of a city service station.

Donn C. G. Patersen, 845 Princess, had pleaded not guilty.

During his trial the attendant testified Patersen took about $46 from Quadra Mohawk about 5 a.m. He said the accused told him he had a gun.

Defence counsel Chris Randall said it was an unusual case and asked for a suspended sentence. Petersen has no record.

Magistrate William Ostler noted there was no aspect of terror or brutality in the case but said that after careful consideration he didn't think probation was appropriate.

He said Patersen led an aimless and goal-less life.

Thumbs-Down Ruling Seen In Priory Bid for 150 Beds

By PETE LOUDON

Nobody is saying anything officially, but hopes are dim for addition of 150 beds to St. Mary's Priory, the extended care hospital at Colwood.

Decision on the hospital's request to the Greater Victoria and Gulf Islands Regional Hospital District will be made known within two weeks.

A thumbs-down decision is likely for several reasons, according to persons close to the hospital district—people who begin by saying, "Don't quote me, but . . ."

First and foremost is the feeling among members of the hospital district's advisory committee that an acute-care hospital catering mainly to elderly persons should be built closer to where most of the elderly live—Victoria, Oak Bay and Saanich.

CLOSE TO HOSPITALS

They say it should also be close to acute-care hospitals to facilitate easy transfer between the institutions.

Municipal politics also affects the case for the Priory, according to other sources. They say Victoria and Saanich representatives each favor creation of new acute-care facilities in their jurisdictions. And they don't want to put municipal money into unorganized territory.

Colwood, Metchosin, Langford representatives to the board, newly-elected (voting takes place today) will be feeling their way and will have less experience in committee infighting, for months to come.

LACK OF SEWERS

Another obstacle facing the Priory in any expansion plans is the lack of sewers in the Priory area.

Health officials say one hospital bed represents a waste problem of 100 gallons per day.

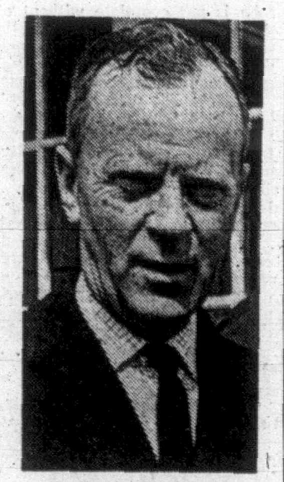
The Priory is in an area where septic tank use proved to be a serious problem in recent years when a nearby shopping plaza was opened.

Although a possibility exists that an institution in Colwood could be tapped into the existing sewer system of the department of national defence, this would be more expensive than building on sewered property.

Health Minister Ralph Loffmark, who must approve any new hospital plans, has regulated against major developments in unsewered areas. (One source says, however, this rule is being broken in other parts of B.C. And the B.C. Pollution Control Board often differs with health department rulings and "they'll permit anything.")

Another factor which may have a bearing in the decision for location of new acute-care beds is the fact that Greater Victoria doctors would prefer to have the shortest possible distances to travel between acute and extended-care hospitals. The Priory is seven or eight miles from either Royal Jubilee or St. Joseph's hospitals.

District voters approved a plan last year for construction of 600 new acute-care beds. To date approval has been given to 150 at Gorge Road Hospital, 15 on Salt Spring Island and 75 at a still-undisclosed site on the Saanich Peninsula north of Elk Lake.



MAYOR STEPHEN
. . . decision soon

Regional hospital district board chairman, Victoria Mayor Hugh Stephen, has stated that decision on location of the 350 beds remaining to be allocated will be reached before the end of this month.

Meantime, St. Mary's Priory administrator George Harrison said Friday a decision against that hospital would disappoint many rural residents.

COSTS HIGHER

"Just because some medical authorities feel that extended-care beds should be downtown, right next to acute-care beds, doesn't mean that this is necessarily true."

He said the Agnew-Peckham hospital survey supported the Priory's proposal for 150 to 200 additional beds. He said the Priory could move swiftly and go to tender within six months of a favorable decision.

Harrison said sewerage would not be an insurmountable problem if a tie-in could be made to the DND lines but he admitted costs would be higher than if the hospital were located on existing municipal sewers.

But he is not optimistic that the Priory will be given a go-ahead to expand.

Ask The Times

Q. Someone bet me that you wouldn't answer the question, "What was Prime Minister Trudeau's occupation from 1939 to 1945?". Was he a member of the Canadian Armed Forces?

A. Prime Minister Trudeau was a student during the years mentioned. He received his BA from Jean de Brebeuf College in Montreal in 1940, to 1943, and political science at Harvard University from 1944 to 1945. While he was at the University of Montreal he enrolled in the Canadian Officers' Training Corps and served a summer training session with the Fusiliers de Mont-Royal.

Early Rain Deters Voters From Polls

Pouring rain in the first few hours today kept voters away from the polls in Capital Regional District directors elections in Langford, Colwood and Metchosin.

Each area is entitled to one seat on the board, which is responsible for a number of area-wide affairs, primarily implementation of a new system of main-line sewers and marine outfalls.

Polls are open until 8 p.m. Polling stations are at Colwood and Sangster elementary schools for Colwood voters; at Langford, Millstream, Glen Lake and Happy Valley elementary schools for Langford; and Metchosin elementary school for Metchosin.

DIRECTORS RESIGNED

The previous directors resigned following the overwhelming vote against forming a single municipality in the present unincorporated area west of Victoria.

Colwood has four candidates — civil engineer James Buchanan, electrical contractor Richard Emery, housewife Agnes Smith and realtor Herman Williams.

Langford has three candidates — civil servant Charles Cue, civil servant Earl Pallister and a car parts proprietor, William Temple.

Metchosin also has three candidates — machinist Kenneth Rainey, building contractor Donald Stansall and civil servant John Tipton.

Returning officer Mrs. Mary Colclough said she has no idea how many persons are eligible to vote because she is using a Sooke School Board voting list which covers the area from Colwood to Port Renfrew.

Only people whose names appeared on the school list can vote. There is not voting by affadavit.

UVIC WOMEN DISCUSS WHY THEY'RE THERE

From Militant Martha in 1850 to Miss Cool Co-Ed '69

By ROBIN BURGESS

With cries of "equal rights for women," Martha Hamm Lewis bullied, cajoled and brow-beat reluctant authorities until she became the first woman ever admitted to a Canadian university, the New Brunswick teachers' training university, in 1850.

Like the right to vote, the right to enter universities, exclusively a man's realm, was a hard-won victory for women.

Now, over 100 years later, just what kind of creatures are the modern counterparts of those first fervent co-eds? What are they aiming for; what are they concerned about? Why do they come to the halls of higher learning in the first place?

Co-eds at the University of Victoria and two of the women staff members who work with them tried to give an answer.

Dr. Esme Foord, head of counselling at Uvic vigorously shattered the old saw that women come to university "to get a man."

"I think the career idea is uppermost. Marriage may very well be, and usually is, something they are going to include. But a lot of the women are keenly interested in self-development too."

She agreed that marriage among students is definitely on the rise but it is a movement she heartily supports.

"I rejoice if this is so. At university they are meeting those who have the same interests as themselves. I think it is generally accepted married students are very good students."

One trend that hasn't changed over the century, agreed co-eds and counsellors, is the tendency of women to steer towards the more lady-like arts and humanities courses rather than the traditionally male-dominated sciences.

More Creative

"I see two things responsible for this," Dr. Foord explained. "Women tend to be somewhat more creative in their thinking and also, I think, there's a basic difference in the competitive instinct between male and female students. The co-ed tends to want to work somewhat more co-operatively. Science is a competitive field."

Co-eds iterviewed, however, denied any feelings of inferiority in ordinary classroom competition with male students.

"I find in my classes I'm competing with males on an equal level," said Linda Stewart, a fourth year student and junior don at the Emily Carr Hall women's residence.

Men Still Boss

Surprisingly enough, though, most of these young women still seemed to feel that in running the home and running the country males should be dominant.

Linda Stewart said, "I think the male should be dominant in the family. I would hate to see that upset."

"I wouldn't want to see a woman taking over the country. Males should be dominant," Linda Bonner elaborated. Miss Bonner, a first year student, was recently elected to the students' Representative Assembly at Uvic.

Some modern co-eds seem to feel that the members of their sex are too emotional to be in a position of real power.

Pam Harris, a third year RA member explained, "I think you just can't forget the fact that women are more emotional than men. This came up at our counselling class. We had a woman arguing with a fellow and she, in the end, got extremely emotional and illogical."

Only Lynn Brassington, an active campus politician challenged the idea.

"In a lot of RA meetings the guys would be hot under the collar and the girls would be the calm ones."

Different Rules

Sex discrimination in certain phases of university life is something co-eds don't seem to concerned about. Mrs. Diana Caleb, director of women's activities and senior don of the women's residences, explained differences between rules in men's and women's residences.

Women in first year who live in residence have to come in at 2:30 a.m.; after first year, deadline is 3:30. Men in residence have no hours rules at all.

All residence rules are made up by and voted on by the women themselves. Linda Stewart admitted that many of the women find the hours rule a convenience when dates become too amorous.

Co-eds are very seldom flaming radicals. Uvic students and counsellors agreed that in politics most women students are far less likely to be out-spoken leftists than male students.

Lynn Brassington put this down to feminine lack of confidence. "To be a true radical you have to believe; no girl is sure of any belief. They don't have that much faith in their own political views."

"The ones who are going to agitate are nearly always boys," said Mrs. Caleb. "Girls seem to accept what they have; they respect people more, too."

Student politician Patricia Gage, commented on student power: "I don't approve of student power in the form of destruction we've seen on some of the American campuses."

"I think you can get a happy medium, neither left nor right," said Linda Bonner.

If a co-ed reaches a decision to drop out of university the main reason is very seldom marriage, said Dr. Foord.

"Those who do drop out do so because of financial or academic problems. My own impression is that the number who leave to marry is relatively small."

And what about those who stay? As educated, emancipated young women, what role do they see themselves playing after university?

General consensus was that "wiping little ones' noses" still plays a big part in most co-eds' dreams.

"I think marriage is the ultimate . . . for two or three years after marriage a career is something to work at—then children. I don't plan to mix the two," said Pam Harris.

Work Together

Even aspiring young women doctors or lawyers no longer feel they have to give up all dreams of a husband and family, Dr. Foord pointed out.

"A young couple of my acquaintance, both in the medical faculty, see themselves as practising together."

She warned, however, "If women are going to enter a field where men are dominant they must be even better prepared."

Essentially, Dr. Foord and Mrs. Caleb felt young college women today are concerned about the same issues that are troubling young people everywhere—the problems of our society, the search for a personal identity.

"Their concern is for a better society," said Mrs. Caleb, "and for the betterment of human beings." Mrs. Caleb, who is also Uvic secretary for the Canadian University Students Overseas mentioned the increase in women applying for work in underdeveloped countries as an example of this concern.

Who Am I?

"I think the co-ed today worries about the same basic problems of establishing herself as an individual and finding her place, whether in a career or in marriage," Dr. Foord explained. "We're all concerned with the big questions of 'who am I?' and 'where am I going?'"

History books report that Martha Lewis was forbidden to speak to any of the male students and was required to sit alone at the back of her classrooms, wearing a heavy veil. I wonder how many of her modern sisters-under-the-skin would put up with that!

Yes, lift up your veil, Martha, here they are—co-eds . . . the new, improved, super-mini-spirted, bright-plumed, 1969 variety.

They sort of brighten up a campus, don't they?

DEAR ABBY . . .

Young Convict Advises Others

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I am 18 and in a pack of trouble. I was arrested for burglary and other charges. This was not my first time, so I am locked up here in Cambridge, Minn., awaiting trial. I would like to express some of the things I have learned in the 121 days I have been here.

One is that you should listen to your parents as they will never steer you wrong. I never got along too good with my dad. Every time he tried to talk to me we got into a heated argument, but now I realize if I had listened to him, I wouldn't be here.

I would also like to tell kids, don't quit school to go out and make money. I did, and look where I ended up.

Also, there are no short cuts. A guy needs all the education he can get. And another thing. Don't blame your mistakes on other people. My friends showed me how to break the law, but I am the one who now must take full responsibility for my own actions. I will probably get sent up to St. Cloud, but thanks, Abby, for letting me say this. Also, I want to thank Sheriff Erickson. He is a swell guy. He let me use his typewriter to write to you.

Sincerely,
"THE CAMBRIDGE BUM"

DEAR SIR: You're young yet, so don't go calling yourself a "bum." You can pay your debt and still amount to something if you really want to. I talked to Sheriff Erickson, and he told me you had already been sent to St. Cloud. He said he certainly hoped you would straighten yourself out because you had a lot of good in you, in addition to being exceptionally smart. I believe him. I wish you luck.

DEAR ABBY: You always tell girls they should confide in their mothers. Well, I used to, but no more.

First I made my mother promise if I told her something in confidence she wouldn't tell anybody. She promised and I told her. (It was something about a boy I liked.) Well, it got back to this boy because my mother told my aunt, and this aunt just happens to have the biggest mouth in Baltimore, that's all, and she told this boy's mother!

So please, Abby, tell mothers who can't keep secrets not to feel left out if their children don't tell them anything.

TERRY.

DEAR TERRY: You are right, of course. So to all you mothers out there: If you want to keep the lines of communication open between you and your children, never —but NEVER betray a confidence.

DEAR ABBY: Your column has always been welcome in our home. Indeed we called you "the learned judge—a Second Solomon." Then all that endearment came to a sudden end when you gave your approval to a mother bathing her baby in the kitchen sink—the same sink in which the household dishes were washed!

Abby, you showed a shocking disregard for the accepted principles of sanitation and disease prevention. The mere thought of eating from dishes washed in the same sink in which a child was bathed leaves a most offensive taste in one's mouth.

We could easily close this chapter by forever boycotting your column. However, we prefer to give you a chance to retract your unsavory judgment.

HELEN A.,
NORTHPORT, N.Y.

DEAR HELEN: Like I said. If the sink is clean BEFORE AND AFTER the baby's bath, what's the difference?

DEAR ABBY: I recently attended a formal wedding. Immediately following the ceremony, the photographer (a professional, hired for the occasion) said, "All right, I want a picture of the wedding party."

The pianist and soloist started to join the group. The photographer said, "Sorry, but you two are not in the wedding party."

The pianist appeared somewhat miffed, but sat down. The soloist ignored the photographer and got into the picture anyway. My question: Are the musicians part of the wedding party?

NOSY

DEAR NOSY: Not in MY book (Or Amy's, either.).

CONFIDENTIAL TO "ACTOR — AT LIBERTY": Pride goeth before a fall. A small role is better than a long loaf.

Everybody has a problem. What's yours? For a personal reply write to Abby, Box 69700, Los Angeles, Calif., 90069, and enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

ST. MICHAEL'S
SCHOOL
For Your Son?

Now, when your son is at a young age, is the time to fit him for his life's work. Going through an exacting school with high standards will teach him how to learn, how to LIKE learning, how to benefit from what he learns. Boys do more work and more work is expected of them at St. Michael's, an interdenominational school. Here we teach them how to work to the best of their ability, and this after all, is the important thing. Ages 7 through 15 years.

POPULAR HORSE HAD A STROKE

Latest Bulletin Reports Lucky Has a Chance

Lucky has had a stroke.

Lucky, the horse who is known to hundreds of the children who have ridden behind her in cutters and sleighs, and who have seen her in Victoria Day Parades, is ailing.

But Lucky has a chance, reports her owner, Doris Ganton.

"People keep phoning, and I'm so busy looking after Lucky I hardly have time to answer. But she's fighting all the way, and she's begun to eat again."

Lucky, the horse who is equally at home in show ring or circus parade, is known across Canada.

She is the horse who, on an Ottawa ceremonial occasion on which Mayor Charlotte Whitton insisted on horse-drawn carriages, plastered the luckless mayor with green goo, after the mayor had shouted and waved a paper at the aristocratic mare's face.

"Quite right, too," said Lucky's owner. "Lucky loves a pageant, but she doesn't put up with that sort of thing."

Another of Lucky's exploits was taking the well-known cutter through the vehicle testing station for a safety check.

"She was still going like a bomb until four days ago," Doris reports. "Then suddenly she was found lying down in a coma. She's lost 200 pounds in four days."

But the latest bulletin from Lucky's veterinarian states that Lucky has a good chance of pulling through. She's eating and drinking again, and the best prescription now is rest and affection.

Doris herself has flu, but that's a minor detail when Lucky is fighting for her life. The flu germs must wait their turn.

Jet-Set Dogs Wear Mink Coats And Dine on Gourmet Meals

By JUDY KLEMESRUD

NEW YORK — They jet all over the world. They dine on gourmet foods. They wear mink coats. They sport real gold collars. They ride to their country homes in limousines.

A dog's life? Yes, because they happen to belong to rich people.

The dogs come in all breeds—but there really is no other breed like them. Take Joie de Vivre, for example. He is a 10-year-old grey miniature Poodle who lives here at 912 Fifth Avenue with his mistress, Mrs. F. Raymond Johnson, widow of the merchandising executive.

"Joie," as he is called, lives to eat caviar from a spoon and drink champagne from a glass.

"He always has breakfast in bed with me," said Mrs. Johnson, who has no children of her own. "We each have our own trays. I treat him just like a child, and I talk to him just like a child, He has fresh strawberries and some coffee—just like I do."

Joie has a rather extensive wardrobe, most of it designed to match or complement some of Mrs. Johnson's fashions. They both have matching beige mink coats with horizontal sable stripes, and matching baby leopard coats.

"He likes to wear the same thing I do," the Rumanian-born redhead said. "He knows colors."

More and more, rich people's dogs go most everywhere with them, and that means taking to the air as their owners follow the sun—and the fun.

Some airlines let small dogs travel free in the cabins with their owners. Others make the owners buy seats for their dogs—which Truman Capote always does for his bulldog, Charley—or else require that the animals be put in kennels in the baggage department.

The Daniel D. Morans of Palm Beach, Fla., are among the hefty number of rich people who keep dogs to guard their estates. The Morans have six Vizslas (Hungarian retrievers), which sometimes wear 14-karat gold collars specially made for them by a Los Angeles jeweller.

Mrs. Vincent Astor is so fond of dogs that she turned one room of her luxurious Park Avenue duplex into what she calls her "dog room." The room, which is painted bright red, is decorated with nearly 50 paintings of dogs.

Mrs. Astor owns a smooth-haired Dachshund named Benny Montague, and a Norwich Terrier named George. The two dogs have matching Argyle sweaters for winter.

Mr. and Mrs. Richard L. Harris of 535 Park Avenue are often mistaken for professional dog walkers when they take their five dogs out for a walk in the evening.

"We get offers of employment almost every night," said Mrs. Harris, whose husband is vice-president of United Sttaes Lines.

Dior Discount House Cuts Couture Prices

By GLORIA EMERSON

PARIS — Leave it to the House of Christian Dior, the biggest and shrewdest moneymaker in the French haute couture, to face the cruel facts of life. Paris couture houses are withering, losses are rising, customers are fewer.

Dior's recent disclosure that prices of its couture clothes will be cut by 15 to 20 per cent, and that delivery will be speeded, will help Dior if not the rest of the French industry. For the others can't do the same.

None of the new Dior reforms, worked out in a two-year study by a Paris management consultant team, has quite jelled. The plans leaked out by mistake before a final vote has been taken by Dior management.

The object of the Dior reforms is certainly not just to make couture clothes cheaper. That's a side benefit. The aim is to increase efficiency and make the couture operation pay.

Prices for couture clothes in this house are average for Paris. A coat costs $800 to $1,100; a suit is $800 to $1,200, and dresses are about $600.

It isn't, however, the prices that are keeping the customers away. After all, a James Glanos or Norman Norell creation can cost as much or more, without a single alteration included. It's the long wait that discourages women.

"A big part of the Dior clientele are foreigners. They can't spend a month in Paris, waiting for their dresses," Jean-Marc Depoix said. He is the right-hand man of Jacques Rouet, Dior's director, who has been with the couture house since it opened in 1946.

"We are in a profession that has not kept up with the times, that has not changed since Worth started it in 1889 when he showed his clothes, for the first time, on models." Depoix said. "It's madness."

What Dior is trying to do, without alarming anyone, is slide a little from the haute couture into de luxe ready-to-wear. Under the new plans, customers would be limited to three fittings on each garment. There will be machine work on the clothes, too.

"But never visible—just inside the linings perhaps—and not more than 5 per cent of the total workmanship," Depoix said.

One of the biggest problems at Dior is the ups and downs of the business. The nine Dior workrooms are so rushed at certain times that they can't fill all the orders. September means a crush of clients. During other months there isn't enough work to keep all the 350 employees in the workrooms busy.

When Christian Dior, the late designer, did the collections he never showed fewer than 200 outfits; it's down to 120 now. The couture house will continue, however, to give its traditional biannual collections, usually held in January and July.

Asparagus lunch buns are just the thing for lunch or a late evening meal. The flavor of tender, fresh-cooked asparagus spears compliments the flavor of the cooked ham they are rolled in. (Canada Department of Agriculture Photo)

Three Luncheon Dishes Use Fresh Asparagus

ASPARAGUS LUNCH BUNS

One pound asparagus, cooked; ¼ cup mayonnaise; 2 teaspoons prepared mustard; ¼ teaspoon Worcestershire sauce; 1½ tablespoons chopped green onion; 6 slices cooked ham, OR 6 slices cooked tongue; 6 hot dog buns; butter.

Chill cooked asparagus. Combine mayonnaise, mustard, Worcestershire sauce and green onions. Spread mixture on slices of ham or tongue. Roll meat around 3 or 4 asparagus spears. Spread buns with butter and insert a meat roll in each. Makes 6 rolls.

ASPARAGUS AND EGG PIE

One pound asparagus; 4 hard-cooked eggs; ¼ cup sliced green onions; 3 tablespoons butter; 3 tablespoons flour; ½ teaspoon salt; ⅛ teaspoon pepper; ½ pint commercial sour cream; 2 tablespoons chopped parsley; 1 baked pie-shell (9-inch).

Cut tips of asparagus to 4-inch lengths. Cut remaining portion of stalks into 1-inch pieces. Cook in boiling salted water until just tender, about 10 minutes. Drain.

Cut 2 or 3 slices of egg for garnish. Dice remainder. Saute onion in melted butter until transparent, about 3 minutes. Stir in flour and seasonings. Gradually add sour cream and cook stirring constantly until smooth and thickened. Add parsley, eggs and asparagus pieces. Heat thoroughly. Turn into pie shell. Garnish with asparagus tips and egg slices. 6 Servings.

BROILED CHICKEN WITH ASPARAGUS

Six half chicken breasts; salt; pepper; ginger; ¼ cup butter; 2 pounds asparagus, cooked.

Season chicken with salt, pepper and ginger. Place skin side down on greased shallow pan; dot with butter. Broil, 8 inches from heating unit, until browned (about 15 minutes). Turn, baste and continue broiling until chicken is brown and cooked through (about 20 minutes longer).

Arrange cooked asparagus in heat-proof dish; place chicken on top.

Prepare the following sauce:

Two tablespoons butter, melted; 2 tablespoons flour; ¼ teaspoon salt; ⅛ teaspoon paprika; 1 cup milk; 2 egg yolks, beaten; 4 teaspoons lemon juice; 2 tablespoons butter; ¼ cup crushed potato chips.

Blend flour and seasonings in melted butter. Gradually add milk and cook until smooth and thickened (about 5 minutes). Stir a little hot mixture into beaten yolks; add to remaining sauce and cook 1 minute. Remove from heat. Beat in lemon juice and remaining butter.

Pour sauce over chicken and sprinkle with potato chips. Broil until lightly browned (2 to 3 minutes). 6 servings.

SHOPPING GUIDE

Footsore Mathilda Gives Penny An Idea

By PENNY SAVER

I hear that the 24th of May has been scheduled for the 19th this year. Of course, the powers that be call it Victoria Day to confuse the issue but to me the parade will always be "The Twenty-Fourth of May Parade" no matter what the date. This coming May will be the first Mathilda has spent in Victoria for a long time and she was quite excited when she found a small note in the paper saying that parade officials were working for a shorter, better quality parade full of fantasy so children will enjoy it more. "Just the kind of parade I love," she remarked with a sigh. "Enough bands to keep things cheery, but not so many they drown each other out, beautiful floats, laughing children and, I hope, no sore feet when the day is ended. It's my feet that destroy parades for me now!"

Mathilda would find parades much more bearable if she could take her own portable chair and her remark set me thinking. A portable chair that would be perfect for a parade would also be just the thing for a picnic, or even gardening for those who dislike kneeling over a bed of weeds. In fact, it could be useful just about anywhere; so I set out to find one. I didn't have to look far before I found a small portable seat for $1.95. Made of sturdy green canvas and what looks like galvanized steel tubing, these seats are 13 inches high. When opened each seat is 11 inches by 8½ inches but closed it is only 1½ inches deep—a handy size for tucking into a shopping bag or under one's arm. The legs work like scissors and the tubing is tipped with red plastic.

Slicing Eggs a Snap

Potato salad season is near and potato salad brings me to an old problem—how to slice slippery hard-boiled eggs. The best answer is an egg slicer and I have found a dandy one. This $1.25 gadget it made completely of metal—there is no plastic to chip and break. A rounded slotted section of aluminum holds the egg in place while 10 stainless steel wires slip through the egg, chopping it into nine neat pieces.

For $2.60 one can buy an egg-wedger to get eggs into symmetrical wedges for decorating the tops of salads. The box this egg-wedger comes in also has some interesting recipes for such things as horseradish patties.

My family has caught on to my method of coercing someone into working by giving them the brand-new tools needed for the job. They wanted me to make more French fries but I complained about the problem of cutting the potatoes to the right size. To counter this the children presented me with a handy chip-maker. This consists of a grid of blades, each square on the grid being no more than one-half-inch wide. This device costs $1.95. Now all I have to complain about is the grease settling on the walls and in their stomachs—arguments that French fry lovers defeat with a shrug and the words "So what?"

Please call 382-3131 between 9 a.m. and 4 p.m. if you would like to know where to buy these items.

Second Thoughts Sometimes Pay Off

By JEAN SHARP

TORONTO (CP) — If a salesman stood no chance at all of talking you into buying something, he'd presumably do something else for a living. And if you weren't sometimes tempted to buy something you can't afford, or grab what looks like a bargain, you wouldn't be human.

A. R. Walker, registrar of the consumer protection bureau in the Ontario department of financial and commercial affairs, says the rules of common-sense buying seem to bear repeating over and over again.

He cites two Better Business Bureau slogans he thinks people should keep in mind. One is "Investigate before you invest," the other, "If it seems too good to be true, it probably is."

"To begin with, don't be lured by the free gift, the gimmick, the last chance, the golden opportunity. It may be the golden opportunity for you to get into a contract you can't get out of, a contract for something you don't want or at least you know you could get along without if you take a second thought."

Laws governing "cooling-off periods" vary from province to province. You should know what applies where you live.

"Don't sign for something that's really beyond your budget, that extra straw hat that puts you in difficulty if you have some slight financial emergency," Mr. Walker says.

"In the same vein, don't be blinded by that bargain at an unbelievable price. Adopt the practice of shopping wisely, to find out if a better quality of merchandise or service may not be available elsewhere for that same price.

"Whenever you see a fantastic bargain it should be a red flag. Check it thoroughly against what you can get from a reliable business establishment."

What Is A Crimper?

Unlike the old meaning—"to curl or wave," the new CRIMPER means a lot more.

The new CRIMPER is a highly trained, very experienced hairstylist who understands your hair completely . . . from its chemical make-up, its condition, and its shape . . . to the shape of your head, your face and the way you feel about today's fashion.

Everyone has a differently shaped head, and a face that's entirely their own. That's why it's so important that a hairstylist chooses a style, a certain shape, and color to suit you perfectly . . . the new CRIMPER understands this.

GERARD SCOTT OF LONDON is one of the new CRIMPERS. He trained with some of England's leading stylists including Vidal Sassoon . . . and now he has designed a new salon in Victoria. Using the latest equipment from Europe, he has made his salon one of the most comfortable, most relaxing places you'll ever go.

Frozen Caribou Meat Needs a Large Saw

KASHECHEWAN, Ont. (CP) — When a housewife runs out of sugar in this northern outpost 300 miles from Timmins, replacing it at the corner grocery store can be a major problem. So she learns to be careful about making her once-yearly grocery list.

But shopping is only one of the household headaches confronting three city-bred girls who now make their home among the Cree Indians in this tarpaper settlement on the west shore of James Bay.

Donna Ward, a 27-year-old Toronto native whose husband, Grant, is an Anglican minister, was used to the cellophane convenience of meat counters. She didn't know what to do when first presented with a 14-pound slab of caribou meat.

A Cree woman showed her how a northern housewife handles the situation—go to the woodshed for a big saw, plunk the frozen slab onto the turned-down door of the wood stove and hack the meat into usable chunks.

Storage is a problem too, because the Grants had to order $1,000 worth of groceries from Timmins when they moved here last year with their three young children after three years at Moose Factory, 100 miles south.

USE EVERY SPACE

"You stick it behind the doors, under the beds, everywhere," says Donna.

"And me, I used to forget things when I shopped once a week—but you have to shop for a year!"

She and the other two "outside women" in the settlement—Evangelical missionaries Wilma Larocque, 26, of Parry Sound, Ont., and Gloria Patterson, 29, of Quebec—have learned another housekeeping rule. Never let the stove go out. Not only is it a vital part of their homes' heating systems but it's also tough to rekindle with no daily newspaper. Meals, all cooked on the stove, can't wait for the next mail delivery.

The three women also sport the latest in frigid fashions: Trim a parka with half a fox fur, letting the tail hang loose down the left side. You can tuck it across your face into the parka when the temperature dips to 30 below.

The Wards' daughters, Krista, 5, and Anita, 3, are beginning to pick up the language of their Cree playmates. Son Stephen is just one year old.

GAMES THE SAME

The children's games are much the same as those anywhere, except they carry their dolls the same way Mommy carries Stephen—papoose-style.

The two young Evangelical missionaries, who worked in northern Saskatchewan before coming here five years ago, said their superiors had doubts about sending them into the wilds.

"But we're a lot safer here than we would be in any of the cities," says Gloria.

They operate the health clinic and Wilma says: "I sometimes go out in the middle of the night on a sick call and I never even think of there being anything wrong about walking around in the dark."

Canadian Women Demanded Rights But They Still Hesitate to Use Them

OTTAWA (CP) — Many citizenship privileges that women take for granted today were won but a short time ago in Canada, reminds Sylva Gelber, director of the women's bureau for the federal labor department.

"But what use have women made of their political rights in these last 40 years?" Miss Gelber asks.

have undoubtedly exercised their right to vote, there is no woman on the government benches in the House of Commons in Ottawa. There is no woman on the benches of the official Opposition and there is only one on the benches of one of the smaller parties. One out of 264.

"There are in the Senate of Canada five women out of a total of 102 senators. The representation of women in the provincial legislatures is hardly better, the total for all provinces at the present time being 11."

The absence of women from political arenas might be explained in a variety of ways. There was, to start with, Canada's vastness.

"Obviously a woman with family responsibilities cannot uproot herself from her home constituency to travel the hundreds or thousands of miles to the Canadian capital, particularly at this time when the federal House is in session virtually all year round. But not all women have such responsibilities at home."

The major political parties also maintained separate political organizations for men and women, a fact which might reflect "certain deep-rooted attitudes which deter competent women from readily offering their services."

"A study to determine why, on the one hand, women demanded rights which, on the other hand, they have hesitated fully to utilize, may reveal some interesting facts about Canadian society as a whole.

"The political influence of women, nevertheless, is beginning to be felt and may no longer be disregarded. For while the housewife may not be throwing her hat into the political arena, she is raising her voice and is being heard."

The 1969 housewife, she adds, is an educated woman who will not suffer sharp practices easily.

"Producers of industrial products have learned to be wary. The considerable pressure brought to bear by the associations of consumers, led for the most part by women, has undoubtedly contributed to the establishment of a new government department to deal with consumers' affairs."

One sector of Canada's women, however, is a score of years behind the times in gaining their rights, Miss Gelber indicates.

"The present position of the Canadian Indian woman on the reserve is analogous to that which applied to all Canadian women before 1946 when, with the passing of the Canadian Citizenship Act, other Canadian women acquired firm citizenship rights.

"To young Canadians it may come as a shock to learn that less than 25 years ago, a native-born Canadian woman who married a non-Canadian—although both may have been residing in Canada and in spite of the fact that the women may never have left the shores of her native land—lost her citizenship automatically by virtue of her marriage.

Weddings

Johnston — Russell

United Church of Canada, Campbell River, B.C., was the scene of a pretty double-ring ceremony on March 15, 1969, which united in marriage Nicola Hope Russell, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Brealey of Campbell River, to Constable Larry T. Johnston, son of Mr. and Mrs. Stan Johnston, Victoria. Reverend Frank Badock officiated.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore an empire style gown of sheer white organza over pale green, [illegible] with Venice lace daisies; a sheer train fell from the back yolk. [illegible] adorned her hair, and she carried a cascade bouquet of rosebuds and stephanotis.

Attendants Miss Joy Kasiwara, Miss Quita Brealey, Mrs. Don Snyder, Mrs. Geoff Brealey, wore identical formal empire styled gowns of soft green chiffon over faille, complemented by daisies worn in their hair, and their bouquets of daisies en tone. Constable Jacob Meiser was best man, and ushers were Constables Ron Smith, Al Decker and Bill Shaw.

Mother of the bride wore pale yellow with brown accessories, and Mrs. Johnston, mother of the groom, chose a jacket dress of brown and gold with contrasting accessories. They wore orchid corsages.

At the reception held in the Legion Hall for close to 200 guests, Mr. Christopher Brealey proposed the toast to the bride. For the honeymoon trip to Disneyland, the bride chose a suit of navy and white with navy accessories and a corsage of pink rosebuds. Mrs. Henry Brealey, grandmother of the bride was presented with the bridal bouquet.

Out-of-town guests included: From Boston, Mass., Mr. C. Brealey; Saskatchewan, Mr. and Mrs. A. Strath, Mrs. Lena Napper, Mrs. G. Nikles; Seattle, Mr. and Mrs. D. McNeely, Mr. and Mrs. R. Harris; Vancouver, Mr. and Mrs. G. Payne, Mr. and Mrs. S. Hopkins, Mr. and Mrs. D. Snyder, Miss Reiko Kanaisamari, Mr. and Mrs. R. D. Jamieson, Mrs. R. J. Taylor, Misses Carol and Jean Taylor, Mr. and Mrs. R. G. Wismer, Mr. and Mrs. J. Wismer, Mr. D. Francis, Miss Quita Brealey, Mr. and Mrs. Pelham Kent, Mrs. Henry Brealey, Mr. and Mrs. A. L. Brealey, Mr. and Mrs. J. Duncan; Victoria, Mr. and Mrs. D. Lambrick and family, Mr. and Mrs. D. Gawley, Mr. and Mrs. D. Hood, Miss Lynda Adams, Mr. Bruce Thomson, Mr. and Mrs. D. Richardson, Mr. and Mrs. M. Harris, Mr. and Mrs. P. Holmes, Mr. and Mrs. F. Taafe, Mr. and Mrs. G. Walkey, Mr. and Mrs H. Laurie, Mr. and Mrs. H. Roberts, Mr. and Mrs. Alec Parr; Texada Island, Miss Ronnie Raleigh, Mr. Bruce Johnston; Port Alberni, Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Van deBraak; Nanaimo, Constable and Mrs. R. Burns; Courtenay, Constable and Mrs. R. Thorogood, Constable and Mrs. A. Decker.

Hamilton — Treloar

Reverend W. E. Greenhalgh officiated at the wedding of Marnie June, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Treloar, 538 Agnes Street, Victoria, and Mr. Leigh H. W. Hamilton, 135 Conrad Street, Victoria, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Hamilton, Woodfibre, B.C., at St. Michael's and All Angels' Church, West Saanich Road, on April 5, 1969, at 2 p.m.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride was lovely in a full-length gown of white peau de sole with train. A pearl and lace organza flower held the chapel veil and she carried a bouquet of pink rosebuds and white freesias.

Matron of honor, Mrs. Carol Hunt, Albany, California, wore a floor-length gown of pink flowered chiffon over taffeta, empire style. Bridesmaids Miss Gail Maxwell and Miss Nellie Hamilton, groom's sister from Woodfibre, wore identical pink gowns of peau d'elegance, empire style. They all wore similar headpieces of pink flowered material and veiling, and carried bouquets of pink carnations.

Best man was Mr. James Hamilton, groom's brother from North Vancouver, and ushers, Mr. Grant Treloar, bride's brother who is attending University of Oregon at Eugene, Oregon, and Mr. Donald Grant from Woodfibre.

At a reception held at McMorran's Seaview Room, Cordova Bay Road, Mr. Ray Oliver proposed the toast to the bride. For her going-away outfit, the bride chose a pink wool dress with a matching checked topcoat ensemble, with pink accessories, and a pink rosebud corsage. Following a motor trip to Long Beach and the mainland, the couple will make their home in Victoria.

Wegwitz — McCooey

Susan Mary McCooey, daughter of Lieutenant-Colonel and Mrs. Lawrence McCooey, 264 View Royal Avenue, Victoria, became the bride of Mr. Emil Wegwitz, son of Mr. and Mrs. Emil Wegwitz, 1707 Stanley Avenue, Victoria, in a wedding ceremony solemnized at Queen of Peace Church, Esquimalt, at 7 p.m. April 11, 1969, with the pastor, Reverend M. J. McNamara officiating.

The bride was given in marriage by her father. She was attended by Miss Jan Dillon-Davis, and her two sisters, Katherine and Mary Ann. Mr. James Hess was groomsman and ushers were Mr. Stanley Emerick and Mr. Tim McCooey.

After the ceremony, a reception was held at Royal Colwood Golf Club. The bride and groom left on their honeymoon to San Francisco and will take up residence in Victoria on their return.

Terlson — Webster

A lovely double-ring wedding took place on April 12, 1969, at 7 p.m. in Esquimalt United Church when Reverend Hartwell B. Illsey joined together in matrimony Norma, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. David Webster, 445 Fraser Street, to Mr. Keith Arthur Terlson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Herman Arthur Terlson, 2859 Colquitz Avenue.

The bride was given in marriage by her mother, Mrs. Jessie Webster, and her father, Mr. David Webster; Mrs. Pat Law was matron of honor, Miss Moira Webster, and Miss Katherine Paone were bridesmaids. Mr. Darrel Driemel was best man and Mr. Graham Terlson and Mr. Chris Bateman ushered the guests.

Following the reception the couple left for a short trip. Upon their return Mr. and Mrs. Terlson will reside in Victoria.

BRIDGE LESSON

By OSWALD and JAMES JACOBY
Newspaper Enterprise Assn.

North had quite a problem with his first bid. He could give his partner a jump raise in diamonds, he could cue bid in hearts, or he could show his lacklustre spade suit.

North solved the problem by bidding one spade and keeping cue bids and diamond raises for the future.

East really should have jumped to three or four hearts but East was one of these rubber bridge players who distrust their partner's overcalls. Anyway, it was a free-wheeling sort of game and East was sure the bidding would continue.

East was slightly disappointed when South and West passed and it was up to North to make a second bid. Once more, North could afford a jump raise in diamonds but by this time North was sure that if he showed real strength his nonvulnerable opponents would refuse to give up and North wanted to get doubled at the lowest possible level in diamonds so North merely went to three diamonds.

East continued with a mere three hearts, but by this time West found his voice and went to four. North continued with his plan and called five diamonds and when it got back to West, there was a double.

North had achieved his objective. It was up to South to play the hand.

South was pretty sure that West held the club ace so South started his campaign by trying for a partial strip play. He took two rounds of trumps, cashed two spades, ruffed a spade, ruffed his last heart, led a club and played low from his hand. West had to play his ace of clubs and South's worries were over.

THE LAST HOME LIKE THIS LASTED SIX DAYS OAK BAY

This large older home is loaded with character and won't last long. From the moment you step into the W-W carpeted entrance a friendly graciousness is established, a versatile livingroom with fireplace is separated by double sliding doors from the 13x15 dining room (built-in buffet) A double duty den or T.V. room with fireplace also retains the beamed ceiling of the dining room. A central hallway leads to a neighbourly "easy to remodel" cabinet electric kitchen.

Up the carpeted staircase we have four twin sized bedrooms with closet space in each for real people. Downstairs a full high basement is open for your own development.

Sensibly priced at $27,500.

A family like yours will buy this and we can guarantee the sale of your present home. Hurry or you'll miss this beauty.

A MODERN 3 BEDROOM HOME WITH THE EXTRAS YOU LIKE
YOU HAVE COMPARED THIS

Looking out over Cordova Bay this home has a panoramic view from the living-room, large sundeck and the kitchen. Only one year old this home is in beautiful condition and the outside appearance and the extra well done landscaping set it apart from the standard look-alike residences.

THE OLD BRICK FEATURE WALL AND FIREPLACE in the red-carpeted rumpus room, the large family room, the very high basement ready for further development including 4th bedroom and 3rd bathroom. (the master bedroom is ensuite) makes this home very good value at $33,900. The owners are in no hurry, so we would have time for you to sell your own first.

Pre-Sentence Reports Give 'A Window'

Pre-sentence reports provide "a window into the accused" Magistrate William Ostler told a meeting of Island magistrates and family court judges.

He was a speaker at the Parksville meeting sponsored by the Vancouver Island branch of the provincial probation office.

He told the group that probation officers are always of great assistance to the court.

Also discussed at the meeting was new legislation concerning the Protection of Children Act and the repeal of the Training School Act.

T. D. Bingham, a social welfare director, said the legislation would assist the development of new resources for juveniles and put the onus on local social welfare offices and communities to develop the resources.

Flood Water Damage Over $31 Million

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Officials estimated flood waters have caused $31,000,000 damage so far in three U.S. midwestern states and one official said he felt people in an area downsteam were treating the coming flood crests too lightly.

Civil defence and state officials made these preliminary flood damage estimates:

—About $5,000,000 in Minnesota, where 700 families were still homeless.

—About $19,000,000 in South Dakota, where 5,000 families were evacuated and 1,000 remain homeless.

—At least $7,000,000 in North Dakota.

And the civil defence co-ordinator for northwestern Illinois says residents in his area, where the Mississippi is due to reach a crest April 28, are taking the situation lightly.

"There's been so much publicity given protective works," said Donald E. Lemme, "that people believe all they have to do is sweat this thing out."

COULD CAUSE TROUBLE

Lemme said Friday that apathy in the Quad Cities area could cause trouble—the kind seen in 1965 when the Quad Cities alone suffered $8,500,000 in damages. The Quad Cities are Davenport, Iowa; Rock Island, Moline and East Moline, Ill.

The Red River of the North, which already has crested at communities of North Dakota and Minnesota, remained an expanded placid mirror.

"The damndest lake you ever saw—150 miles long and eight miles wide," remarked one Red Cross worker helping refugees from its floodwaters which covered an estimated 210,000 acres of farmland.

In Iowa, 700 persons were evacuated during the flooding of the Des Moines, Little Sioux, and smaller rivers. All but 200 have returned to their homes and no damage estimate was given.

An estimated 600 Wisconsin residents have left their homes, mostly from areas around La Crosse and Prairie Du Chien given to frequent flooding.

James Gruentzel, of Wisconsin's division of emergency government, said however that in general "we don't anticipate any problems" unless the weather worsens or dikes start eroding.

Youth Bound By Court

Former Esquimalt police chief James Smart gave evidence in county Court Friday afternoon on behalf of a 20-year-old Victoria man charged with breaking and entering.

He said Larry M. Ford of 612 Fairway was a youth of good character.

Ford was acquitted on the charge of breaking and entering but convicted on a charge of possessing stolen goods.

Judge Montague Drake bound him over to keep the peace for six months.

"It seems," he said, "that this young man was more caught up in this escapade than the instigator of it, and what he did seems entirely out of character."

Alan Bigelow, counsel for Ford, emphasized that a pre-sentence report spoke favorably for him. It seemed he was trying to get rid of the goods rather than retain them.

"He didn't want the articles," Bigelow said.

Jobless Total Shows Reduction

An increase of 14,000 jobs boosted the number of people working in B.C. last month to 758,000.

This represents a two per cent increase over February and a 4.7 per cent increase over March a year ago.

At the same time, the Vancouver Manpower office reports unemployment in the province dropped by 9,000 to 44,000 in March. A year ago the jobless total was 51,000.

B.C.'s unemployment rate, adjusted for seasonal factors, was 4.9 per cent last month. The national average was 4.2

Export B.C.'s Water Shrum Again Argues

By JOHN MIKA
Times Legislative Reporter

B.C. Hydro Chairman Dr. Gordon Shrum Friday renewed his controversial argument for export of B.C. water for profit.

He told the Victoria Chamber of Commerce that not enough people realize water is the province's "most valuable resource." (See also page 43.)

He said the province could earn $140 million a year if it just charged two cents for every five tons of water that goes through the W. A. C. Bennett dam's spillway and chutes.

Shrum said the Peace River water is "not used" by B.C. Hydro except to rotate the turbines in the power station named after him and, when that's done, the water is allowed to escape into the Arctic Ocean.

CONTRARY TO POLICY

"Far be it from me to suggest that any of this water be sold to any place because that's contrary to government policy and I support government policy," he said, prompting a laugh.

(Premier Bennett told the legislature last month that Shrum was "not speaking for the government" when he proposed sale of B.C. water during a speech in San Francisco he made as part of a government tourist promotion campaign.

Shrum carefully prepared his argument for export during the speech here.

He contended past unhappy was unable to "recapture" a temporary diversion of water to the eastern U.S. should not prevent exploration of the idea.

He painted a glowing picture of huge water surplus in the province and derided arguments that nuclear-powered desalinization plants would make sea water conversion economical.

"A total of 308 cubic miles of water falls on British Columbia each year and we only use the tiniest part of it.

"B.C. Hydro doesn't use it—it just goes through the turbines—and only some small use is made of the water for irrigation now in the Okanagan and interior."

He said B.C. receives 27 per cent of all the rain that falls on Canada and it enjoys 32 per cent of all the runoff.

"When we fill the Peace River reservoir it will hold enough water to meet the needs of Vancouver for 800 years—and that's just from one filling."

The annual "spill" from the Peace project could be sold for two cents for five tons—1,000 gallons—and still produce enormous profits for the province because alternatives are much more expensive.

A sea-water desalinization plant in water-short California, for instance, will produce fresh water at a cost of 15 cents for five tons "so you can draw your own conclusions."

Interviewed after his speech, Shrum said he was only expressing personal opinion.

"Premier Bennett expects me to say what I think," he told the Times.

"He says I don't speak for the government and I don't.

"If I did, I expect I wouldn't have said many of the things I said here today."

Government Officials Get Raises

Senior government officials were given major salary increases by cabinet order Friday.

Comptroller-General C. J. Ferber was awarded a $2,500 raise to $22,500 a year.

Next highest pay goes to ferry manager Monty Aldous who now will earn $21,500 after receiving his raise.

Public Utilities Chairman J. F. K. English had his wages lifted to $20,400 while a $2,200 increase put medical services committee chairman G. D. Stewart close behind at $20,200 a year.

Purchasing commissioner R. G. McKee went from $17,000 to $18,700.

The premier's administrative assistant William Budd and PUC members Lyle Wicks and E. W. Bassett all moved up from the $16,000 to the $17,700 level and assessment commissioner W. P. Wright jumped from $14,000 to $16,140.

The cabinet order follows Wednesday's announcement by the Civil Service Commission that civil servants' wages will go up between $20 and $100 a month.

The officials dealt with Friday technically are not civil servants because they are appointed directly by the cabinet.

Blood Clinics In Three Areas

Blood donor clinics will be held in three locations next week.

Monday and Tuesday will see clinics being held at Red Cross House, 1046 Fort, from 1:30 to 4:30 p.m. and 6:30 to 9 p.m.

Wednesday the scene changes to the Institute of Adult Studies from 10 a.m. to 1 p.m. and 2 to 4 p.m.

The nurses' residence of the Royal Jubilee Hospital will be used Thursday with clinics being timed for 9 a.m. to noon and 1:15 to 5 p.m.

Lieutenant-Colonel Clive L. Rippon of Ottawa has been appointed assistant judge advocate-general at headquarters, Maritime Forces Pacific, Esquimalt, it was announced Friday.

A graduate of Dalhousie and McGill universities, Lt.-Col. Rippon's area of responsibility for the Department of National Defence includes British Columbia, Alberta and the Yukon.

Victorians Granted Two Fellowships

Two Victoria residents are among 2,155 scholars who have been awarded Canada Council doctoral fellowship grants totalling $92 millions.

Marjorie Mitchell, 2922 Phyllis, was awarded $3,500 to continue work on her doctoral degree in anthropology at UBC. She received her master's degree from the University of Victoria in 1968.

Her husband, Dr. Donald Mitchell, is a faculty member of the anthropology and sociology department at Uvic.

James Arthurs, 2064 Mayne, was awarded $4,500 for linguistics studies. A French teacher at Royal Roads Military College, he plans to continue studies in French linguistics at UBC next fall. He received his master's degree from Uvic in 1968 and began his doctoral studies at the University of Illinois last summer.

Grants ranging from $3,500 to $5,500 were also awarded to the following Uvic faculty members:

Double Size Of Tourist Map Chamber Told

DUNCAN — The Chamber of Commerce is studying a suggestion to double the size of last year's tourist map showing the historical sites in the area and a map of the city.

Eric Wruck showed the proposed map to the chamber at a luncheon meeting this week. He said 30,000 of the maps in full color would cost $2,300.

A suggestion by a member that the chamber consider placing tourist direction signs around the area to make it easier for tourists to find beauty and historical spots also will be considered.

The chamber was told by committee representative Hall Mackenzie the Cowichan Valley Forest Museum opens May 17.

A vintage car rally will visit the area May 31 and rendezvous at the museum site on the Trans-Canada Highway just north of Duncan.

Log Shipments to Japan Up 10 Times Over 1968

CHEMAINUS — Japan imported 19,351,000 board feet of lumber during March this year, down considerably from the 25,412,000 shipped during the same month in 1968.

However, the port of Chemainus which includes Crofton, and Ladysmith, also shipped Japan 10,626,000 board feet of logs during that period—10 times the amount shipped a year ago.

United Kingdom was second largest importer of lumber with 11,473,000 up more than 2,000,000 board feet over the previous year. United States bought 6,643,100 board feet of lumber and 1,123,938 board feet of logs.

Others: Belgium, 4,315,000; France, 1,808,300; Germany, 1,057,866; Italy, 992,000; Netherlands, 891,000; Argentina, 74,188, and Puerto Rico, 51,700.

The port also shipped 2,204 tons of plywood, 11,609 tons of newsprint and 19,891 tons of pulp.

Abortion Bill Hit Again by Bishops

OTTAWA (CP) — Canada's Roman Catholic bishops reiterated Friday their opposition to a bill now before Parliament that would legalize therapeutic abortions.

If it becomes law, it should respect the freedom of conscience of doctors who are unwilling to perform abortions, the bishops declared in a resolution passed unanimously at the end of their semi-annual conference here.

The resolution said the bill should at least be amended to prevent lawsuits against doctors who refuse, for reasons of conscience, to perform abortions.

The bishops also issued a statement on the Pope's encyclical of July, 1968, which reaffirmed the church's ban on artificial birth control. They said a Catholic "is not free to form his conscience" on the matter without taking the encyclical into account.

"It is false and dangerous to maintain that because this encyclical has not demanded the absolute assent of faith, any Catholic may put it aside as if it had never appeared," the statement said.

More Study On Church Issue Asked

By PAT BROWNLOW

HALIFAX (CP) — A proposed structure and constitution of a single church amalgamating the Canadian Anglican and United Churches was sent back to committee for further study Friday by the General Commission on Union.

Commissioners withheld approval in principle of the constitutional committee's report and asked for more study on the functions of the bishop and the diocese in relation to local churches.

The constitutional committee had suggested that a unified church be organized as a general assembly broken down into regional conferences, dioceses and pastoral zones.

ZONE CONCEPT

It was the pastoral zone concept in particular that led the 50-member general commission to defer approval of the report.

Anglican Bishop H. R. Hunt of Toronto, committee chairman who presented the constitution report, said the pastoral zone meant a number of congregations grouped together to share various ministers on a team basis.

He said the ministry might then be more specialized—with all clergymen sharing in sacramental work, but each engaging in specific aspects of ministerial endeavor.

OBJECTS TO TERM

Prof. John L. J. Edwards of Toronto, an Anglican representative, said he had an "intense dislike" for the word zone, which he said "tends to depersonalize the church."

Representatives debated more than three hours on a special committee report on the church in the world before giving approval.

The report calls for both churches to consider immediately investigations of the problems of "exploited minorities" in Canada.

LEWIS
. . . Dief 'out of date'

Sex Law Brings Commons Clash

By STUART LAKE

OTTAWA (CP) — Former prime minister John Diefenbaker and David Lewis, the deputy NDP leader, crossed swords Friday as debate on the report stage of amendments to the Criminal Code continued through its third day.

Mr. Diefenbaker made an eloquent plea to the government not to insist on clauses of the bill permitting consenting adults to perform homosexual acts in private or to allow abortion where the health of the prospective mother is endangered.

APPROVAL GIVEN?

"The result can only be that young Canadians will say the Parliament of Canada approves of these two acts, homosexuality and abortion," said Mr. Diefenbaker.

"The government is attempting to give a freedom which will do nothing to elevate Canada or Canadians," he argued.

Mr. Lewis replied that Mr. Diefenbaker's remarks "are a complete contradiction and negation of the great work he has done in the field of civil liberty and individual rights."

'OUT OF DATE'

Mr. Lewis said the philosophy underlying Mr. Diefenbaker's speech "is simply out of date."

"It simply has no relevance to modern society."

It was "simply, utterly and completely wrong" for the former Conservative leader to say that Parliament, in passing the bill, "will say to the young people of Canada . . . these things are right."

The Commons has made little headway in three days of debating the report stage—the step before third and final reading—of the 120-clause bill. The legislation proposes changes in laws on lotteries and drinking drivers, as well as on abortion and homosexual acts.

AMENDMENTS

Opposition MPs moved 40 amendments in committee—the stage immediately after second reading — and while these have been grouped under four headings, only two of the amendments have been debated so far.

Creditiste MPs, aroused by the homosexuality clauses, have dug in for a long debate. They knocked out possible agreement Wednesday to end the debate in five days and refused Friday the unanimous consent needed to spend an extra hour to end the first stage of the debate.

The debate continues Monday.

Mr. Lewis said all that the proposed clauses on homosexuality do is exclude from prosecution two consenting adults engaging in private acts.

Rene Matte (Creditiste—Champlain) noted that the intent of the legislation seems to deal with mentally-sick persons.

"A kleptomaniac is a sick person," he said. Why not issue them cards saying so "and then anyone over 21 will carry a card permitting him to conduct hold-ups."

Andre Fortin (Creditiste—Lotbiniere) said the bill is criminal, stupid and socialistic. It was another blow at the Canadian family.

Both Conservatives and Creditistes also hammered at the government for a clarifying phrase in the clause dealing with consenting acts done in private.

They said the wording leaves it open for such acts to include beastility, an interpretation denied by Justice Minister John Turner.

The clause referred to humans only and no interpretation "no matter how liberal" could read beastility into it.

Negro Martyrs Honored by Ghana

By ROBERT G. OLIPHANT

The Republic of Ghana recently issued four stamps marking International Human Rights Year. The 4np and 40 np values show Dr. Joseph Boakye Danquah, and the 12½np and 20np denominations feature Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. These stamps also depict the flag of Ghana and the International Human Rights Year emblem.

Dr. Danquah in 1930 established the Gold Coast Youth Conference, a political party advocating independence from Britain. In 1960 he was a candidate in a one-sided election for president of Ghana. Soon after his defeat he was arrested, and without a trial he was put in jail, and there he died in 1965.

Near the spot where Dr. King was assassinated is a large marble plaque bearing this quotation from Genesis 37:19-20: "They said to one another, behold; here cometh the dreamer . . . let us slay him, and we shall see what will become of his dreams."

Preventing Crowded Seeds

By JACK BEASTALL

Jack

This is the second in a series of illustrated articles for beginners covering the pricking-out of seedlings after germination. Pricking-out or pricking-off are terms for the transplanting of small seedling plants from seed boxes to other containers where they can be spaced two inches apart each way. The purpose is to give each plant room for normal development until large enough to go into separate pots or into the open garden.

This is necessary to prevent the seedlings from becoming weak and spindly as they would in the crowded seed rows. A weak seedling never produces a satisfactory plant.

The term "pricking-out" conveys little to the uninitiated. It probably originated in the days when any sharp pointed object was known as a prick; in this instance referring to the sharp pointed piece of wood with which the holes were made to receive the seedlings.

It is regrettable that authors or gardening books still copy from previous publications old methods that have long since been discarded by the trade.

We are told to prepare notched sticks for lifting the seedlings although such implements were out of date when I learned pricking-out in 1914.

Seedlings, they tell us, are moved when the first true leaves are fully developed, a practice disproved 50 years ago. At about the same time the sharp pointed prick was discarded in favor of the blunt nosed dibber which made a hole wide enough for the roots to spread instead of being bunched together.

Today we use three pieces of equipment; a small trowel, a dibber, and a piece of glass some six to eight inches square.

None of these are standard, excepting possibly the dibbers, and even these are often cut to a shape preferred by the operator.

The trowel may be one of those miniatures found in a child's set of garden tools, a five-inch cement trowel, or a narrow strip of galvanized iron, pointed at one end and bent slightly around a piece of three-quarter-inch water pipe.

The simplest dibber is made from a hardwood dowelling, cut about five inches long and shaped to a blunt end for thrusting into the soil. Diameters of three-eights inch, half-inch, and five-eighths inch are handy.

The piece of glass is used to lay out the seedlings separately, a dozen or so at a time, so they can be picked up easily and quickly with the left hand.

The majority of seedlings are pricked out when the seed leaves are fully expanded and the true leaves can be detected as small growths as shown at (A) in the drawing.

The dibber is held in the right hand (detail B), thrust into the soil mixture to a depth sufficient to take the seedling's roots, then partially rotate by the thumb and third finger to free it from the soil and leave a clean, open hole.

As this is being done, a seedling is carefully picked up by a seed leaf from the sheet of glass (left hand) and its roots lowered into the hole as the dibber is withdrawn.

The dibber is then thrust into the soil on an angle by the side of the seedling (detail C) and moved to a vertical position to press the soil closely against the roots.

Four to six weeks after the seedlings have been pricked-out they will have attained a size suitable for planting outdoors. At this stage the gardener often has trouble removing the young plants from the boxes.

The most satisfactory way, and one which gives the plants no setback, is to use a kitchen table-knife to cut through the soil lengthways and crossways between the plants so that each is in a two-inch cube of soil as shown at (D).

The cube can then be lifted out of the box and planted into the bed or border without any root disturbance, and it will not suffer the wilting so common to plants that are dug out with a trowel.

It is also a good method to use when bedding plants are purchased in flats or plant packs.

Tips for The Home Gardener

WEEK'S WORK

Nip off daffodil (and all narcissus) heads as flowers fade, also hyacinth flowers as they become brown. Feed these bulbs now by scattering a little bulb or potato (6-10-10) fertilizer on soil around, and water in to dissolve.

Most flowering shrubs are recovering from winter damage, and dead parts more easily seen. Prune off all dead wood now.

Geranium plants, and their cuttings just rooted and potted, will need plenty of sunshine and air now, but freedom from night frosts and chill.

Lawns can have spring fertilizing now. Be sure to water as ferilizer applied; it will burn if allowed to lie dry.

Young rhododendrons and camellias can have their second feeding before end of April. None after mid-May.

Sow carrots outdoors, and seed of winter cabbage, kale, savoy and late cauliflower in a coldframe or protected spot.

Tomato plants from seed should be ready to go into five-inch pots. Don't hurry them, but put out on warm days, out of wind, and take in at night to a fairly cool place.

Quizzing The Gardener

Q. You gave the times to feed camellias earlier this spring but I lost the information. Could you give the dates and quantities again, Please?—"Loser", Oak Bay.

A. First two or three years in garden, feed an acid-type fertilizer at the middle of March, April and May at the rate of one-half cup to each foot of height. Older plants growing well need only one feding, possibly at the end of April.

Q. I like big long carrots, but notice you have recommended a small one called Baby Fingers. Would these grow bigger if I feed them well? Curious Bob, Langford.

A. No. You will also defeat the purpose of this new carrot if you feed to produce larger roots. The feature is their growing rapidly to a usable size, with good flavor and nutrition since they need not be cut into pieces for cooking. Thus they lose a minimum of nutrition from their cells.

Czech Report Wins Award For Canadian

NEW YORK (CP) — Peter Rehak of The Associated Press, a Czech-born Canadian citizen, received an award from the Overseas Press Club Friday night for his reporting of the Warsaw pact invasion of Czechoslovakia last year.

Rehak received the George Polk Memorial Award for best daily newspaper or wire service reporting from abroad for his reporting "before, during and after the Soviet invasion of Czechoslovakia."

Rehak, now stationed in Vienna, reopened the AP office in Prague in May, 1968, after the reform wave in that country. He sent out the first bulletin on the Soviet-led invasion of Czechoslovakia on the night of Aug. 20.

Before joining the AP, Rehak worked for the Windsor Star, the Vancouver Province and The Canadian Press.

Other awards presented at the club's annual dinner were:

Best daily newspaper or wire service interpretation of foreign affairs—Robert S. Elegant of the Los Angeles Times.

Best daily newspaper or wire service photographic reporting from abroad—Edward T. (Eddie) Adams of The AP.

Best photographic reporting or interpretation from abroad in a magazine or book—David robinson of Life magazine.

Israelis Live Dangerously Evading Concealed Bombs

By MARCUS ELIASON

JERUSALEM (AP) — The Israelis pronounce it "teh-rorr" but they are far from terrorized.

From the hot borders with Lebanon and Jordan to the heart of Jerusalem and Tel Aviv, they face everything from Soviet-made artillery to button mines the size of a dime.

The feeling is one of faint uneasiness, a pang of fear at certain critical moments, but mostly rage. Life goes on—almost as usual.

In a frontier settlement named Maoz Haim south of the Sea of Galilee, a 25-year-old farmer says: "I'm not afraid of the Arabs' machine-guns. I'm not afraid of all those bazookas and mortars. Even shelling—real heavy shelling—doesn't scare me."

SETTLERS' VIEW

But Shuka Yahalom, married with two children, speaks for all 30,000 settlers in the Beisan Valley when he admits:

"There is one thing that really terrifies me—mines. I hate mines. They are the most awful weapon a man can imagine."

Terror within the cities is a different matter.

In Jerusalem, bombs have killed 15 persons and wounded almost 200 in less than a year. One was placed inside a car in a crowded market, another in a supermarket, another in the cafeteria of the Hebrew University. One has gone off in Tel Aviv, killing one and wounding 70.

Many have been discovered and defused.

LIFE GOES ON

Nevertheless, markets, coffee shops and cinemas are still crowded.

"It's like fatal road accidents," says Amnon Lapid, a 23-year-old student. "But you don't drive any slower or more carefully. You can't go around in constant fear of being killed in a road accident."

Police roadblocks are on all highways leading in and out of the cities, slowing down traffic to a crawl.

Public institutions, especially cinemas and theatres, are heavily guarded. A green-capped civil defence guard stands at the entrance, watching the flow of people, checking handbags and suitcases.

When guerrilla bombs first rocked Israel, crowds went on rampages against the nearest Arab populace. Not any more.

Police are conducting an intensive course in schools, teaching children to recognize button mines, plastic bombs, dynamite sticks and time bombs.

SECURITY FENCE

The Hebrew University of Jerusalem, already hit by one bomb which wounded 29 students, is building a security fence around the campus, and organizing a student guard.

For the Jews, the bombs raise some painful moral issues.

They remember how some of their own "terrorists" used exactly the same tactics against the British in the 1940s.

The guerrilla organizations claim credit for supposedly devastating attacks on Israel, in which scores are claimed killed, and hundreds of thousands of dollars worth of military hardware destroyed. The Israelis, officially and unofficially, laugh at such claims.

But in the Beisan Valley, the Kibbutzniks never laugh. It is a deadly serious business. and it costs them plenty.

Valuable work hours are lost as army patrols check outlying roads for mines. Milk yields from shell-shocked cows have dropped sharply.

What About the Comfortable Pulpit?

By REV. KINSOLVING

What should a minister or rabbi do if he learns that one of his most active parishioners is a slum lord?

Kinsolving

"The problem exists in churches and synagogues throughout the country, and is the climax of a particularly incisive new book by New York's Rabbi Herbert Tarr. In the book, entitled Heaven Help Us, a young and socially concerned rabbi, Gideon Able, is fired by his congregation after he joins in picketing a slum lord — who turns out to be a member of his temple.

While that is fictional, perhaps the most thoroughly documented case of slum lords in the sanctuary exists in Richmond, Va., in St. Stephen's Church — an impressive stone building with a property value of $1.2 million and an annual income of more than a quarter of a million.

On Palm Sunday, St. Stephen's pastor Reno Harp, told a capacity congregation that:

"On the original Palm Sunday Jesus was standing up for what he believed. He could have avoided it, but he cleaned out the Temple where they were doing business."

"We too must stick to our convictions and stand up and be counted."

"We pray for all those who stand fearlessly for Thee."

One hour after the close of the service, Dr. Harp was shown photographs of a slum property which the Richmond Urban League had just noted in city records as being owned by one of the pillars of St. Stephen's, attorney John W. Pearsall.

The photographs showed the premises at 38 Louisiana Street in Richmond's Fulton Bottom section, which Pearsall is renting to 76-year-old Sylvia Goode.

A visit to Miss Goode by this writer disclosed the fact that she pays $30 per month in rent, from her monthly income of $76.

Among other features of Mr. Pearsall's rental property is an ancient outdoor toilet which, though connected to the back of the wooden row house, required Miss Goode to walk down an outdoor flight of rickety stairs. (She now has to use a neighbor's toilet since this decrepit appliance has repeatedly broken down — and has not been repaired by the landlord's agent.)

The walls are in such a state of decay that Miss Goode says, "I couldn't rest night or day from them blackbirds up there."

Since her rental payments leave her an income of $11 per week for food, clothing and fuel, "I eat once a day—sometimes not at all — and I ain't had any clothes in God knows how long. But as long as I can make it I try to make it." Then, looking at her crucifix, she added: "And when I gets down and can't do no better, I just say 'Y'all just take me'."

Dr. Harp, when presented the photographs of the property rented to Miss Goode by his parishioner Pearsall, immediately telephoned his assistant, Rev. Robert Boyd.

When he arrived minutes later at the church, Boyd said that he certainly could not condone the maintenance of human beings in such facilities and that the matter had been discussed with Pearsall. He also acknowledged receipt of a report by the Virginia Council on Human Relations, whose executive director, Frank Adams, a former reporter for the Norfolk Virginian-Pilot, had written: "At least three of the city's major owners of deteriorated or slum property worship at St. Stephen's."

Since the council's report was presented to St. Stephen's and the problem had been discussed personally with Pearsall with no appreciable effect upon the living conditions of Miss Goode, Dr. Harp was asked why he had never raised the issue in one of her sermons. He explained:

"I was always taught not to point sermons to individuals in the congregation."

And so in contrast to Jesus and so many of the other Hebrew propherts — who were very specific in denouncing the evils of individuals by name, (from Herod to Ahab) — St. Stephen's like many other churches, will probably continue deriving a portion of its impressive income from slum rentals.

And the silence on this issue from the pulpit can provide the wealthy congregation with the most convincing and comforting ministerial assurance that God really isn't concerned with such unpleasant subjects.

RC Thinker Rejects Original Sin Doctrine

NEW YORK (AP) — "Original sin," that old, deep-down guilt in the human psyche, is being viewed in new ways today across a widening spectrum of church scholarship.

Questions also being raised increasingly about the idea that the human race started with a single couple, Adam and Eve — despite the insistence on this position in some high Roman Catholic quarters.

Much of Protestantism has tended toward modified approaches to the subject, but changed understandings now are showing up more and more among some Roman Catholic theologians.

The trend is attributed chiefly to deepened studies of the Bible and its literary forms — along with the impact of modern scientific insights into the rise of mankind.

A noted Roman Catholic Bible scholar of Germany, Dr. Herbert Haag, says in a new book that the traditional Catholic doctrine that original sin is "inherited" from Adam through one's ancestors "is foreign to Holy Scripture."

ALL BECOME SINNERS

Instead, he says, the meaning is "that sin, after its entrance into the world, so spread that consequently all men are born into a sinful world and become themselves sinners."

"The idea of inheriting sin is not a biblical concept," he says in his new study, Is Original Sin in Scripture? issued by Sheed and Ward, a Catholic publishing house.

Haag, professor of Old Testament at the University of Tubingen and president of the Catholic Bible Association of Germany, also challenged the doctrine of monogenism — that makind stemmed from a single couple.

He suggests that the church drop the teaching.

Scripture "in no way" teaches the doctrine, he says, and in fact "probably speaks more for polygenism" — the possible multiple origins of humanity.

He points out that in Hebrew, the language in which the Old Testament was written, the term "Adam" always "means not a single individual but mankind as a species."

DOGMAS IN DOUBT

Haag says the traditional church view of mankind's single-couple origins in pristine innocence is being so extensively questioned by Roman Catholic scholars "that previously held 'dogmas' have ceased to be dogmas, to the great dismay of those who believe in the immutability of dogmas."

Haag says "no man enters the world as a sinner" at birth, but rather as "the creature and image of God," surrounded "by God's love." A man becomes a sinner only through his own individual and responsible action.

Businessmen 'Must Become Activists'

B.C. Hydro Chairman Dr. Gordon Shrum extolled the government and castigated the opposition in a luncheon speech at the Empress Hotel that almost had the flavor of a hustings harangue.

His address to Victoria Chamber of Commerce wound up with a joke underlining his warning that businessmen must become "activists and speak up" if they wish to help shape instead of fearing the course of events in B.C.

A businessman, who brought home an exotic bird only to have his wife pop it into the oven for dinner, remonstrated with her that it had cost $1,000 because of its rare ability to speak 11 languages.

"Then why didn't it speak up? his wife asked, and I hope you get my point," said Shrum.

He told the chamber that business groups must do more than just admit women to their ranks if they want to influence public events.

"You should also take in lots of professors, school teachers, doctors, professional people and even labor leaders who believe in the competitive free enterprise system."

'Most Generous in Canada'

Shrum, who is chancellor of Simon Fraser University, praised the provincial government's financial support for higher education as the most generous in Canada.

He said other provinces can afford to give hefty grants to their university systems "because they have our money from (federal) equalization payments to make those grants."

Shrum said "Ontario—the next-richest province in Canada"—is a good comparison with B.C. because it does not receive equalization payments either.

This year Ontario, with a population of 7.6 million, will provide $266 million in provincial operating grants to its universities while B.C., with a population of 2 million, will give $74 million for operation of its universities and colleges.

"Divide the grants by the populations and you will find that we make a greater grant to university operation than Ontario and people should know that."

Shrum—himself a holder of the doctorate in physics—said university costs are skyrocketing largely because of post-graduate training which government critics demand.

"The emphasis we're putting on post graduate work—the PhDs—is the big cost but I ask you: How many PhDs do you use in your businesses?"

Shrum said it seemed "we're training PhDs we don't need with money we don't have and that's not good."

He also said criticism of the high turnover in university presidents in B.C.'s public universities ignores the fact that there are up to 300 college presidencies open in North America at various times.

Praises Superport Project

"But I'm not here to talk about education," he said, moving on to praise the provincial government for sparkplugging the Roberts Bank superport development despite opposition from many quarters.

He said it will be "one of the five or six great modern ports in the world" and its importance is hard to exaggerate because the decision to prompt its development was one of the most crucial in the history of B.C.'s economic development.

The superport will ship out the grain, sulphur and potash of the prairies and save Canadian taxpayers $150 million in coal export subsidies over the next 15 years alone because Fernie coal will go to Japan without subventions as a result of superport operating economies.

Shrum predicted the five-million-ton-a-year coal export contract signed with Japanese steel mills will result in double that volume of shipments through Roberts Bank some day.

"And we'll not only be shipping coal through there but also lumber, mineral concentrates and just possibly liquefied (natural) gas," said Shrum.

Next he turned to a defence of B.C. Hydro.

"When people and politicians say this province is going to the dogs because of the growth of contingent liabilities they're talking about us because B.C. Hydro borrows most of the money.

He said the power utility made a profit last year but the figures aren't completed yet.

"But you'll find out in a few days, at the end of the month," he added.

"I've no doubt that the premier would like to make this announcement but in any case I can say it will be a favorable one."

He said opposition MLAs tried to make political mileage last session out of claims that Peace River power now being delivered in Vancouver costs 10 mills per kilowatt.

Costs Still Not Known

He said there is no way of knowing what it costs yet because only three of the 10 generators have been installed so it is "useless to ask" what initial costs are.

"There is no meaning to that question and there is no reasonable answer to it," he said.

"But there is a reasonable answer" to questions about the projected cost in the future and that is that Peace power can be delivered to Vancouver at a cost of the previously estimated 4.6 mills averaged over the next 15 years.

(This was the reply given by the government last session when asked what the cost experience had been with the initial power deliveries after the Peace project went into operation last year.)

"The other thing that burns me up is to see letters to the editor writers and politicians say that . . . we pay more now (in consumer bills) than we did before the takeover," Shrum said.

He said $8.48 worth of BCH electricity today would have cost the same Victoria consumer $10.23 in 1961 before the government took over the private B.C. Electric.

He also recounted the $85 million worth of programs—such as laying more submarine cables and expanding the Jordan River station—intended to greatly increase electrical loads available to Vancouver Ilsnad in the next several years.

"What else have we done for Victoria?

Well, we added 30 new (transit) buses costing $35,000 each—the most modern buses there are—since 1964."

Before The Magistrate

Dale H. Brophy, 19, of 230 Oswego, was sentenced Friday to three to nine months in the Young Offenders' Unit for possessing marijuana.

He earlier pleaded guilty.

Magistrate William Ostler said he would make a recommendation the youth be sent to a forestry camp.

He told Brophy a change in environment and fresh air would be good for him.

Two cigarettes containing marijuana were found in Brophy's possession April 6 when he was checked in the Centennial Square parking lot.

Trial of William R. Johnson, 1254 Pandora, charged with common assault, will continue April 28.

The complainant, Theodore Raptis, said Johnson hit him with his foot after an incident in a city restaurant March 31. The trial was adjourned so a defence witness could be summonsed.

Brian F. Hansen, 21, of CFB Esquimalt, was fined $150 for dangerous driving.

Admits Union Theft

VANCOUVER (CP) — The financial secretary of the Vancouver local of the Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers' Union, John Stewart pleaded guilty in court Thursday to theft of more than $10,000 in union funds.

CHILDREN AND CHEERFULNESS are part of a Shriner's life. So, when a group of Shriners visited City Hall this week to have Mayor Stephen declare May 10, Shrine Pageant Day, they took along young Victorian Joanne Flynn, a patient at the Shriners' Hospital in Portland. Msgr. Michael O'Connell (second from right) represented the Knights of Columbus who assist Shriners in their work. Also seen, from left, are Harry Matthews, Dr. Gordon Grant, Mayor Stephen, Clifford Priestley and Art Fyfe.

FLYING POKER STAKES LURE RALLY PILOTS

This is one poker game where every player is assured of having a high hand.

A poker rally has been scheduled by the Victoria flight of the Canadian Owners and Pilots Association for the weekend of May 31 and June 1.

Members will pick up one card at each of five airports with the best hand winning a $50 prize.

Airports included in the rally are Abbotsford, Butler's, Campbell River, Chilliwack, Courtenay, Delta, Duncan, Langley, Nanaimo, Port Alberni, Qualicum, Powell River, Sechelt, and Victoria.

Pilots will register at Victoria Flying Club and must complete the rally between 1 p.m. May 31 and 4 p.m. June 1.

Shop Centre Regulations Enumerated

By PAT DUFOUR
Times Staff Writer

No decision will be made by Oak Bay Council when it meets Monday on the proposed bylaw which would clear the way for a $1 million shopping complex on Foul Bay Road, opposite the city's commercial centre.

B committee of the council Friday decided it would not recommend the bylaw until it had received in writing confirmation that:

- The developers would undertake to donate enough land to widen Foul Bay Road by 12 feet.
- Steps would be undertaken to provide an access road to Cadboro Bay from Bee Street.
- If the second stipulation was granted, Marrion Street would be closed to traffic.

WIZARD NEEDED

It would take a wizard to go through legal procedure in time for Monday's meeting.

Ald. G. Scott Wallace made the motion that stalled immediate action on the controversial bylaw that village merchants are protesting will take business away from their area.

He said, "I wouldn't vote for this shopping complex unless I was sure that these agreements are met."

An application from Oak Bay Marina for more parking spaces was tabled until the end of the year.

TRAFFIC PROBLEM

Ald. Wallace, in answer to the marina's argument that boat moorings were increasing at the rate of 15 per cent a year, said:

"I am concerned about the traffic on Beach Drive. If Sealand becomes a tremendous attraction, as it probably will, you are just not going to be able to cope with the traffic."

Traffic counts on Beach Drive at Margate showed 1,437 cars in April, 1965; 1,880 in April, 1968, and 3,236 on a Sunday in March, 1969.

The committee dealt with various requests and complaints. It agreed to provide equipment for DeMolays and "Y" members to clear the Willows Beach as a clean-up project.

It adjourned—to meet again in secret—presumably to discuss sewers.

Cook-Out Starts Shriners On Whoop-De-Do Weekend

Victorians in search of a quiet Sunday, May 10, had better leave town.

That's the day that 4,000 Shriners and their wives intend to take over the city.

There'll be colorful costumes, parades, bands and all the whoop-de-doo that's become synonymous with Shriners. They'll be here from Edmonton, Calgary, Spokane, Portland, Seattle and all parts of British Columbia.

Things will get under way at 8 a.m. at Centennial Square when the visitors will regale themselves with an outdoor breakfast of hot dogs, sausages and other goodies, liberally laced with rollicking music played by attending bands.

PARADE

Mayor Hugh Stephen has given consent for the big "cook-out."

As at all good Shriner get-togethers there will be a parade, beginning at the Legislative Buildings in the early afternoon and offering an assortment of pipe bands, a minicycle patrol and an "army" of marchers.

Called the Dogwood Pageant, the parade will end at the Memorial Arena where Shriners will inject a little seriousness into the day by carrying out the main purpose of the "invasion."

Potentate of Gizeh Temple Shrine, Dr. Gordon Grant, a retired city dentist and member of the Victoria Shrine Club, will be presented with a cheque for $50,000.

The money, contributed by the 33 B.C. clubs which comprise Gizeh Temple Shrine, will be used to transport needy children to the Shriners' hospitals for crippled children at Portland, Spokane and Winnipeg.

On hand for this and other ceremonies will be Dr. J. R. Harrigan of Trail, master of the Fourth degree, Knights of Columbus, British Columbia. Last year the Knights of Columbus in Canada and the United States donated $1¼ million dollars to the Shriners' hospital for burned cases at Austin, Texas.

EMERGENCY HOUSING

Also at the ceremony will be Miss Dorothy Anderson, administrator of the Portland hospital.

University officials will be able to judge whether Shriners have higher spirits than university students. The residences at the University of Victoria will be taken over as emergency housing.

Canadian Pacific's Princess Patricia will be tied up in the Inner Harbor, also with Shriner "boarders." Temporary skipper for the weekend will be local Shriner Norm Edmonds.

Sprinkled throughout the day will be Shrine band performances at the Veterans' Hospital, Gorge Road Hospital, Centennial Square and other key spots in the area.

PRIVATE CEREMONY

The convention actually begins May 9 but celebrations will be geared at a more serious level, circulating around a private ceremony at the Memorial Arena that evening when 100 candidates will be initiated.

While their husbands are busy Friday afternoon, Shriners' wives will have the choice of two teas.

One will take place at Government House and the other at the Strathcona Hotel. At the latter the guests will be able to take their choice of tea, wine or cheese, and watch a showing of fashions from Miss Frith's.

Saturday's events will end with the Potentate's Ball at the Victoria Cyrling Club.

Peninsula Fire Dept. Amalgamation Urged

By HUMPHRY DAVY

Amalgamation of the northern peninsula fire departments was suggested Friday by a North Saanich alderman.

A united Central Saanich and North Saanich and Sidney fire department would be more efficient—more economical to operate, Ald. George Aylard said.

He advocaed a study be made on amalgamating the departments.

"It should be explored," he said. "I feel it would solve some of the fire protection problems facing the peninsula today."

Aylard is a representative on a fire committee seeking to reach an agreement with Sidney on the jointly operated volunteer fire department.

Negotiations have reached a stalemate.

DISAGREEMENT

Disagreement between the two municipalities mainly centres around control of the joint fire committee, which now has three North Saanich members and two Sidney members.

Sidney has asked for equal representation from both councils and a voting fireman's representative on the committee. This would give the firemen a deciding vote on any issue where the two councils deadlocked.

It also wants the committee to have control of funds alloted to the department by the two municipalities, plus the appointment of a paid fire chief.

North Saanich has refused on the grounds that it pays three-fifths of the costs towards the operation of the department. Sidney pays the remainder.

It also argues that under the Municipal Act, it is impossible to let control of public funds out of council's hands.

North Saanich also wants the establishment of a satellite fire station at Deep Cove as recommended in a fire marshal's report.

Aylard said if the peninsula fire departments were amalgamated, it would warrant the appointment of a paid fire chief.

"The fire department would then serve a population of 11,000," he said, "with three fire stations—Sidney, Saanichton and Deep Cove."

NEW STATION

He said a station at Deep Cove was needed because the proposed Swartz Bay-Victoria freeway will eventually force trucks to enter North Saanich via McTavish Road instead of Weiler Avenue.

The highway department plans to close access to the highway via Weiler Avenue when the freeway is completed.

"This means trucks will take longer to reach Deep Cove," said Aylard. "Regardless of this, I think it's time some consideration should be given to establishing a sub-station at Deep Cove. The community is growing."

The alderman said the disagreement between North Saanich and Sidney could be resolved if fire protection was looked upon as a service for the whole of the northern peninsula.

"The needs of all areas have to be considered in fire protection," he said, "and costs should be shared equally."

Are people your problem?

Is the world becoming too crowded for you? Almost wherever you go today, you find people. This sometimes results in problems — for you as well as for others. What's the solution?

It's certainly not avoiding people — even if you could. But you can avoid having problems with them! The key to solving people-to-people problems is understanding what people really are. The Bible reveals man as having a spiritual nature. How this can help you in your relations with others will be discussed by Thomas O. Poyser, C.S., a member of The Christian Science Board of Lectureship. His lecture is entitled "Are People Your Problem?" Come and bring your neighbor. Admission is free.

Explosion to Remove Swartz Ferry Hazard

It won't be a Ripple Rock-sized blast but the highways department plans to blow the top off a submerged rock pinnacle less than a mile from the Swartz Bay ferry terminal.

A department official said Friday tenders will be opened April 30 for the job of eliminating the underwater hazard, between Piers and Knapp Islands, this summer.

The pinnacle now rises to within 12 feet of the water surface at low tide and prevents the ferries from using the Goss Passage shortcut except at high tides.

"With the new stretch ferries coming in, we don't want them to waste the time necessary in going around (Knapp and Princess Margaret Islands) when the tides aren't right," the official said.

SMALL JOB

"But it's only a small job—not another Ripple Rock," he added.

The contract calls for removal of 1,000 cubic yards of rock and the successful bidder is expected to drill blasting holes from a barge and send divers down to plant the series of small charges for progressive explosions.

Ripple Rock—a similar but much larger submerged hazard in Discovery Passage north of Campbell River—was destroyed several years ago by the largest non-nuclear explosion yet recorded.

The federal project involved years of tunnelling under the water to deposit a huge store of explosives inside the hazard which had sunk hundreds of small vessels and drowned scores of men over the years. It was detonated as a single explosion.

Hart Highway Paving Work Bids Called

Premier Bennett announced Friday approval has been given by the treasury board to the department of highways to call tenders for hardsurfacing the John Hart-Peace River Highway (Coyote Creek-Willow Flats-Wildmere Creek section), at an estimated cost of $800,000.

The tender involves levelling and paving of 8.53 miles as well as producing seal coat chips for a further 22.3 miles.

Approval was also given to award contracts for hydro development highways at Arrow Dam and Syringa Creek at $800,000 and tunnel lining and lighting at Saddle Rock and Sailor Bar tunnels at $200,000.

The department of public works was authorized to call tenders for a multi-purpose student centre at the British Columbia Institute of Technology in Burnaby at an estimated cost of $1,250,000 and to award a contract for an additional floor to the existing classroom building at the B.C. Vocational School in Nanaimo at an estimated cost of $315,000.

Czechs See Slim Hope for Reforms With Dubcek Ousted as Chieftain

Peter Rehak, a Czech-born Canadian citizen, reopened The Associated Press office in Prague in May, 1968, after the reform wave brought Alexander Dubcek to power as Communist party chief. He sent out the first bulletin that told the world of the Soviet invasion on the night of Aug. 20. He now is in the United States to receive the Overseas Press Club's 1969 George Polk Memorial Award for his reporting "before, during and after" the invasion. Before joining The AP, Rehak worked for the Windsor Star, Vancouver Province and The Canadian Press.

By PETER REHAK

NEW YORK (AP) — Alexander Dubcek, a 47-year-old Slovak with a long nose and a shy smile, was not the instigator of Czechoslovakia's attempt to find its own form of communism. But he became the symbol.

His ouster as party chieftain marks the official end of Prague's efforts to inject Western democratic ideas into a Communist society.

The movement had been more hope than deed since the Soviet Union sent tanks and troops to crush it nearly eight months ago. Dubcek's ouster means that even the hope is gone.

Dubcek rode to power on a wave of popular demand for reform, mostly economic, and replaced old-line Stalinist Antonin Novotny as party chief in January, 1968.

The fall of Novotny, long a symbol of oppression, stimulated demands for political reforms and more freedoms. Dubcek and his associates heeded the call and enjoyed a popularity that was perhaps unique in the Soviet bloc.

HOPED TO PROSPER

Dubcek and the people around him tried to adapt communism to the liberal and democratic traditions of their country. This meant a free press and open criticism of the system coupled with economic reforms. In the climate created by this, the reform leadership hoped the country would prosper while keeping a Communist government.

Moscow didn't see it that way and feared that Czechoslovakia was drifting towards the West. Time and again the Kremlin leaders tried to persuade Dubcek and his associates to abandon their course and restore traditional communism.

When persuasion failed, the Russians moved in with tanks and troops.

Dubcek and other top leaders were arrested Aug. 21, the first day of the invasion, and taken to the Soviet Union.

The occupiers tried to get President Ludvik Svoboda to endorse a government and party leadership that would be loyal to Moscow. Backed by the passive resistance of his country, he refused and flew to Moscow to negotiate with the Kremlin chiefs. Dubcek and others under arrest were released to join him. They returned to their jobs but had to agree to a Soviet occupation.

Since then, the Czechoslovak leaders have been fighting to save as much as possible of their original program. Soviet pressure forced them to cut it; by the time Dubcek was ousted, almost nothing remained. But as long as he and other reform leaders remained in power, they kept alive the hope that the reforms might resume sometime in the future.

VOTE WAS PAYOFF

Meanwhile, the Soviets had been boosting the pro-Moscow faction of the Czechoslovak Communist party. Thursday's central committee vote was the payoff.

The pro-Moscow faction, backed by new Soviet pressure following anti-Soviet riots at the end of March, voted Dubcek out of the top job. He remains on the ruling presidium but is likely to have little influence.

Dubcek spent his working life as a Communist party official. He was born Nov. 27, 1921, in the village of Uhrovec, in western Slovakia. His father was a carpenter who was captivated by the Communist movement.

When Alexander was 4, his father took the family to the Soviet Union where they joined a community of Czechoslovak Communist agricultural workers. The Dubceks returned home in 1938, shortly before the Nazi occupation. Alexander and his older brother Julius joined the anti-Nazi underground. Julius was killed fighting the Nazis and Alexander was wounded.

After the Second World War, Dubcek became a laborer at a factory in Trencin, Slovakia, and began to rise in the Communist party. By the time he went to Prague, he was chief of the Slovak party, a job later held by the man who replaced him Thursday, Gustav Husak.

Political Violence Hits Island

SANTA DOMINGO (AP) — President Joaquin Blaguer of the Dominican Republic says a wave of political violence in which six persons have been killed since Sunday is part of a plot to bring down his regime.

The sixth victim was gunned down Wednesday. He was hector Olivero, 28, a supporter of Gen. Elias Wessiny who will probably run as the right-wing candidate for president next year.

Balaguer hasn't said whether he will seek another term, but he said any attempt to overthrow him would be unsuccessful. He said some newspapers and radio stations are encouraging acts of violence.

Some Domicans fear that if Balaguer stays in office for another term, he may try to become a dictator. Others maintain the Dominican Republic needs a dictator to get its economy moving again.

Hospital Has Surplus

NEW WESTMINSTER (CP)—The Royal Columbian Hospital ended 1968 operations with a $11,982 surplus, the seventh consecutive year it has shown a slight surplus. Hospital board chairman Howard Chadwick also said the hospital will undertake a major construction project next year — a 172-bed addition.

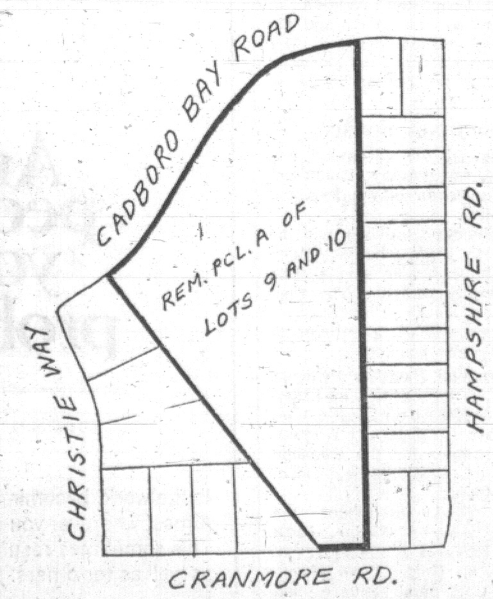
COMMERCIAL SITE

Notice is hereby given that the City of Victoria intends to offer for sale by tender the following lands located in the Municipality of Oak Bay and legally described as being: Parcel A of Lots 9 and 10, Sections 28 and 61, Victoria District, Plan 69 (excepting that part shown outlined in red on Plan 102 B.L., also excepting Parcel No. 1 of said Parcel A, also excepting that part of said Parcel A included within the boundaries of Plan 7125).



Subject to the submission of development proposals acceptable to the City of Victoria and the Council of the Municipality of Oak Bay, zoning of the property will be approved to accommodate medium density residential apartments or a similar proposal predominantly residential in character. The site contains 4 acres more or less, and would allow for approximately 160 apartment units.

Tenders are to be accompanied by development proposals of sufficient detail to enable Council to evaluate and determine the most acceptable development.

Sealed offers for the entire site will be received by the Municipal Manager, City Hall, Victoria, B.C., until 12:00 o'clock noon on Tuesday, April 29th, 1969, and must be marked on the envelope "Offer for Cadboro Bay Road site." All offers must be accompanied by a deposit cheque for 10% of the offering price and must be valid for a period of 30 days from the closing date for receipt of offers to purchase.

Highest or any offer will not necessarily be accepted.

The Wonderful World of Animals

By DR. FRANK MILLER

DEAR DR. MILLER: When I get my birthday money I'm going to buy a snake. My uncle says to get one which doesn't have any kinks and sticks its tongue out at you all the time. Was he just being funny or is he right?—K.B.

DEAR K.B.: He's right, all right. A healthy, inquisitive snake will frequently test the air for odors by pulling them into his mouth with his tongue so he can smell them with glands on the roof of his mouth. He should be bright-eyed, clean and shiny, free from old shed skin, scars—and kinks.

DEAR DR. MILLER: It burns me up that my veterinarian can always get a bandage to stay on Bo's foot and I never can! Bo, my springer spaniel, is forever tearing up his feet racing around our stone driveway. The doc patches up the pad or whatever in a few minutes and slaps a bandage on. And on it stays.

I do about the same thing at home, am twice as careful putting the bandage on, and it either slips off or Bo pulls it off the same day. When I put them on good and tight the foot swells up and I have to cut it off too. Doctor Miller, would you dare tell me the secret?—B.F.

DEAR B.F.: I would—if there were one. I can give you one important clue—the doctor applies even pressure over the contours of the foot and leg. Carefully distributing the bandage pressure provides greater friction and holding power with less discomfort or danger of restricting blood supply.

You may notice too, the upper portion of tape is wrapped in such a way that is incorporates bandage and hair for added holding power.

DEAR DR. MILLER: My wife has grown sort of fond of a black widow spider she found in a packing case. Large, obviously a female, my wife claims she is undeservedly known as a husband-eater. She read where the spider only eats the male on very rate occasions. It this true? —E.R.

DEAR E.R.: Depends on what one considers "rare occasions." It's true that the female black widow doesn't always eat her puny lover. Only when she's hungry and he's handy. (I hope you meant the spider when you referred to her being "large, obviously female" and "a husband-eater.")

DEAR DR. MILLER: Is there any value in giving tea to a dog which has been poisoned? If so, why?—G.F.

DEAR G.F.: Tea was more valuable in the past when a great percentage of the poisoning cases were from strychnine. The amount of tannic acid found in strong tea could be sufficient to inactivate residual strychnine found in the stomach.

As is the case with many other home remedies, there's a rub to this one. By the time one might be aware that the severe convulsions could be caused by strychnine poisoning, there would hardly be time to stop and brew tea. Even if the tea were already made, it would be hard to get it into the victim's stomach'

Handling the poisoned dog would stimulate new spasms and the poor patient could find it difficult if not impossible to swallow the tea. If the veterinarian is but a few minutes away, don't try anything at home—get the poisoned pet to his office at once.

DEAR DR. MILLER: Our canary is most unusual, we feel. She not only is starting to lay eggs like mad, but she sings arias beautifully. Bridie sings all the time. At first my husband bought song records and whistled to her a lot. Was this a help?—Y.H.

DEAR Y.H.: Obviously, your husband helped. But even so, Bridie is a bird to remember. Hens don't (usually) have the stamina or appropriate hormonal help to handle eggs and opera simultaneously.

FLASHBACK ON CANADA

Mistake Not to Capture Nova Scotia

By BOB BOWMAN

Bowman

This is the anniversary of the battle of Lexington that opened the American Revolutionary War in 1775. British General Gage sent troops from Boston to seize American stores at Concord, 20 miles away.

They were stopped by colonials at Lexington and fighting began. The British then returned to Boston, were ambushed along the way by civilians, and lost 100 men killed and 200 wounded.

American losses were reported to be 39 killed and many more wounded.

The amazing thing, from a Canadian point of view, is that the Americans did not strike at Nova Scotia immediately.

In those days Nova Scotia included New Brunswick, and could have been captured easily. In fact Nova Scotia was regarded as the 14th American colony as two-thirds of its citizens had come from the New England states.

At the beginning of the war, there was a great deal of sympathy for the American cause. The Quebec Act had been resisted as strongly in Nova Scotia as it was in the American colonies.

Instead of capturing Nova Scotia, and being able to blockade the St. Lawrence, General Washington chose to attack Montreal and Quebec.

He lost 5,000 men in that campaign which ended when the Royal Navy sailed up the St. Lawrence the following spring. If Washington had sent a force of 2,500 men to capture Nova Scotia soon after the battle of Lexington, he probably would have been successful, and the course of history would have changed.

There is little doubt that Canada would now be part of the U.S.

Other events on April 19:

1750 — Acadians appeared at Halifax and asked to be allowed to leave Nova Scotia. Permission was denied.

1850—Bulmer-Clayton Treaty provided for a canal between the Atlantic and the Pacific.

1883 — Fire damaged Parliament Buildings at Quebec; 5,000 settlers had entered Northwest Territories.

1904 — Fire at Toronto caused $12 million damage.

1927 — New Brunswick adopted government control of liquor.

Hard-Line Kremlin Policy Adopted by Czech Leader

PRAGUE (AP) — Gustav Husak, Czechoslovakia's new Communist party chief, has declared political war on those who do not toe the Kremlin line but informants said today that Husak has made some concessions to get the support of liberals in government.

One source said Husak got all but five votes of the 190-member Central Committee, which ousted reformist party chief Alexander Dubcek in a secret ballot Thursday.

Informants cited two reasons for his strong showing:

—Husak assured Dubcek supporters he would not, for now, accept the Soviet invasion as justified.

—He assured reformers that political arrests will not be made for any "violations" committed prior to his assumption of power.

Despite these concessions, few doubted that Czechoslovakia is in for a more authoritarian brand of communism under the 56-year-old Slovak. The news agency CTK today circulated Husak's first major foreign policy address, made at the Thursday-Friday Central Committee session, in which he promised to "take up the glove" against rightists and anti-Soviet elements.

"We shall not back down," said Husak. ". . . We shall not call it child's play, but a struggle, and I am absolutely sure of political victory. Anti-Sovietism is incompatible with the ideology of this party. It is in sharp contradiction to the state policy of this state."

He repeated criticism that the Dubcek regime had allowed "anti-Communist" elements to plunge Czechoslovakia into a crisis.

"Where can it lead if our Central Committee and central organs do not intervene?" he asked. "To what aim? To civil war?

"Should we wait until somebody provokes the Soviet troops on our territory into taking some action in their defence?"

Husak said the March 28-29 anti-Soviet demonstrations in Prague included "acts that were precisely counter-revolutionary."

INCREASED PRESSURE

These demonstrations broke out after Czechoslovakia had beaten the Soviet Union in the world hockey championships in Stockholm and they precipitated the crisis that increased the pressure from Moscow and led to Dubcek's ouster.

Dubcek was demoted to president of the parliament, a largely ceremonial job since parliament merely rubber-stamps Communist party decisions.

Husak said his "organized political struggle" against anti-Communist forces within and outside the party would go "so far as allowed by law."

OFF-TRACK BETTING TEST CASE LAUNCHED

VANCOUVER (CP) — Herbert van Holtum plans to open British Columbia's first off-track betting shop today despite threats of prosecution by Attorney-General Leslie Peterson.

Mr. van Holtum will charge a minimum of 50 cents or 10 per cent of the bet placed and says he will be taking bets from his offices in both Vancouver and Burnaby as of today.

Shortly after noon, he was to board a plane for Victoria to deliver bets to Sandown Park race track.

"If the attorney-general wants to prosecute, then I'll leave it up to my lawyer—but he'll be wasting the taxpayers' money after three judges have ruled the business legal."

Mr. van Holtum referred to a recent Ontario ruling that legalized a similar operation in Welland.

Pay Offer Rejected

TORONTO (CP) — The Canadian vice-president of the International Association of Machinists and Aerospace Workers says early vote results show union members have overwhelmingly rejected the latest Air Canada wage settlement.

Although official results won't be known until about 7 EST tonight, Mike Rygus said advance indications show the 6,300 union members have turned down offer of a 23-per-cent wage increase in a three-year contract.

In an interview, Mr. Rygus said there is still a possibility of a pre-strike settlement, but even if Air Canada made a last-minute offer it would take two or three days for union workers to vote on it.

The workers are scheduled to leave their jobs at 11:59 p.m. EST Sunday and ground the publicly-owned airline.

Two Resignations Rock Arts School

By BOB MITCHELL

Two resignations rocked the University of Victoria's School of Fine Arts Friday.

But students and faculty held out hope a settlement could be reached to persuade one professor to remain at the university.

Peter Kahn, a highly esteemed professor of graphic arts, submitted his resignation to acting president Dean R. L. Wallace on Thursday.

He said the actions of two administrators in the School of Fine Arts left him no choice but to resign.

Dr. Gerald Hendrie, chairman of the music division, said he would resign two months earlier than scheduled due to "intolerable" pressure from the school's administration.

DRAFT PROTEST

Fine arts students met Friday to draft a letter to Dean Wallace expressing a vote of non-confidence in Dr. Alan Gowans, chairman of the division of art and art history.

The students were to meet again at 4 p.m. today to consider further action. A spokesman said their main concern is to make it possible

WARSHIPS BACK SPY MISSIONS

WASHINGTON (AP) — Potent U.S. naval forces, including the battleship New Jersey and possibly a pair of aircraft carriers, were reported steaming to new positions today to provide protection for American intelligence missions off North Korea.

The defence department announced redeployment of extensive forces Friday shortly after President Nixon ordered resumption of reconnaissance flights with the promise they will cease to be "fair game" for North Korean jets.

Flights off the North Korean coast were halted Tuesday after an EC-121 reconnaissance plane with 31 men aboard apparently was shot down. Only two bodies have been found in the Sea of Japan where the craft fell.

Redeployment of U.S. naval forces was viewed here as a protective step rather than a threat of retaliation against North Korea.

The semi-official Seoul newspaper Shinmoon reported that United Nations forces in South Korea were placed on a special alert today. It said the alert, known as Defcon II, is instituted only when a danger of hostilities exists. A spokesman for the UN command would not comment on the report.

STRATEGY NOT KNOWN

The New Jersey, which had been scheduled to arrive at Long Beach, Calif., today after duty off Vietnam, was ordered to return to the Western Pacific. The 16-inch guns on the world's only active battleship had been used to shell targets up to 20 miles inland in Vietnam.

While no announcement was made of the strategy to be used in providing protection for the reconnaissance planes, indications were that fighters would be stationed where they could come to the swift rescue of any threatened U.S. aircraft. Fighters would be kept in the air during intelligence missions, but not flying wing-to-wing with the reconnaissance aircraft.

Military men indicated Friday that carrier-based fighters probably would be used to help protect the slow-moving reconnaissance planes.

One carrier believed on the way to the Sea of Japan is the Kittyhawk which carries 90 warplanes. The Kittyhawk left Hong Kong with two destroyers earlier this week without any announcement of its destination.

There was no identification of a possible second carrier.

Walkout Set Sunday Night

By PETE LOUDON

The last flight by Air Canada to Vancouver for the duration of an impending strike is due to leave Victoria at 6:55 p.m. Sunday.

Failing a last-minute settlement of a dispute between the government-owned airline and 6,300 members of the International Association of Machinists and Air Space Workers, the airline will be grounded Sunday at 9 p.m. PST (midnight, Montreal time).

The last scheduled flight to Victoria from Vancouver prior to the strike deadline leaves the mainland airport at 4:10 p.m. Sunday. Last in-flight to Vancouver from the east arrives there at 9:10 p.m. Sunday.

The strike would idle about 33 Air Canada employees in this area, 18 of them members of the machinists' union.

Other than that, the effects on this community, were not expected to be crippling. Mail will be routed by ferry and except for mail from the east which will travel by alternate air lines, train or ground transport, it will be little delayed.

Persons travelling to the east are being booked by local travel bureaus on Canadian Pacific Air.

CPA announced at noon it is supplementing its three-a-day trans-continental flights in both directions. It still has space on most flights booked next week.

GREATER COST

Should the traffic become more than CPA can handle on transcontinental routes, passengers can be routed via bus to Seattle and east-west U.S. air services — at a greater cost in time and money.

Air Canada placed an embargo on air freight Friday at noon but will deliver items arriving since that time.

Air Canada announced Friday that passengers booked on charter flights are being protected.

Victoria District Sales Manager Stan Mooney said "We have a plan to get other operators to look after our charter flights."

One such group is the Union Club of B.C. with 100 members

SLIM HOPE IN BATTLE OF BULGE

Mirror, mirror on the wall, What makes last year's suit so small?

Calories of course.

The Times Monday begins a 12-part series by Winnifred C. Jardine on how to lose weight sensibly through a no-gimmick diet.

Mrs. Jardine, a home economics and journalism graduate, says there are no short-cuts to losing weight, but her 1,200 calorie a day menus should ensure a weight loss of one or two pounds a week.

PRISONER TAKES LONG WALK

OTTAWA (CP) — A prisoner from a federal penitentiary walked in the "Miles for Millions" march today to raise some $400 as the representative of fellow prisoners.

Employees of the RCMP, the national penitentiary service and the national parole board pledged more than $10 a mile to the prisoner from the Joyceville medium security institution at Kingston, Ont. The money goes to a variety of charities.

After walking the 40-mile route unguarded, the prisoner was to meet prison Warden John Norfield who will treat him to dinner at a restaurant before they return to Kingston.

Seems there's a few fine arts at th' University thet ain't taught in classes.

MARKET REVIEW

Vitality Continues to Swell In Face of Gloomy Outlook

By NICK FERRIS

Canadian Press Staff Writer

While moving erratically, Canadian stock markets showed a great deal of vitality in the face of discouraging investor atmosphere this week and continued to outpace their United States counterparts.

Trading held at a moderate pace throughout the week.

Although climbing Canadian and U.S. interest rates, tighter money and the tense world political situation have taken the shine off Canadian stock markets, investor optimism still shows through.

Industrials managed to edge up toward their historical high as they posted their fifth consecutive weekly advance.

After starting the week with fractional gains, the group posted small losses Wednesday and Thursday.

However, a strong showing Friday moved the group up.

The industrial group has almost recuperated from a four-week slump that began Feb. 17, the very day it touched its all-time high.

Merchandizers were strong this week with gains Tuesday and Friday erasing losses on other days.

The group has been declining steadily since the beginning of this year despite the buoyant outlook for retail sales.

Retail sales in January were up nine per cent over the corresponding 1968 period and are expected to hold that edge throughout 1969.

But competitive pricing has sliced profit margins, which in turn have depressed earnings.

However, the group's index is selling at 22 times the latest 12-month earnings compared with about 19 per cent at March 31, 1968.

At its peak in July, it was selling as high as 23 times earnings.

Canadian conglomerates continued to slide this week as U.S. conglomerates came under further pressure.

The U.S. Justice Department filed an anti-trust suit against Ling-Temco-Vought, one of the larger U.S. conglomerates, seeking to force the company to divest itself of its stock holdings of Jones and Laughlin Steel Corp., the sixth largest U.S. steel producer.

If successful, the result could adversely affect other U.S. conglomerates and also Canadian conglomerates.

Leslie Rowntree, Ontario financial and commercial affairs minister, said this week that problems raised by conglomerates in the U.S. and in other Canadian provinces will be studied by the Ontario Securities Commission.

On the Canadian and Montreal exchanges, the composite index was up 1.45 to 188.55. Combined volume was 7,113,000 shares compared with 5,866,000 last week. Declines outnumbered advances 177 to 168.

Spy Plane Incident Drops Wall Street

By PHILIP GREER

NEW YORK (WP) — The loss of a U.S. spy plane off the coast of North Korea sent the stock market lower this week and sparked virtually the only burst of activity in otherwise lack-lustre trading.

Prices dropped sharply in the first reaction Wednesday morning, but steadied after that — brokers said it was in reaction to the Nixon administration's low-key response — and edged higher through the next two days.

By the end of the week, that flurry just about accounted for the week's loss in the major market indicators.

The Dow Jones industrial average, for one, fell 8.45 points in that session and finished the week with a loss of 8.64 points at 924.82.

Standard and Poor's 500-stock composite was off to 101.24 and the New York Stock Exchange index gave up .26 point to 56.56.

Volume for the week slipped to 48.5 million shares from the 51.94 million turned over a week earlier.

The over-all box score showed 644 issues up and 918 down, compared with 802 winners and 788 losers in the previous week. There were 81 new 1969 highs, off from 94, and 284 new lows, down from 356.

INVESTMENT SCHEME FOR YOUTH SUGGESTED

VANCOUVER (CP) — Arthur Laing minister of public works, said Friday he is "asking questions" about a scheme under which parents could buy securities for their children and hold them for up to 30 years with the interest being tax-free.

"What the plan comes down to is to encourage bringing our securities back to Canada from abroad," he told the annual convention of the B.C. women's Liberal Association.

"And I don't mind admitting . . . I want to foreclose socialism in this country," he said. "This is the Liberal way of doing it."

Adding that it was "just an idea," he said the plan would encourage Canadians to become less hesitant to invest in Canada and allow young people to "own a chunk of their country."

CIL Places Stress On Specialization

MONTREAL (CP) —Leonard Hynes, president of Canadian Industries Ltd., said Friday his company is placing new emphasis on specialization rather than on all-round expansion.

Addressing the company's annual meeting, he said:

"The combination of scale technology—the larger the plant the lower the per-unit cost—and internationalism in the chemical industry makes it difficult to undertake some businesses in the relatively small and unprotected Canadian market.

"On the other hand, there is an increasing number of areas where we can apply our research and other innovative abilities to new products or services.

"New ventures for CIL are likely to be close to the ultimate consumer and form a growing point for the future, both in Canada and in other markets."

New explosives mix trucks provide the mining industry with small mobile explosive plants, and new on-site bleach plants are tailored to the needs of the pulp and paper industry.

Hynes said the company invested about $600,000 in pollution control since 1967 and expects to spend about $1,000,000 in the next few years.

Mine Warns Workers

SUMMERLAND (CP) — Production workers at the Brenda Mines site near this south Okanagan community were informed Friday they face disciplinary action if they refuse to cross plumbers' picket lines.

Gordon Montgomery, mine manager, said he told the 65 workers their refusal to cross the picket line set up by the plumbers, who are involved in a dispute with the Mechanical Industrial Relations Association, was in violation of their agreement with the company.

About 2,800 plumbers across B.C. are involved in the dispute, which centres around wage demands, although so far only about 200 plumbers' union members have gone on strike.

The plumbers earlier rejected a proposed $1.32-cent hourly increase on their base rate of $4.10 in a one-year contract.

Propane Prospects Said Glowing

CALGARY (CP) — Opportunities to develop new markets for propane will continue to appear for the next 10 years at a faster rate than the markets are lost to alternative energy sources, the president of the Propane Gas Association of Canada said Friday.

T. J. Thompson of Regina said the fuel is more portable than most other hydrocarbon fuels and can be taken almost anywhere.

He told the association's annual convention that mobile housing on remote construction sites offers a good market and in some instances workers occupying such housing are insisting on propane heat rather than fuel oil.

But, he said, the best potential market is among customers already served.

GAINERS LIMITED APPOINTMENT

. . . RESIGNATIONS

for Professor Kahn to continue to teach at Uvic.

"He is to the graphic art field what Carlo Ponti is to the film," was how one student summed it up.

Kahn came to Uvic last fall after teaching 11 years at Cornell University. He is considered one of the foremost graphic art experts in North America.

Dr. Hendrie said Friday he had been pressured by the Fine Arts administration to run a "show-window" division, with concerts and recitals taking precedent over the teaching of music.

Prior to taking the post of head of the music division in the fall of 1967 he taught for 12 years at Cambridge and Manchester.

"I was enticed out here by fine stories about building up a strong academic department.

A BY-PRODUCT

"It has always been my view that concerts are a by-product of a strong department — but when concerts take precedent over teaching it is to the detriment of the students.

Dr. Hendrie submitted his resignation earlier in the session and intended to leave Uvic at the end of June. He is now awaiting confirmation of a new post with a university in England.

Donald Harvey, associate professor of painting and design, said Professor Kahn's decision to resign came as a result of a "demoralizing" situation in the School of Fine Arts, but expressed hope some compromise could be reached in the conflict.

"I think that the situation where you have two very fine men leaving the university is an indication something is wrong."

Harvey said cause of the conflict in the art and art history division centred around crucial delays, including: acquisition of more space for students to work in; hiring of new faculty members, and selection of a chairman for the new studio and visual arts division.

Studio courses in which students paint, draw, and sculpt were co-ordinated by Professor Harvey, with the understanding a new chairman for studio arts would be selected this year.

DECISION NEXT WEEK

John Dobereiner, professor of painting and drawing, said the faculty had accordingly interviewed three candidates on a list of four, and would make a decision on them next week.

However, Dobereiner said Dr. Gowans had taken an active role in the search for a chairman by submitting two names of his own to the faculty.

He said Dr. Gowans and School of Fine Arts chairman Garvie had displayed a lack of trust in decisions of the faculty members.

Garvie made a special trip to England to interview one candidate the faculty felt was not worth bringing to Victoria for an interview.

"The dean of a faculty or school is supposed to rely on the knowledge of faculty members who have gained their experience in the field.

"But Garvie's been taking advice from the people who don't know."

Students are concerned about the direction the studio and visual arts division will take under Gowans' guidance.

Glen Howarth, a fourth-year student, said one of the candidates brought in by Gowans at department expense was a man "who made plastic bottles."

Professor Kahn said the present administration of the school and the art and art history division is "not interested in the visual arts of this century."

He said the students he had worked with are "very talented" and cited the show of their work now on display at the Greater Victoria Art Gallery.

He said the actions of Gowans and Garvie in the selection of a chairman were contrary to procedures outlined in the university's tenure document.

LACK OF ACTION

He described his salary as "more than adequate," but said he was disappointed with inaction over a lack of space and equipment.

"I was promised a very large new space—but what I got was part of a corridor.

"If you look at the calendar, then at the actual program, it looks like a lot of false promises."

Professor Garvie, contacted late Friday, said he knew nothing about Dr. Hendrie's decision to resign immediately, and could think of no reason why the music chairman would want to leave now.

He also said he did not know why Kahn was resigning because he had not had a chance to read his letter of resignation, and described students who had seen him Friday about the conflict as "misled."

Dr. Gowans did not think the situation was serious, but said he knew nothing of developments among students and faculty.

Dean Robert Wallace, acting president of the university, was not in Victoria, and could not be reached for comment.

Cancellation Of Insurance Brings Blast

Insurance companies are cancelling accidental death policies on business associates of William Osland, a Victoria businessman whose body was found Feb. 25 in the Inner Harbor.

Lawyer David Hummel, a partner with the slain Osland in Diversified Management and Development Co., received notice Friday that two companies have cancelled policies on him worth $200,000.

Hummel, calling the action "irresponsible," said he understands insurance policies on others involved in the company, including an employee, are going to be cancelled also.

The policies were cancelled by Sun Alliance and London Insurance companies. One was for $50,000, the other for $150,000.

DECRIES ACTION

Hummel said today he received no explanation for the cancellations.

Hummel said he plans to take the matter to both provincial and federal cabinets in an effort to get the policies returned.

Viet Demonstrators Irk U.S. Envoy on Visit Here

The United States ambassador to Canada left Victoria this morning in a gentle rain after a day of harassment.

In full flight from a band of anti-Vietnam war demonstrators, Francis Linder ducked into the labyrinth of legislative offices in the Douglas Building Friday afternoon.

The demonstrators had dogged his tracks from the moment he stepped out of Premier Bennett's office.

He lost them during the Douglas Building detour.

But he seems to have gotten lost himself.

Starting in Agriculture Minister Cyril Shelford's empty office, Linder snuck through an inter-connecting door into another office.

Then into another. And another.

CLERKS FRANTIC

A fluster of frantic clerks hustled stuffed filing cabinets out of passages and away from unused doors to clear the route for their prestigious, if unexpected visitor.

From office to office, through seven in all, Linder leaped until finally he found an exit, dashed from the building into a waiting car and sped away.

The demonstrators, unable to match the pace, were standing quietly in the street as Linder emerged from the building.

LINDER
. . . hectic tour

As the car pulled away, the demonstrators waved a quiet goodbye.

There were some 30 protesters, many of them middle-aged and older.

MISSED ARRIVAL

They missed Linder's arrival to meet the premier—he went in a side door while they waited on the legislative building's front steps.

Some of them went inside with their "Hands Off Vietnam and Canada" and "The Only Defence Is Peace—Trudeau" posters to wait in silence during Linder's visit with the premier.

When he emerged, the chase was on.

ENVOY IRKED

The ambassador was apparently irritated at the sight of some of his followers carrying a United States flag.

Crossing Government Street, he entered the Douglas Building and pulled the entrance door shut behind him, holding it to keep the group from getting in.

Linder, accompanied by U.S. Consul-General Milton Rewinkel of Vancouver, fled down a long hallway to take refuge in the empty minister's office.

The group waited in the corridor amid speculation their quarry might try to leave by a window. One woman began to sing "O Canada."

As she was singing, Deputy Works Minister Arnold Webb and Deputy Provincial Secretary L. J. Wallace arrived and went into the office where Linder was waiting.

Some of the demonstrators took the flag outside and set fire to it after dousing it with lighter fluid.

Wallace, who had come out and was waiting with a car, the doors open and engine running, closed the doors and drove off.

The ambassador, the consul-general and Webb finally emerged after their inter-office episode and walked around to the rear of the building where Wallace and the car were now parked.

The demonstrators, following closely, stopped as Linder got in the car and waved as he departed.

slated to fly via Air Canada May 1 to England.

"I don't think it will be hard to find another charter plane for the Union Club this early in the year," he said.

The strike would ground 108 planes across Canada. Ten will be deactivated at the Richmond maintenance base and "there will be some mothballing procedures," an Air Canada spokesman said at Vancouver.

It was also announced that in anticipation of a strike no further reservations are being accepted for flights between April 20 and 28 and only stand-by tickets are being sold for the period April 28 to May 4.

BEFORE DEADLINE

No tickets will be sold for flights Sunday except where the passenger can complete his journey before the strike deadline. This has resulted in cancellation of 13 flights even without the strike being effective.

The expected daily loss in gross revenue to the air line is $1.2 million if the strike goes ahead. Air Canada handles 18,000 passengers each day across the nation and abroad.

In the Vancouver area the strike involves 325 members of the machinists' union but would also mean immediate layoff of 120 pursers and stewardesses, 114 pilots, 14 air dispatchers and nine navigators.

PASSENGER AGENTS

Some 200 passenger agents are expected to get 48 hours notice of layoff Sunday and 218 management and non-union clerical staff will be kept on salary for two weeks before going on a day-to-day basis.

Talks between both sides in the contract dispute broke down Tuesday and on Thursday the union stated a strike was inevitable.

Mother Has Fifth Baby At Home

PORT ANGELES (UPI) — Mrs. Harry Reynolds, 31, was up and about feeling "just fine" today just two days after she delivered her fifth child at home all alone.

"I just got tired of seeing hospital rates go up every time you turn around," she said.

Mrs. Reynolds, whose fourth child came at a hospital-doctor cost of $352, said she had read books on baby care.

"There were instructions on what to do in case you had your baby at home," she said. "It's really not that hard. I had no trouble at all."

Her husband, a logger, was at work when the event occurred. Her four other children were watching television.

The "result" was a boy weighing more than nine pounds.

WEATHER SYNOPSIS

Conditions were unsettled along the coast overnight as showers at times mixed with snow and the occasional thundershowers were reported. The weather disturbance which brought rain to the coast Friday and overnight has moved inland accompanied by showers. Behind this system showers will predominate today especially along the coast but improving conditions are expected in all regions for Sunday.

The Weather and You

By CARL RIBLET JR.

The microbe hunters discovered that you are less likely to pick up an infectious bug if you spend more time in a city park than in a city's heavily frequented streets. The reason, of course, is believed to be related to the weather.

Germs are thought to attach themselves outdoors to dust particles. When they are exposed to a wind, such as might be usual in a city street, germs ride the winds up and down the more congested areas. In a park, there may probably be less wind and fewer people on the average.

A rainy day washes about half of the bugs right out of the air. Weather that kills insects is bad for germs because many disease-causing micro-organisms are carried by insects.

MARKET REVIEW

Vitality Continues to Swell In Face of Gloomy Outlook

By NICK FERRIS

Canadian Press Staff Writer

While moving erratically, Canadian stock markets showed a great deal of vitality in the face of discouraging investor atmosphere this week and continued to outpace their United States counterparts.

Trading held at a moderate pace throughout the week.

Although climbing Canadian and U.S. interest rates, tighter money and the tense world political situation have taken the shine off Canadian stock markets, investor optimism still shows through.

Industrials managed to edge up toward their historical high as they posted their fifth consecutive weekly advance.

After starting the week with fractional gains, the group posted small losses Wednesday and Thursday.

However, a strong showing Friday moved the group up.

The industrial group has almost recuperated from a four-week slump that began Feb. 17, the very day it touched its all-time high.

Merchandizers were strong this week with gains Tuesday and Friday erasing losses on other days.

The group has been declining steadily since the beginning of this year despite the buoyant outlook for retail sales.

Retail sales in January were up nine per cent over the corresponding 1968 period and are expected to hold that edge throughout 1969.

But competitive pricing has sliced profit margins, which in turn have depressed earnings.

However, the group's index is selling at 22 times the latest 12-month earnings compared with about 19 per cent at March 31, 1968.

At its peak in July, it was selling as high as 23 times earnings.

Canadian conglomerates continued to slide this week as U.S. conglomerates came under further pressure.

The U.S. Justice Department filed an anti-trust suit against Ling-Temco-Vought, one of the larger U.S. conglomerates, seeking to force the company to divest itself of its stock holdings of Jones and Laughlin Steel Corp., the sixth largest U.S. steel producer.

If successful, the result could adversely affect other U.S. conglomerates and also Canadian conglomerates.

Leslie Rowntree, Ontario financial and commercial affairs minister, said this week that problems raised by conglomerates in the U.S. and in other Canadian provinces will be studied by the Ontario Securities Commission.

On the Canadian and Montreal exchanges, the composite index was up 1.45 to 188.55. Combined volume was 7,113,000 shares compared with 5,866,000 last week. Declines outnumbered advances 177 to 168.

Spy Plane Incident Drops Wall Street

By PHILIP GREER

NEW YORK (WP) — The loss of a U.S. spy plane off the coast of North Korea sent the stock market lower this week and sparked virtually the only burst of activity in otherwise lacklustre trading.

Prices dropped sharply in the first reaction Wednesday morning, but steadied after that — brokers said it was in reaction to the Nixon administration's low-key response — and edged higher through the next two days.

By the end of the week, that flurry just about accounted for the week's loss in the major market indicators.

The Dow Jones industrial average, for one, fell 8.45 points in that session and finished the week with a loss of 8.64 points at 924.82.

Standard and Poor's 500-stock composite was off to 101.24 and the New York Stock Exchange index gave up .26 point to 56.56.

Volume for the week slipped to 48.5 million shares from the 51.94 million turned over a week earlier.

The over-all box score showed 644 issues up and 918 down, compared with 802 winners and 788 losers in the previous week. There were 81 new 1969 highs, off from 94, and 284 new lows, down from 356.

INVESTMENT SCHEME FOR YOUTH SUGGESTED

VANCOUVER (CP) — Arthur Laing minister of public works, said Friday he is "asking questions" about a scheme under which parents could buy securities for their children and hold them for up to 30 years with the interest being tax-free.

"What the plan comes down to is to encourage bringing our securities back to Canada from abroad," he told the annual convention of the B.C. women's Liberal Association.

"And I don't mind admitting ... I want to foreclose socialism in this country," he said. "This is the Liberal way of doing it."

Adding that it was "just an idea," he said the plan would encourage Canadians to become less hesitant to invest in Canada and allow young people to "own a chunk of their country."

CIL Places Stress On Specialization

MONTREAL (CP) —Leonard Hynes, president of Canadian Industries Ltd., said Friday his company is placing new emphasis on specialization rather than on all-round expansion.

Addressing the company's annual meeting, he said:

"The combination of scale technology—the larger the plant the lower the per-unit cost—and internationalism in the chemical industry makes it difficult to undertake some businesses in the relatively small and unprotected Canadian market.

"On the other hand, there is an increasing number of areas where we can apply our research and other innovative abilities to new products or services.

"New ventures for CIL are likely to be close to the ultimate consumer and form a growing point for the future, both in Canada and in other markets."

New explosives mix trucks provide the mining industry with small mobile explosive plants, and new on-site bleach plants are tailored to the needs of the pulp and paper industry.

Hynes said the company invested about $600,000 in pollution control since 1967 and expects to spend about $1,000,000 in the next few years.

Mine Warns Workers

SUMMERLAND (CP) — Production workers at the Brenda Mines site near this south Okanagan community were informed Friday they face disciplinary action if they refuse to cross plumbers' picket lines.

Gordon Montgomery, mine manager, said he told the 65 workers their refusal to cross the picket line set up by the plumbers, who are involved in a dispute with the Mechanical Industrial Relations Association, was in violation of their agreement with the company.

About 2,800 plumbers across B.C. are involved in the dispute, which centres around wage demands, although so far only about 200 plumbers' union members have gone on strike.

The plumbers earlier rejected a proposed $1.32-cent hourly increase on their base rate of $4.10 in a one-year contract.

Propane Prospects Said Glowing

CALGARY (CP) — Opportunities to develop new markets for propane will continue to appear for the next 10 years at a faster rate than the markets are lost to alternative energy sources, the president of the Propane Gas Association of Canada said Friday.

T. J. Thompson of Regina said the fuel is more portable than most other hydrocarbon fuels and can be taken almost anywhere.

He told the association's annual convention that mobile housing on remote construction sites offers a good market and in some instances workers occupying such housing are insisting on propane heat rather than fuel oil.

But, he said, the best potential market is among customers already served.

VICTORIA, B.C., SATURDAY, APRIL 19, 1969 —PAGE 23

Arthur Mayse

As a child exposed to one of the grimmer church disciplines, I used to envy the Anglicans their God. He appeared to be a much more reasonable diety than the stern Jehovah our congregations preferred, and he placed fewer restrictions on his worshippers.

Even though I have met the occasional Anglican tiger who hated happiness equally with sin, this impression has lingered. It was bolstered this week by the installation of the Most Rev. John Ogle Anderson as Anglican Bishop of British Columbia.

As an occasional churchgoer, it gives me a comfortable feeling to know that this man is at the helm. "Christ didn't tell us to be miserable," Bishop Anderson informed a Times interviewer. "He told us to be happy and to love one another.

"Condemning your neighbor because he plays poker on Sunday is no part of Christ's gospel."

Although poker has brought me no joy on the Sabbath or any other day, those are wise and discerning words, and they do the speaker credit.

They will not win universal acceptance; in fact you can be sure that the newcomer has already been marked down in some quarters as a dangerous man.

It is equally certain that a pronouncement of this sort from a spiritual leader firmly rooted in his church's tradition will appeal to men of goodwill.

I don't mean his use of Sunday poker as an illustration of a theme, but his claim that religion and joy shouldn't be strangers.

Too often, they are. That, I suppose, is one reason why so many of us are casual about church, even though we may do our best to abide by Christ's tenets in our own lives.

What Bishop Anderson's qualities as a preacher may be, I've yet to learn.

It's plain, however, that he has courage, otherwise I doubt that he'd deal so bluntly with uncomfortable realities.

At a time when the voice of the youth-hater echoes loud in the land, Bishop Anderson has the temerity to come out with something like this:

"They (young people) are challenging our concepts and particularly our concept of an economy geared to war. If we don't answer them we shall lose them, and our Christianity will be condemned by history as a failure."

That's strong talk, and not precisely the sort I have come to expect from senior churchmen in these troubled years.

More often than not, the speaker-out is a layman—a Dr. Spock who backed one of youth's concepts with his freedom, or a mild Harvard professor of biology whose off-the-cuff speech blueprinted youth's disenchantment.

It's no secret either, that many adults share that malaise. Some of us—and I'm speaking here of those who do not regularly attend church services—might be impelled to do so if we felt that the church was meeting the challenge of our times.

We are governed today to a fare-ye-well.

At the same time, we suffer from a curious lack of moral leadership, and this we cannot expect from Ottawa or any provincial capital.

I'm not talking merely about sex morals here, which are forever being mauled around, but the larger morality by which a life or a society can be steered.

The Sermon on the Mount is still available to any who will read, but being human, we need human interpretation set in the context of our times.

There are pastors, some of them in this city, who strive in that direction. But most of the services I've observed were set-pieces that had survived war and social upheaval virtually unchanged. They offered scant challenge to the young or anybody else.

Bishop Anderson has stated this problem of lack of communication, and its inevitable consequences, very well. I hope that in his reasonable Anglican way he can come up with some of the essential answers.

INFLATION: Harsh Reality of Everyday Life

★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★

30 People Make Their Living From a Single Beef Carcass

By John Driscoll

Inflation is T-bone steak at $1.75 a pound and about to take another leap upward in price.

Inflation is when you wonder at the end of the month where all the money went.

And, while inflation to the politicians is an election issue, to the general public it is a harsh reality of everyday living.

A comparison of food prices advertised in the Times of April, 1966, with food prices advertised in March and April this year demonstrates how much of a problem exists.

The actual prices can be misleading since most items are on sale and much lower than they would ordinarily be.

Some items such as coffee, juices, fish, and certain cuts of meat have been stable over the past three years and while the price of bread has risen the sale price has gone down.

The more expensive cuts of meat are seldom on sale and a comparison is difficult to obtain.

But the price of steaks is definitely going up — again.

Victoria meat market and shopping centre managers say the Americans are to blame.

"American buyers are coming in strong to buy up Canadian beef," said Barry Fisher, manager of Glenwood Meats.

"The American buyer with 7½ per cent more value for his money can afford to pay more. With no tarrif on beef Canadian buyers are in an awkward situation.

"The price of meat will likely go up again soon," predicted Fisher.

"By the end of May we'll see the highest market ever for beef," he added.

The manager of a chain store agreed with Fisher's assessment. "The high influx of U.S. buyers is pushing the price of Canadian beef up," he said.

Karl Smith, manager of Karl's Meat Market does not feel Americans are responsible for the skyrocketting price of beef.

"It's a matter of supply and demand," he said.

"The beef producers are more organized and they are taking advantage of the situation by controlling the flow, never flooding the market."

Smith doesn't blame the producers however. "Everybody's taking advantage of the situation where they can."

"Everybody's looking for more money."

Food retailers agree that labor costs, handling costs, freight costs, and wrapping costs have all spiralled.

"Take a carcass of beef," said Smith. "from the time it leaves the farm to the time it gets to my shop there are 25 to 30 people making their living from it."

Fisher explained that the seasons even have something to do with the price of meat.

"During the winter people eat stews or roasts," he said. "Come spring everybody wants to barbecue and they want steaks."

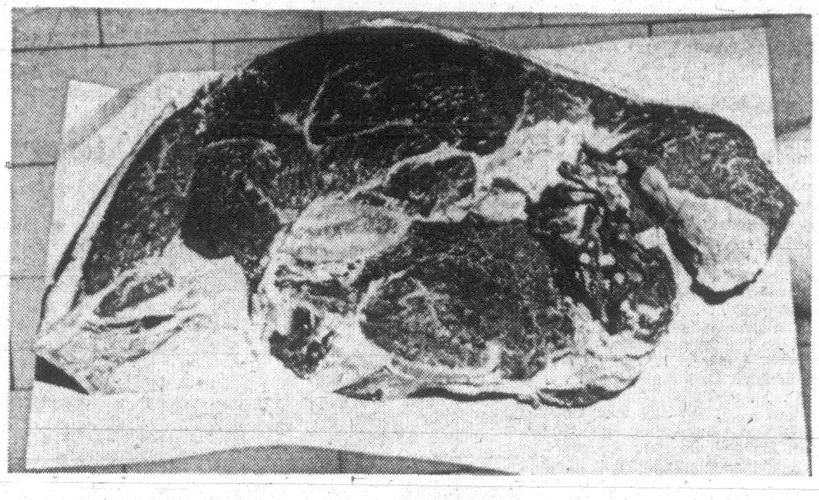
Meat market operators are quick to point out that the profit margin in the beef industry is not huge.

"The producers are making a good return now but they've seen lean years," said Fisher. "The wholesalers are working on a net profit of a half of one per cent."

Recent increases in the price of vegetables and fruit are also blamed on the United States market.

"We get a lot of produce from California and the weather there has been bad," explained the chain store manager who asked to remain unidentified.



FOR GOURMETS ONLY will soon be the tag on sirloin steaks as it, like the T-bones, have gone beyond the price range of Mr. and Mrs. Average Citizen. T-bones are now selling in the $1.75-a-pound range and meat market managers say another price boost looms.

"In addition since California outlawed the use of cheap Mexican labor, labor costs have risen."

Food retailers feel they have been unjustly criticized for price increases.

"People think nothing of a bottle of whiskey going up a dollar or a car going up $1,000 but they are very disturbed by rising food costs," said Fisher.

"They are more conscious of food prices since it is a commodity they deal in week after week. But the cost of living is rising.

Certainly it is not food alone that forces constant revisions to household budgets.

Rents have increased alarmingly in the face of a housing shortage.

With more leisure time the cost of entertainment is rising.

The big spenders in our economy, the governments, are spending more each year and thus taxes increase steadily.

When the average citizen finds himself borrowing to meet obligations he finds the cost of money has increased.

Economists state that ideally prices for goods and services should not rise more than 2 per cent per year.

Yet in 1967 and again in 1968 consumer prices rose an average of more than 4 per cent.

Louis Rasminsky, governor of the Bank of Canada, said recently that the consumer price index is continuing its 4 per cent annual rise "with no signs of a slowdown."

The average shopper may not understand the index but he knows of inflation by the deflation of his wallet.

When will prices level off?

Food retailers can see no levelling off in the near future in their business or in any other.

"It's like a snowball rolling down a hill," said Smith.

"Smith said the only way that prices could level off is if the government put a freeze on goods. "But I don't see a hope in hell of that happening," he added.

Fisher predicted that meat packers as a whole will level off their market by buying up feed lot businesses and introducing their own price controls.

"That will not mean prices will get lower," he said. "The market will be kept very firm."

The politicians toot out cliches about galloping inflation and the need to sanforize the shrinking dollar at election time.

But as the balloon of inflation continues to rise all the politicians appear to be able to do is to generate hot air.

The people who buy the goods and services that are skyrocketting in cost are asking "what time does the balloon come down?"

The answer according to people in the retail food business: "not in the foreseeable future."

'Mrs. Consumer Thinks B.C.'

It's enough to make an Okanagan apple producer turn green.

Apple juice made from Nova Scotia apples is being sold in Victoria grocery stores for less than apple juice made from British Columbia apples.

At one supermarket Friday a 48-ounce can of Nova Scotia-produced apple juice was selling for 47 cents.

Beside it, a 48-ounce can of B.C.-produced apple juice was marked at 55 cents.

"Eastern producers are trying to break into this market," explained a manager for a wholesale grocer firm.

The manager said apple juice from the east is priced at 40 per cent less than that from B.C. producers.

"It's not unusual with products from the east," he said. "They're subsidizing the cost."

When asking how the apple juice from the east is moving he replied "Mrs. Consumer thinks B.C. products are the best.

"We sell 2,000 cases of B.C. juice in the same time as we move 100 cases of this stuff from the east."

Saanich Looks At Junk Cars

Saanich council intends to take steps to control the problem of junk cars on open property in residential areas.

A zoning bylaw regulating the keeping of unlicensed vehicles, trailers and parts of vehicles will be presented to a public hearing in the council chamber of the municipal hall Monday, April 28, at 7:30 p.m.

A copy of the bylaw may be seen at the municipal hall during business hours. Purpose of the public hearing is to give citizens the opportunity of being heard by council.

The bylaw, if approved by council, would restrict residents to not more than one unlicensed vehicle on one parcel of property in the open.

A Saanich official said if additional unlicensed vehicles are kept in carports or basements, "that's fine."

He said junked cars being kept on private property and in the open are becoming a serious problem, prompting "quite a few" complaints.

The reason Saanich started considering a bylaw was because of the complaints and because of the anticipated rejections of cars at the testing station. Because it costs $10 to dispose of a junk car, they tend to accumulate.

860-Foot Tanker Here For Paint-Up

The second-largest ship ever to squeeze into the Esquimalt Graving Dock will arrive here Sunday for painting and inspection by Yarrows Ltd.

The 860-foot Western Hunter, a 65,000-ton United States oil tanker, will arrive from San Francisco on a special trip to be hauled from the water for the first time since she was launched in Japan two years ago.

A Yarrows Ltd. spokesman said today the only larger ship ever to use the graving dock was the Cunard liner Queen Elizabeth while serving as a troop carrier during the Second World War.

Esquimalt Seeking Ways To Have Branch Library

Esquimalt Mayor Ray Bryant will meet Greater Victoria Library Board officials next week in hopes of finding a way to finance a proposed branch library for the municipality.

"If Esquimalt is to have a branch library some other way of shuffling library board budget cuts must be found," he said.

Former chairman of the Greater Victoria Library Board, Ald. Alan Newberry said Thursday it is mathematically impossible for the board to pay for the Esquimalt library after Saanich council's decision to cut its per capita library tax from $4.42 to $4.

(Newberry was the only member of council to vote against the cut).

SIMILAR REDUCTION

Victoria city finance committee also recommended a similar reduction.

Asked whether Esquimalt might pull out of the library board next year if it doesn't get a branch, Mayor Bryant said: "If it can't be done (construction of a branch in Esquimalt) we'd have to take a serious look at all programs we participate in."

Esquimalt's library costs have risen more drastically than any other municipality's in the last three years. This year Esquimalt's predicted share is $55,500.

The final decision on whether Esquimalt gets a branch is up to the library board, the mayor said.

Three to Attend Boys' Club Meet In San Francisco

Three members of the Boys' Club of Victoria will represent Canada at the National Keystone Conference in San Francisco, April 25 to 28.

Ed Dopierala, 18, president of the Adanac Keystone Club, will present the opening invocation at the conference.

Other Victoria delegates are Bruce Goldsmith, 17, and Tony Onyzkiewicz, 17.

More than 600 delegates representing 240 Boys' Clubs across the United States will attend the conference. Topics to be discussed include drugs and their abuse, lowering the voting age, education, and community service.

Six Months For Robbery

A 24-year-old man was sentenced Friday to six months in jail for the March 5 robbery of a city service station.

Don C. G. Patersen, 845 Princess, had pleaded not guilty.

During his trial the attendant testified Patersen took about $46 from Quadra Mohawk about 5 a.m. He said the accused told him he had a gun.

Defence counsel Chris Randall said it was an unusual case and asked for a suspended sentence. Patersen has no record.

Magistrate William Ostler noted there was no aspect of terror or brutality in the case but said that after careful consideration he didn't think probation was appropriate.

He said Patersen led an aimless and goal-less life.

Thumbs-Down Ruling Seen In Priory Bid for 150 Beds

By PETE LOUDON

Nobody is saying anything officially, but hopes are dim for addition of 150 beds to St. Mary's Priory, the extended care hospital at Colwood.

Decision on the hospital's request to the Greater Victoria and Gulf Islands Regional Hospital District will be made known within two weeks.

A thumbs-down decision is likely for several reasons, according to persons close to the hospital district—people who begin by saying, "Don't quote me, but . . ."

First and foremost is the feeling among members of the hospital district's advisory committee that an acute-care hospital catering mainly to elderly persons should be built closer to where most of the elderly live—Victoria, Oak Bay and Saanich.

CLOSE TO HOSPITALS

They say it should also be close to acute-care hospitals to facilitate easy transfer between the institutions.

Municipal politics also affects the case for the Priory, according to other sources. They say Victoria and Saanich representatives each favor creation of new acute-care facilities in their jurisdictions. And they don't want to put municipal money into unorganized territory.

Colwood, Metchosin, Langford representatives to the board, newly-elected (voting takes place today) will be feeling their way and will have less experience in committee infighting, for months to come.

LACK OF SEWERS

Another obstacle facing the Priory in any expansion plans is the lack of sewers in the Priory area.

Health officials say one hospital bed represents a waste problem of 100 gallons per day.

The Priory is in an area where septic tank use proved to be a serious problem in recent years when a nearby shopping plaza was opened.

Although a possibility exists that an institution in Colwood could be tapped into the existing sewer system of the department of national defence, this would be more expensive than building on sewered property.

Health Minister Ralph Loffmark, who must approve any new hospital plans, has regulated against major developments in unsewered areas. (One source says, however, this rule is being broken in other parts of B.C. And the B.C. Pollution Control Board often differs with health department rulings and "they'll permit anything.")

Another factor which may have a bearing in the decision for location of new acute-care beds is the fact that Greater Victoria doctors would prefer to have the shortest possible distances to travel between acute and extended-care hospitals. The Priory is seven or eight miles from either Royal Jubilee or St. Joseph's hospitals.

District voters approved a plan last year for construction of 600 new acute-care beds. To date approval has been given to 150 at Gorge Road Hospital, 15 on Salt Spring Island and 75 at a still-undisclosed site on the Saanich Peninsula north of Elk Lake.

MAYOR STEPHEN
. . . decision soon

Regional hospital district board chairman, Victoria Mayor Hugh Stephen, has stated that decision on location of the 350 beds remaining to be allocated will be reached before the end of this month.

Meantime, St. Mary's Priory administrator George Harrison said Friday a decision against that hospital would disappoint many rural residents.

COSTS HIGHER

"Just because some medical authorities feel that extended-care beds should be downtown, right next to acute-care beds, doesn't mean that this is necessarily true."

He said the Agnew-Peckham hospital survey supported the Priory's proposal for 150 to 200 additional beds. He said the Priory could move swiftly and go to tender within six months of a favorable decision.

Harrison said sewerage would not be an insurmountable problem if a tie-in could be made to the DND lines but he admitted costs would be higher than if the hospital were located on existing municipal sewers.

But he is not optimistic that the Priory will be given a go-ahead to expand.

Ask The Times

Q. Someone bet me that you wouldn't answer the question, "What was Prime Minister Trudeau's occupation from 1939 to 1945?". Was he a member of the Canadian Armed Forces?

A. Prime Minister Trudeau was a student during the years mentioned. He received his BA from Jean de Brebeuf College in Montreal in 1940, to 1943, and political science at Harvard University from 1944 to 1945. While he was at the University of Montreal he enrolled in the Canadian Officers' Training Corps and served a summer training session with the Fusiliers de Mont-Royal.

Early Rain Deters Voters From Polls

Pouring rain in the first few hours today kept voters away from the polls in Capital Regional District directors elections in Langford, Colwood and Metchosin.

Each area is entitled to one seat on the board, which is responsible for a number of area-wide affairs, primarily implementation of a new system of main-line sewers and marine outfalls.

Polls are open until 8 p.m. Polling stations are at Colwood and Sangster elementary schools for Colwood voters; at Langford, Millstream, Glen Lake and Happy Valley elementary schools for Langford; and Metchosin elementary school for Metchosin.

DIRECTORS RESIGNED

The previous directors resigned following the overwhelming vote against forming a single municipality in the present unincorporated area west of Victoria.

Colwood has four candidates — civil engineer James Buchanan, electrical contractor Richard Emery, housewife Agnes Smith and realtor Herman Williams.

Langford has three candidates — civil servant Charles Cue, civil servant Earl Pallister and a car parts proprietor, William Temple.

Metchosin also has three candidates — machinist Kenneth Rainey, building contractor Donald Stansall and civil servant John Tipton.

Returning officer Mrs. Mary Colclough said she has no idea how many persons are eligible to vote because she is using a Sooke School Board voting list which covers the area from Colwood to Port Renfrew.

Only people whose names appeared on the school list can vote. There is not voting by affadavit.
